24-Month Draft Limit Is Rejected By Senate

30-Month Plan Due For Passage Today; Isolationists Help Beat Burton Measure

By Hedley Donovan
Post Staff Writer

The Senate yesterday rejected by a 51-20 vote the Burton amendment to limit service of selectees, National Guardsmen and Reserves to 24 months and prepared to approve a 30-month limit today.

Nearly a score of isolationists joined supporters of Administration foreign policy in overwhelming the compromise plan of the Ohio Republican.

Most of the isolationists who voted against the Burton amendment are opposed to any extension of military service beyond a year and will vote against the bill itself. Balancing this group are a dozen Senators who voted for the 24-month limit, but will not oppose 30 months. Administration leaders said yesterday's voting indicated a maximum of 25 to 30 votes against the bill.

Downey Amendment Next

The 30-month limit will come before the Senate, as an amendment, backed by the Senate Military Affairs Committee, to the original War Department bill, which requested authority to hold men in service for an indefinite period.

After action on the 30-month limit, the only obstacle to passage of the bill will be the Downey amendment, which provides for payment of an additional $30 a month to selectees serving more than one year.

The vote on the Burton amendment came after four hours of confused debate. Senator Thomas (Democrat), of Utah, who is handling the draft extension bill on the floor and on Tuesday indicated he would not oppose the Burton amendment, yesterday asked for defeat of the 24-month limit.

Majority Leader Barkley told the Senate he had been authorized by Secretary of War Stimson to report the "unanimous opinion of the general staff" that the Army "could not operate successfully" under the 24-month limit. He pointed out that the 30-month plan, or 18-month extension of service, had not been recommended by the War Department but merely accepted by the Army with the statement that "they could operate under it."

Chandler Calls for Approval

Senator Chandler (Democrat), of Kentucky, another member of the Military Affairs Committee, then appealed for approval of the Burton amendment, explaining that he personally favored an indefinite extension of service but that he believed a 12-month extension would be more acceptable to the House than an 18-month extension.

Barkley replied heatedly that if the Senate passed a 12-month extension the House would cut it to six months "and you might as well not have any bill."

When Chandler referred to discussions with other Military Affairs Committee members at which the 12-month extension amendment was drafted as "a bid for national unity," Barkley broke in to observe:

"Of course, I don't know what went on in the cloakrooms . . . but I want an Army as well as unity and harmony."

"May Be in 10 Years"

Senator Pepper (Democrat), of Florida, climaxed a dramatic appeal for defeat of the Burton amendment by asserting that men now in service "will be in the Army for five years, maybe ten."

"This war will last five years, maybe ten, maybe a generation,"

Police Inspector Edward J. Kelly, soft-spoken and silver-haired, who took the "hard way" to achieve his life's ambition, yesterday was assured by the Commissioners he will be Washington's next chief of police.

He will become acting superintendent on August 16 when Maj. Ernest W. Brown departs on a 67-day vacation—using up his accumulated leave.

KELLY

Commissioner John Russell Young said Kelly would take over the police chief's post on or before November 1. Brown has announced he will file application for retirement sometime between August 21 and the end of the month.

Contemplated changes in the Police Department's personnel—including selection of a new chief of detectives—will await recommendations from Kelly after he becomes full-time superintendent, Commissioner Young said.

"We are leaving the whole thing up to him," said Young. "The Commissioners have the utmost faith in Inspector Kelly and I am sure his recommendations will meet with our approval."

The city heads yesterday were swamped with congratulations on their choice from both Congressional leaders and civic organizations.

The report of the recent Congressional hearing suggested that a new detective chief and an assistant superintendent be appointed, that certain top-ranking officers be transferred and that captains be promoted to fill vacancies in inspectorships caused by recent retirements.

Inspector Kelly, who joined the force in 1906, appeared personally at the District Building yesterday to receive his commission as acting superintendent. Following a brief conference with Commissioners Young and Guy Mason, Kelly said:

"I will do everything within my power to make the Police Department efficient and to render service to the Commissioners and District residents."

The Commissioners promised him "full support" and indicated strongly they would give him a "free hand" in the administration of po-

U. S. Official's Daughter, 15, Attacked Here

Hands Tied Behind Her In Woods; Suspect Seized in Northeast

Threatened with a knife and dragged into a thicket in Rock Creek Park, the 15-year-old daughter of a Government official was twice raped by a Negro shortly before noon yesterday.

Last night police held a 22-year-old suspect who was unable to give satisfactory explanations for strongly incriminating circumstantial evidence. The man's wife, whose statements to police conflicted with those of the suspect, also was held.

Asked Way to Address

The girl's attack was the nineteenth rape case reported to police this year, a survey of precincts indicated. A number of the reports, however, were proved false. Nevertheless, numerous attempted rapes have also been reported and two rape-murders, those of Miss Jessie Elizabeth Strieff and Mrs. Rose Abramowitz, remain unsolved.

Dressed in a riding habit, the girl left her home in Northwest Washington shortly after 10 a. m. and took a bus for a riding school near the scene of her attack, which occurred near Rock Creek Ford and Fort Stevens Drives.

She was walking toward the riding stables after alighting from the bus at Fort Stevens Drive and Sixteenth Street Northwest when the man approached her, according to police.

Treated for Injuries

Showing a scrap of paper with the number 1505 written on it, he asked her how to get to 1505 New Hampshire Avenue Northwest. (There is no such address, police determined later.)

While she gave him the directions police said, the man drew a knife, threatened her and dragged her about 75 feet into a thicket. He told her, "Don't worry," bound her hands behind her back with her handkerchief, covered her eyes with his own handkerchief and attacked her, police said.

Then, according to the police's information, the man took a bottle of wine from his pocket, drank some

Slight Change In Gas Sales Despite Curfew

Dealers Report Output Is Virtually the Same; Ickes Offers Program

The 7 p. m. to 7 a. m. gasoline sales curfew has produced no visible reduction in the use of auto fuel here, Harry Wainwright, research director of the Retail Gasoline Dealers Association, said yesterday.

His disclosure came as Petroleum Coordinator Ickes suggested a five-point conservation program for operators of commercial vehicles.

At the same time, the District Petroleum Conservation Committee urged some 60,000 householders in the Washington area to observe a voluntary program for curtailment of heating oil use.

Majority of Sales Normal

Reporting on effects of the filling station "blackout" locally, Wainwright said:

"In my check of local retail dealers, I have found that in the majority of instances sales are remaining normal. In a few isolated cases, filling stations report anywhere from a 15 to 20 per cent reduction in gas purchases."

Although District defense executives are strongly against rationing gasoline, they viewed the apparent lack of appreciable fuel conservation in Washington with an eye to Petroleum Coordinator Ickes' threats to institute compulsory restrictive measures unless the public cooperates in saving gas.

Already, it was disclosed, a gas-rationing plan for New York State designed as a potential model for the Eastern Seaboard was drawn up for possible use in September. It would limit gasoline consumption by pleasure cars to 15 gallons a week.

Appeal to Shoppers

An appeal to shoppers to carry their own purchases, whenever possible, to reduce gasoline consumption of delivery trucks was one of Ickes' five proposals for conserving the commercial use of fuel.

Others made to operators of commercial vehicles were:

1. Eliminate bulk and wholesale deliveries on Saturdays. 2. Limit retail deliveries to not more than

By the Associated Press

The Russians reported stubborn fighting continuing today in four main threaters of the Eastern Front, indicating that the power of the Red army remained unbroken despite the extraordinary German claims of some 4,000,000 Red army men killed or captured, not to mention the wounded.

The Soviet communique said the battles were raging in the Kakisalmi direction on the Finnish front, in the Estonian sector, in the bitterly contested Smolensk area before Moscow and in the Ukraine around Bel Tserkov.

The mention of Kakisalmi, on the Karelian Isthmus on Lake Ladoga, was the first regarding that far northern front in many days. Kakisalmi was ceded to Russia at the conclusion of the Finnish-Russian war early last year.

In other sectors of the eastern front, the Russians said major operations were lacking.

Three Million Dead, Nazis Say

The Germans coupled their estimate of Russian casualties with a report of a "tough, bitterly fighting opponent" who was still offering savage resistance.

The German high command itself asserted that 935,000 Soviet prisoners were in hand and that the Russians' "bloody losses" were "many times" that number. The official news agency D. N. B. carried this forward to estimate Russian dead specifically at 3,000,000, acknowledging that these figures were "almost fantastic."

An estimate made by both sides in the past was that a total of nine million men were in combat. The effective destruction of four million Russians, not counting the unnumbered thousands who obviously have fallen wounded, would mean the destruction of a very high percentage of the whole Russian force.

Nazis Silent on Own Losses

Moreover, if three million Russians have been killed in the seven and a half weeks of the Nazi invasion the country has lost nearly twice the number of Russian dead in the whole of the World War—that is, 1,700,000.

Nothing was said in Berlin of German losses.

As to the situation at the front by theaters, the German command thus drew the picture:

The battle of Smolensk, on the front protecting the Moscow approaches, "victoriously concluded."

The Russian retreat cut off in the Ukraine, by German forces now driving southward between the Dniester and Dnieper Rivers and locked in "an encirclement battle which at present is raging in full fury."

Fun or History in the Making?

Mysterious Absence of Military Chiefs Fans Rumors of Roosevelt-Churchill Parley at Sea

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

A mass of circumstantial evidence piled high last night to indicate that four of the highest ranking military and naval men of the United States may have joined President Roosevelt at sea some time during the last 72 hours for a conference with Prime Minister Churchill and members of a British war mission.

Nine-tenths of official Washington gave their best detective-story consideration to the evidence and grabbed firmly a-hold of the belief that only such a melodramatic conference could have caused the absence from the Capital—in the middle of the week and the middle of a national emergency—of:

Gen. George C. Marshall, Chief of Staff of the United States Army.

Frank Knox, Secretary of the Navy.

Admiral Harold R. Stark, chief of naval operations.

Gen. H. H. Arnold, chief of the Army Air Force.

The other one-tenth chose to believe that President Roosevelt had "told all" in the only official announcement of the day, which was the following radio dispatch from his cruise ship the U. S. Potomac:

"Cruise ship proceeding slowly along coast with party fishing from stern. Weather fair, sea smooth. Potomac River sailors responding to New England air after Washington summer."

Some students of the President's method of writing wagered that he had worded the message himself and had intentionally "needled" the newspapermen who usually accompany him in emphasizing the fun and the weather they were missing. Whether that was true or not, these outstanding facts remained:

If the opinion of the nine-tenths of Washington was correct, America and the world was being kept in the dark about one of the most monumental events

Concerted Action

By George Bookman
Post Staff Writer

The United States and the British and Dutch Empires have promised Thailand (Siam) war supplies if that kingdom resists Japanese demands for military bases, it was learned last night.

Their joint offer coincided with warnings to Japan from Secretary of State Hull and British Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden not to intervene in Thailand, on pain at least of American economic reprisals.

Secretary Hull told a press conference that Japanese demands on Thailand were of even more concern to the United States than the occupation of French Indo-China, a move that was answered by the drastic Anglo-Dutch-American freezing orders.

"Serious Situation"

He made it plain that a Japanese incursion into Thailand would be answered by new economic sanctions, going even beyond the stringent freezing order and embargo on airplane fuel, recently proclaimed.

Eden told the House of Commons that Britain has formally warned Japan that intervention in Thailand would raise "the most serious situation" in British-Japanese relations.

Disclosure later that the three anti-Axis governments with paramount stakes in the Pacific have offered arms to Thailand if she resisted made it apparent that a highly explosive situation is developing in the Siamese kingdom.

The United States, Britain and the Netherlands, which took parallel action to punish Japan for the Indo-Chinese coup, were revealed as acting along parallel lines to ensure that Thailand does not fall into the Japanese orbit.

Military supplies were offered to Thailand on the same basis, as to other nations resisting aggression.

Note to Bangkok

The offer of armament aid was accompanied by representations to the Bangkok government, urging it to reject "cooperation" with Japan, authorized sources said.

Citing a declaration by Sumner Welles, then Acting Secretary of State, when Japan was occupying Indo-China, Hull agreed that Japanese intervention in Thailand would menace American security, endanger supply lines from the Far East and imperil the Philippine Islands. Welles had declared that this would be the effect of Nipponese occupation of Indo-China, and Hull said that statement applied to the Thailand situation.

Asked point blank if fresh American reprisals would meet any Japanese move into Thailand, Hull answered tersely in the affirmative.

Eden, announcing the formal British warning to Japan, declared

Inquiry Puts Wage Question To Henderson

House Committee Asks Information On Salary Ceilings

The House Banking Committee yesterday asked for information on wage ceilings, left out of the pending price control bill, as Price Administrator Leon Henderson completed his second day on the witness stand.

Chairman Steagall told Henderson the committee was anxious to get information on the effect of wages, utility rates and farm prices, in that order, on living costs.

The Administration bill leaves wage levels unmentioned but sets a farm price ceiling, 110 per cent of parity, Henderson indicated there is already ample regulatory authority in the utility rate field.

World War Recalled

Concerning another omission from the bill—installment credit controls—Henderson said he thought the Federal Reserve Board already had authority under the 1933 Emergency Banking Act to control installment credit. If there is doubt as to that, he said, he favored specific statutory authority.

Steagall told reporters he had no plan to write installment credit controls into the present bill, but implied it could be handled in separate legislation if needed.

Henderson will return for another morning's questioning by the committee today and will be followed later this week by Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau and probably by Marriner S. Eccles, chairman of the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System. Steagall said he thought hearings would run on for at least two weeks.

During questioning, Representative Williams (Democrat), of Missouri, asked why the present price situation could not be handled as it

OPM Acts In Defense Job Test

By Alfred Friendly
Post Staff Writer

In a dramatic move that will provide the first major test of the Government's ability to meet unemployment problems resulting from the defense program, OPM Co-Chief Sidney Hillman last night dispatched three of his top officials to find immediate jobs for 3,600 displaced auto workers in Buffalo, N. Y.

The men lost their jobs through the shutdown of the Chevrolet plant at nearby North Tonawanda. The factory will be closed for at least six months during its retooling for the production of airplane engines.

Hillman's representatives are to meet today with the presidents of four large Buffalo defense manufacturers, Bell Aircraft, Worthington Pump & Machinery Co., Curtiss-Wright and Buffalo Arms. The objective will be the immediate reemployment of the auto workers in these and other defense plants. Hillman declared that the skills of the men displaced include almost the entire range of metal working trades, useful in aircraft and other armament industries.

Seen as Test Move

The OPM move was watched with particular interest because of the admitted imminence of similar instances, multiplied many fold, of civilian goods factories closing down either through lack of materials or for change-over to defense work.

A similar problem, many times larger in scope, faces the OPM in the silk industry, where 175,000 workers are now unemployed or will be within a week or two, due to the "freezing" of trade with Japan and consequent cessation of silk imports.

Officials sent by Hillman are Eli Oliver, chief of the OPM labor relations section; Arthur S. Flemming, chief, and Eric Nicol, associate director of the OPM labor supply branch. Col. Frank J. McSherry, director of the Federal Security Agency defense training division,

Strike Closes Shipyard With Navy Contracts

Workers Quit at C.I.O. Call; $493,000,000 Construction Periled

By the Associated Press

Kearny, N. J., (Thursday), Aug. 7.—Workers at the Federal Shipbuilding & Dry Dock Co. yards answered a C. I. O. strike call at midnight which threatens to tie up $493,000,000 worth of contracts on naval and merchant ship orders and throw some 16,000 men into idleness.

Spokesmen for Local 16, Industrial Union of Marine and Shipbuilding Workers of America, said that a majority of the midnight shift of 1,000 workers, after appearing at the entrance to the sprawling yards, either went home or were turned back by the strike committee.

George W. Wright, financial secretary of the local, asserted that the shipyards were "completely shutdown tonight and will stay shut down tomorrow."

A massed picket line would form tomorrow morning at 5:30 a. m. (E. S. T.) to greet day shift workers, scheduled to report at 6:30 a. m., he said.

Maintenance men and union guards were permitted to enter.

Peter Flynn, vice president of Local 16, announced the strike call a few hours earlier.

Flynn said the union had agreed to accept the National Defense Mediation proposals to settle the union-company dispute but the company had not adopted them. He accused the company of taking a "fence straddling attitude."

Flynn added that the bone of contention was the "modified union shop, upon which the union insists but which the company seems determined not to grant."

Flynn said the union had offered to supply sufficient men to permit the launching of the cruiser Atlanta, scheduled for Saturday, to proceed on schedule.

Also on the shipyard ways, he said, are six destroyers, three tankers and two cargo boats.

L. H. Korndorff, company president, declared in a statement that the strike was a breach of an agreement between the company and the union reached last June 23.

The Devil's Highway

Girl Tells How 7 With Her Died In Mad Agony on Desert Road

By Karl E. Allen
United Press Staff Correspondent.

Yuma, Ariz., Aug. 6.—There were seven who died on "The Devil's Highway," of thirst and desert heat, but two lived and one of them, a 19-year-old girl who refused to see "beautiful lakes" and waste her strength trying to reach them, was able today to tell of their torture.

The other who endured the desert ordeal was Francisco Flores, 23, but his tongue was too swollen for him to talk, except to mumble from time to time for "water." He may not live.

The girl, Soccoro Cornejo, told how a week ago they set out from Sonoita, Sonora, to drive to San Luis along a rarely used road through 120 miles of cactus-studded desert. There were seven men, a 4-year-old girl and Miss Cornejo in the party and the first day out their old truck ran out of gasoline.

They were on "El Camino Del Diablo," the Devil's highway, but they did not worry too much. They had two 10-gallon cans of water, some oranges to quench thirst and a few bananas for food. Francisco was given some of the water and sent for help. He did not get very far. The heat was too intense and he was found lying naked under a bush, over which he had draped his clothing for shade. It was only 5 miles from the truck.

The others did not know he had failed at first. They waited and ate all their oranges and bananas on the first day, not bothering to ration them.

Confidence began to disappear in the heat, especially as, toward the end of the first day, the baby, 4-year-old Elisa Flores, died in the arms of her aunt, Soccoro. One of the men went mad and spilled their water supply on the ground.

"Then the people began to have delirium and see things," Soccoro related. "I saw no mirages. I stayed by the truck, made a shade with my hat for the baby, and even when she died I was quiet.

"Some of the others became crazy

Odds Favor Occupancy

Deal Must Be Found Binding Or U. S. Won't Lease Dupont

The answer to the question of whether the Federal Government would be able to extricate itself from the Dupont Circle Hotel deal was put squarely up to the Justice Department last night.

W. E. Reynolds, commissioner of public buildings, declared in a formal statement that the Public Buildings Administration would follow recommendation of the House Buildings and Grounds Committee to withdraw from commitment to lease the building, unless the Attorney General finds the agreement to be "binding and legal."

Reynolds' statement was issued in response to two sharply worded resolutions adopted by the committee in executive session yesterday afternoon. The resolutions recommended steps intended to require Department of Justice investigation of the entire transaction, and urged that Federal officials make "careful" inquiry before entering into similar agreements in the future.

"The resolutions of the committee appear to be a satisfactory solution of a difficult problem," Reynolds declared. "The building was offered to us without solicitation and under circumstances which we assumed protected the right of all parties.

"We will, of course, follow the committee's recommendations and submit the matter to the Attorney General for decision.

"The committee is, of course, aware, as are those who have been

Vandenberg Backs President

Senate Votes to Override Highway Bill by 3-to-1 Margin

The Senate voted 57 to 19 yesterday to override President Roosevelt's veto of the 320 million dollar national defense highway bill, which would distribute the money among the States on a pro rata basis instead of in accordance with specific needs, as recommended by the President.

The House Roads Committee voted unanimously yesterday to override, and Chairman Wilburn Cartwright (Democrat), of Oklahoma, predicted the lower House would duplicate the Senate's 3-to-1 margin.

President Roosevelt's only strong defender in today's brief Senate debate on the bill was Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan, usually an Administration foe. The vote cut across party lines, 41 Democrats and 16 Republicans voting to override, against 14 Democrats and 5 Republicans.

The President's original request was for 125 million dollars for defense road building, of which 25 million dollars was to be spent at his discretion on strategically important highways, and the balance for access roads to military and naval bases and defense industries.

Congress raised the 25 million dollars to 125 millions dollars and provided that the money be distributed among the States on the basis of population and other factors in the accepted "pork barrel" tradition. The President replied in his

By C. Brooks Peters.
Copyright by New York Times

Berlin, Aug. 6.—After weeks of virtual silence, the German high command today released four special communiques, partially recapitulating the results of the operations on the east front from the break-through on the Stalin Line announced on July 12, down to the present.

Aside from revealing the total losses in men and equipment which the Soviets have suffered since the invasion began, however, the announcements added little to the information which the Germans had previously revealed about the present positions of the opposing armies.

They neither stated, as did the special announcement released on July 2, that another "decision of world political import" had been forced, nor implied that the definitive defeat of the Russian army is imminent.

On the basis of the information contained in today's special communiques the general picture is as follows:

The Nazi left wing has pushed northward east of Lake Peipus almost as far as the city of Narwa in a drive to block the isthmus connecting the Gulf of Finland with Lake Peipus and therewith cut off the Russian troops still fighting in northern Estonia from the Leningrad sector.

"Usual Reserve"

Other forces of this group operating in Estonia, where sizable Soviet forces are still holding out around and to the east of Reval, have advanced beyond Tapa in their drive to cleanse Estonia of the enemy. So far as the operations in the Leningrad area are concerned, informed quarters declared that they are still in flux and so the high command maintains "the usual reserve" relative to them.

The second army group operating in the center of the gigantic front having defeated the Russian "army of attack" in the double battle of Bialystok and Minsk, has now defeated the enemy "army of defense" in the battle of Smolensk and has thereupon begun a new offensive in this sector—whose objective might easily be the Russian capital.

[A new triple-pronged German offensive "decisive for the world's future" was reported to be striking toward Moscow, Leningrad and Kiev, according to a United Press dispatch.]

The group operating in the south wing in the Ukraine is engaged in a large-scale battle of encirclement with Russian forces somewhere between Kiev and Odessa. In this sector the Germans claim to have cut off lines of retreat of the Soviet troops.

Russian Losses Listed

Since June 22, the Germans declared, the Russians have suffered the following losses in manpower and material captured or destroyed: 895,000 prisoners, 13,145 tanks, 10,388 pieces of artillery, 9,082 airplanes.

Informed German quarters estimate that between 2,500,000 and three million of the enemy have been killed or wounded. Therewith the total loss in effectives is estimated at between 3,500,000 and four million. The Russian census of 1939 gives the total population of the U. S. S. R.—of course, without the annexed Finnish, Baltic and southeastern territories—at around 170 million.

Allowing three divisions per million of the population, the Russians may have some 510 divisions. If each division totals 25,000 men, then the total Soviet forces would be 12,750,000. Other neutral sources have estimated the Russian military potential in men at 17,500,000.

If, therefore, the Red losses have already been between 3,500,00 and four million, then they appear to have lost between one-fifth and one-third of their total strength in man power.

Silent on Own Losses

The Germans made not a single reference today to their own losses on the Eastern Front.

An introductory communique today admitted the German population had misinterpreted the lengthy silence of the supreme command. That silence, it stated, had nonetheless been necessary because the enemy's communications did not afford him an accurate picture of the fighting front. Now, however, it added, new operations have begun and the "just" wish of the German people to be informed daily of the newest developments could be fulfilled.

For the first time, the Germans revealed the generals under whose command operations are being conducted. The army group of the left wing is under the command of Field Marshal Ritter von Leeb. The middle group is under Field Marshall Fedor von Bock. The southern group is under Field Marshall Karl von Rundstedt. Each of these group commanders has other field marshals, in turn, directing armies under him.

Referring to the Battle of Smolensk, the official statement declares "In the series of relentless battles of annihilation against the Bolshevist armed forces, the size of the area, the length of time involved and the fierceness of the fighting, made this battle unique in all history.

Explorer and Wife Are First Ever to Climb Alaskan Peak

BRADFORD WASHBURN

Bradford Washburn, youthful explorer, yesterday informed Dr. Gilbert Grosvenor, president of the National Geographic Society, that he had successfully climbed Mount Hayes (13,940 feet) the highest unclimbed peak in central Alaska and planted the society's flag on its summit.

Washburn, formerly director of the Institute of Geographical Exploration at Harvard University and now executive head of the New England Museum of Natural History, left Boston June 24 for a vacation in a region that has whetted his appetite for exploration for nearly a decade. He was accompanied by Mrs. Washburn.

An expert aerial photographer and skier and an accomplished airplane pilot, Washburn has flown, climbed and skied over extensive areas of northwestern Canada and Alaska. In 1934, as leader of a Harvard-sponsored expedition, he climbed the difficult icy heights of Mount Crillon (12,728 feet) on the Alaskan panhandle.

A year later the National Geographic Society sent him to the little-known Southwest Yukon to make aerial surveys and charts of a region that had been a blank spot on the map of North America. He discovered an unknown range of sky piercing peaks and reported that famous Hubbard Glacier was double the known length. Two of the new peaks he charted in Canadian territory were named for Queen Mary (13,000 feet) and King George V (12,300 feet) in honor of their silver jubilee year. Washburn prizes a congratulatory message from the monarchs on his achievement in effecting the first crossing of the lofty Saint Elias Range.

Returning to the northwest in 1936, Washburn, after many attempts due to bad weather conditions, successfully photographed Mount McKinley (20,300 feet) highest mountain in North America and the following year scaled Mount Lucania (17,150 feet) of the Saint Elias Range, Canadian Yukon, the highest unclimbed peak of North America. A hitherto unknown glacial valley he named for the late Dr. Frederick V. Coville, distinguished botanist and former chairman of the National Geographic Society's committee on research.

Washburn's 1938 explorations, under the joint sponsorship of the society and Harvard University, led to the discovery of the world's largest nonpolar ice field which spreads over 235 square miles of Alaska and the Yukon.

Mount Logan (19,850 feet) second highest peak in North America, and Mount Saint Elias (18,008) feet) also were photographed and mapped on this expedition.

Moscow Describes Counterattacks In Ukraine Sector

By the Associated Press

Moscow (Thursday), Aug. 7.—Mentioning for the first time in days the German-Finnish attempt to smash into Leningrad from the north across the Karelian Isthmus, Russia reported early today that the Red army was fighting stubbornly against the invaders in the Kakisalmi sector, about 75 miles north of Leningrad.

The same report, issued by the Soviet information bureau, told of continued bitter battles in the Smolensk and Bel Tserkov sectors of the center and south, where official Soviet accounts have told of counterattacks holding up the Nazi advance.

Only in those areas and in the Estonian sector, where the Germans are trying to put the squeeze on Leningrad from the southwest, was there major fighting, the Russian communipue said.

Kakisalmi is a Lake Ladoga port which the Russians gained in the 1939-40 war with Finland.

Deny Annihilation

With this new development on a front hitherto comparatively quiescent, official accounts portrayed the Red army as counter-attacking in sustained fashion on the central and southern approaches to Moscow and Kiev in a deepening battle of movement on a 350-mile front.

London military experts said Germany had been stopped in front of Smolensk and was preparing a drive toward the Black Sea port of Odessa to capture the lower end of the great railway system running north and south from Odessa to Leningrad. This drive, it was predicted, would be accompanied by new attacks in the north which would seek to isolate Leningrad and cut its rail lines.

The Russian navy reported the destruction of a troop and munitions ship, presumably German, by a Soviet submarine operating in the Baltic.

Break Out of Trap

Commanded by Col. T. Novikov, an infantry division designated as "N" struggled as a unit through German encirclement, negotiating forests, swamps and dozens of rivers, and is ready now to fight again, the commander wrote in the army newspaper, Red Star.

In its long march, the colonel estimated, the division killed 3,000 Germans; routed one Nazi motorized detachment, captured 300 automobiles and hundreds of armored cars, motorcycles and bicycles, and seized stores of munitions and supplies.

The division was surrounded on June 26. It had routed a German infantry division, the colonel explained, but was cut off by German reinforcements. Facing the choice of separating into small units or staying together, the division elected to make a united push.

Counterattacking constantly reinforced enemy numbers, it pounded away until it rejoined Soviet lines.

[At least six German raiders were reported shot down, according to International News Service, as Russian night fighters and antiaircraft batteries blazed away at the Nazi raiders last night and early today. Some of the German planes broke through the outer defenses, into the city itself, showering explosive and incendiary bombs.

[A number of persons were killed or wounded, but no military targets were damaged, according to an official announcement.]

Vichy to Guard Empire in Own Way, U. S. Told

By the Associated Press

Vichy, Aug. 6.—France intends to defend her empire in her own way, the United States was informed in a note handed to United States Ambassador William D. Leahy today.

The note, which was not made public here but which was understood to have been phrased in rather general terms, was an answer to the declaration of Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles of last Saturday that henceforth the United States will be governed in its relations with Vichy by that regime's effectiveness in defending its empire from the Axis.

It also was an answer to the demands of Ambassador Leahy last Friday for information respecting France's plans of empire defense.

(The German radio said the note reemphasized the French principle of rejecting any attack on French sovereignty.)

Authorized circles said that for the first time the name of Gen. Maxime Weygand, French proconsul in North Africa, was added to those of Marshal Petain and Vice Premier Darlan as having "already outlined the broad principles" of French empire policy.

It was understood the note follows the familiar French argument that Syria was defended against the British because it was thought possible to reinforce the French garrisons there, and that Indo-China's defense was shared with the Japanese because it was realized that it is impossible to send reinforcements that distance from the homeland.

Rents Increased In 15% of Homes At Hagerstown

Special Dispatch to The Post

Hagerstown, Md., Aug. 6.—A survey made here by the WPA division of research several months ago shows that 15.4 per cent of the residential rents here increased between March, 1940, and June, 1941. For the units which had increases the average rise was $2.87. Only 0.8 per cent of the rental units had decreases in rent during the 15-month period.

The average rent in June, 1941, was $21.66. On every 100 rental units with the same tenants, 13 reported rental increases which averaged $2.70; different tenants, 30 who had an increase of $3.30; no change in structure or convenience, 15 with an average of $2.70 increase, and those with changes in structure or convenience 53 out of 100 with an average increase of $6.40.

It was also noted that increases occurred more frequently at lower rent levels than at higher levels.

Eden Forecasts British Thrust In Near East

By the Associated Press

London, Aug. 6.—Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden told the House of Commons today that Britain was preparing a big-scale military advance in the Middle East—where Imperial troops already standing in Iraq and Syria face Iran.

Absent from the war-progress debate was Prime Minister Churchill. It was explained in advance that he was too busy "with urgent matters connected with the war" to attend.

"Our forces of men and material in the Middle East are being strengthened for their next forward blow," Eden said.

"I suggest to those lands in the Middle East that the blows which those forces will strike will be blows struck for their own independence as much as for ours.

Points to Iran

"That carries with it the corollary that those countries must cooperate with us in insuring that they do not afford opportunity to Germany or the Axis to create troubles, disturbances, upheavals and risings to further their war effort.

"To take one example: There are in Iran today a large number of Germans. Experience has shown in many lands that these Germans—colonists, experts, tourists or whatever they may be called—are extremely dangerous to the independence of the country in which they are found.

"We have drawn the serious attention of the Iranian government to the danger to their own interests which they are risking by continuing to permit a large number of Germans to reside in their country.

Reassures Turkey

"I trust that the Iranian government will not fail to heed this warning, given in all friendliness and in all sincerity, and that they will take the necessary measures now to deal with the situation."

There was but a single British policy for all those countries lying between the Suez Canal and the western borders of India, Eden said, and that policy was to see them "leading their own lives in security and peace."

As to Turkey, he dimissed as "enemy propaganda" without "the shadow of truth" suggestions that Britain "might agree to some arrangement or other" at the expense of that nonbelligerent British ally.

New Padlock Almost Foiled Belgian Flight

Then When It Was Picked, Pair Found Engine of Stolen Plane Wouldn't Work

(This is the fourth of a series of interviews in which two Belgian fliers, using the pseudonyms of "Jean Qevera" and "Jacques Dubois" to protect their loved ones still in Belgium, tell the inside story of their dramatic escape to England in a stolen plane.)

By Merrill Mueller
International News Service Staff Writer

London, Aug. 6.—Ready to escape from Belgium in a stolen airplane, with stolen or homemade equipment, these two Belgian pilots suddenly found their way blocked by a new padlock on the door of the hangar where they found th eplane.

For nearly three months they had built flying instruments, bartered for gasoline, overhauled their plane and dodged sentries eight different nights to work silently in semi-darkness almost under the very noses of German sentries near an army mess hall.

But this night, what they thought was their last trip, the way was barred by a new and stronger lock.

Jean continues the story:

"We lay in the dark under the barn door; Jacques almost in tears of anger. Not 400 yards away a German sentry lolled outside the officers' mess.

"The new lock meant our plans had partially been discovered, and although we had been careful to leave no trace of our visits to the barn, we feared the plane had been further damaged."

Jacques interrupted:

"For a few minutes we were ready to give the whole business up. I couldn't open it. Then he passed me our batch of spare keys and miraculously, one of them turned the latch. More joyously than ever before, we literally scrambled into the barn. We got the plane ready. Over the next two hours made several trips to get the gasoline."

Jacques then told of their pushing the plane into the open for the first time.

"Under cover of the darkness and the late hour—all was silent about us and I think the sentry was asleep—we pushed the plane out to the side of the barn."

Jean went on:

"Jacques got into the cockpit, 'have you flown at night before?' I asked him. 'No,' he said. 'Neither have I.' So we flipped a coin and he won the honor of piloting.

"The engine did not respond. With a soft metallic rattle it turned over but did not start.

"I stepped in again and threw the propellor with all my might. There was a sucking, spitting noise, and I started to run for the other cockpit—but the engine was still dead. Then I noticed the sentry had moved a bit. With leaden hearts we pushed the plane back into the barn."

Jacques picked up the narrative again:

"While Jean eliminated the marks of our visit, I checked the engine thoroughly. Then he warned me the sentry was returning. Quickly we hid the gasoline tins in the upper barn, as well as the instrument panel. We had no time to take them with us on this occasion. We scrambled out, locked the door and crept to our bicycles.

" 'What is it?' Jean asked as we rode home.

"The carburator is broken!"

Norse Skippers Declare Atlantic Could Be Safer

The North Atlantic, vital supply route between the United States and Great Britain, is a safer place to travel than it was a few months ago, but the voyage still isn't what you would call comfortable.

The skippers of three Norwegian merchantmen brought this message to Senator Pepper (Democrat), Florida, stanch aid-Britain advocate, yesterday. Heavier armament and improved convoy methods are helping more cargo ships past the German submarine and aircraft patrol, they reported, but "there is still room for improvement."

The names of the sea captains and the two chief engineers who accompanied them from two tankers and a general cargo vessel tied up at Baltimore are withheld—at their request. All have families in Norway and they fear Nazi reprisals.

THE CAUSE OF IT ALL—Mutzie is shown with her owners, Mr. and Mrs. Mark J. Boundy, of St. Louis

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, Aug. 6.—The No. 1 bottleneck in the way of expanding the $89,000,000 small arms ammunition plant here was removed today at the Government's expense.

Mutzie, a Boston bull terrier and expectant mother, was the bottleneck.

The Government had offered to move her owners, Mr. and Mrs. Boundy, at its own expense, but they refused to move until Mutzie's litter arrived. Additional construction of buildings was contingent only on demolition of their house, and Army construction officials said they already were three days late on the job.

Today, however, the Boundys changed their minds.

"We don't want to stand in the way of America's defense interests," Boundy, 67-year-old night watchman, told Enno Kraehe, acquisition projects manager at the defense plant.

"After all, Mutzie can have her pups in our new home. She is 100 per cent American, like the rest of us."

The Boundy residence is one of 24 buildings in the area acquired by the Government to make way for further construction of the defense plant.

Sidelights of the War

1,000 Britons Are Guerrillas In Crete, London Paper Says

London (Thursday), Aug 7 (INS).—The London Daily Mail in a dispatch from Alexandria early today said that at least 1,000 British troops and marines "are still waging guerrilla warfare against the Germans in Crete."

The British forces joined up with Cretan mountaineers and are living in caves, going out by day and night from their hiding places to snipe at the Germans from ambush and capture enough food and ammunition to survive, according to the dispatch.

"Escape for the Britishers was impossible two months ago, and they were left behind when every usable boat was either destroyed or heavily guarded," the Daily Mail dispatch said.

"Rather than surrender they joined up with the mountaineers.

"Every day, they are sabotaging the enemy's supplies.

"The island is garrisoned by young troops recently drafted by Hitler. The youths fear cholera and the Britishers' incessant raids have forced the Nazis to canton themselves behind defensive works which are entirely self-contained and independent of the island's food and water supplies.

"No effort is made to police the crags and mountains."

Nazi Gun Blown Up

London (Thursday) Aug. 7 (AP).—Possibility that a British landing party slipped across the channel to the French coast early Monday and blew up a German long range gun was suggested today by the Daily Mail.

Dover observers have seen a great saucer-shaped crater on the French coast since Monday at approximately the same place where one of the Nazi long-range guns had been located.

A big explosion was heard there on Monday morning and the Channel was lit by a flash at a time when there were no signs of an R. A. F. raid, the Daily Mail said.

Two other theories were advanced—that the blast was the work of saboteurs or that the gun was knocked out by a British naval shelling.

Czechs in Sabotage

Copyright by New York Times

Ankara, Aug. 6.—Sabotage and open and "silent" demontarations against the German troops of occupation are increasing in Prague and Bratislava, Czech sources reported here today.

It is reported the Germans are thoroughly alarmed by the increase in sabotage in the armaments plants at Skoda and on the Czech and Slovak railways. Bratislava reports the Slovak troops sent to the Russian front are deserting in large numbers to fight with the Red army.

Australian Seas Clear

Los Angeles, Aug. 6 (AP).—Since American long-range flying boats have been operating in Australia, German raiders haven't sunk a single Australian ship within a 1,000-mile radius of that country, Capt. L. J. Brain reported today upon his arrival by clipper plane.

Arnold Says Dice Broke Trust Law

By the United Press

Thurman Arnold, Assistant Attorney General, contended today that under certain circumstances dice shooting is a violation of antitrust laws—especially if the stakes are certain cattle pens.

He charged before a Senate committee that sheep buyers in Chicago allegedly allocated pens to various colleagues by rolling the little white cubes so they wouldn't have to get up early in the morning and sprint to the pens to make favorable purchases.

RAF Hammers Coast, Germans Shell England

By the Associated Press

London (Thursday), Aug. 7.—The Royal Air Force attacked the German-held ports of Calais and Boulogne on the French coast just before midnight in continuation of its around-the-clock offensive against Germany's war machine in western Europe.

Watchers on the Kent coast said German antiaircraft batteries put up a heavy defense, but that they saw huge flashes which were thought to have been bombs dropped by the R. A. F.

Germany countered last night with a brisk cross-Channel shelling of the southeast coast and the bombing of a number of points of southeast England. Several high-explosive bombs were dropped, but there were no indications of a concentrated attack by the Luftwaffe. Two Nazi planes were reported shot down.

Air Field Raided

The air ministry account said 10 to 12 Messerschmitts on an airdrome near Cherbourg were attacked today with machine-gun and cannon fire by the same squadron which raided the same field yesterday. One Nazi fighter challenging the R. A. F. was shot down.

On the way home the R. A. F. attacked two Nazi tankers, leaving smoke rising from one. In this encounter two escorting Messerschmitts were reported downed.

Two men and three women were injured and about 20 dwellings were damaged by the German cross-Channel shelling.

Big Blast at Karlsruhe

The industrial cities of Frankfurt, Mannheim and Karlsruhe were the main targets of last night's R. A. F. assaults, described as one of the heaviest of its two-month-old offensive. Aachen and Ostend came in for lesser assaults. A Beaufort plane of the coastal command was credited with a pair of direct hits on a German supply ship at Nantes.

A "catastrophic explosion" which appeared to have been from an ammunition dump was reported by returning pilots at Karlsruhe, capital of Baden and rail and war industries center, where a large industrial building was demolished and fires started in freight yards and manufacturing plants. One fire was visible for 110 miles.

All these operations cost the British nine planes.

British sources reported that the 26,000-ton German battleship Scharnhorst was back at Brest from La Pallice, where she got a heavy bombing from the R. A. F. two weeks ago.

Md. Farm Youths Urged to Better Rural Housing

Dr. T. B. Symons, director of the University of Maryland Extension Service, yesterday urged Maryland farm boys and girls to take greater interest in rural housing and home improvement.

Addressing a special 4-H Club weekly assembly, Dr. Symons asserted that "many farm homes in this State are in poor condition—especially those belonging to tenant families and farm laborers."

Dr. Roger B. Corbett, new director of the university's experimental station, said the station is a "trouble-shooting" department of the university and is working night and day on a new tobacco disease—"house burn"—which he said is costing southern Maryland tobacco growers more than $500,000 annually.

Speakers listed for today include Dr. H. C. Byrd, university president. Tonight Senator Millard E. Tydings, of Maryland, is to be the principal speaker at a banquet in the university dining hall.

Senate Delays Approving Tugwell

Two Republican Senators, Austin of Vermont, and Tobey of New Hampshire, forced a delay yesterday in Senate action on President Roosevelt's nomination of Rexford Guy Tugwell to be Governor of Puerto Rico.

The nomination was scheduled for consideration by the Senate Territories Committee yesterday, but when Chairman Tydings (Democrat), of Maryland, called the session to order Senator Austin, assistant Republican leader, said several members of the committee had material they wished to study in connection with the nomination. Tydings then delayed action until Tuesday.

He is William Leroy Butler, 11, and when last seen was wearing a brown suit and shoes, Mrs. Ballard said if anyone knows where he is to "tell him to come home because his mother is worried to death."

U. S., British Pledge Aid if Siam Resists

on his own account that a Japanese move into Thailand similar to that already accomplished in Indo-China would be "threatening the security of Singapore."

The British Ambassador, he added, according to dispatches, had told Tokyo that "someone in authority" appeared to be trying to "manufacture a case for Japanese intervention."

Extent Undetermined

An Associated Press dispatch from London, passed by the British censor, said that "the extent of British and United States collaboration in the Far East may be settled this week by more exalted quarters."

This may refer to unconfirmed rumors of a meeting between President Roosevelt and British Prime Minister Winston Churchill.

Neither Hull nor Eden answered the question whether Anglo-American aid to Thailand would include actual military support, in addition to supplies of arms. In other quarters it was said that help given Thailand would be most likely to take the form of economic aid and war supplies, but stop short of active military support.

Hull declared that the warning Welles delivered to Japan about Indo-China applied with equal force to the Thailand crisis.

Indo-China Move Denounced

Denouncing the Japanese move into Indo-China on July 24, Welles declared that the step was clearly a grab for bases from which to launch "further and more obvious movements of conquest in adjacent areas."

The Japanese steps threatened American supplies for Far Eastern tin and rubber, Welles said, and in addition were a menace to the Philippines. Further, they "bear directly upon the vital problem of our national security," he said.

Hull cited also to his press conference his own statement to the House Foreign Affairs Committee last January during testimony on the lend-lease bill. The statement, which outlines the foundation stones of Hull's foreign policy, follows in part:

"It has been clear throughout that Japan has been actuated from the start by broad and ambitious plans for establishing herself in a dominant position in the entire region of the western Pacific.

"Her leaders have openly declared their determination to achieve and maintain that position by force of arms and thus to make themselves masters of an area containing almost one-half of the entire population of the world. As a consequence, they would have arbitrary control of the sea and trade routes in that region.

"Previous experience and current developments indicate that the proposed 'new order' in the Pacific area means, politically, domination by one country. It means, economically, employment of the resources of the area concerned for the benefit of that country and to the ultimate improvement of other parts of the area and exclusion of the interests of other countries. It means, socially, the destruction of personal liberties and the reduction of the conquered peoples to the role of inferiors."

Likely to See More of U. S. Navy

American determination to defend the Pacific was emphasized again when the commanding officer of two visiting United States cruisers told Australians they are likely to see "more and more of the American Navy while the war lasts." The two warcraft arrived at Brisbane, Australia, Tuesday under command of Rear Admiral S. A. Taffinder.

The Treasury, meanwhile, thawed out American assets of Japanese, Chinese, German and Italian nationals doing business with the British Empire, Russia and allied countries.

Due to the growing importance of oil in foreign affairs, Hull appointed Max W. Thurnburg as special consultant on international petroleum matters. Thurnburg is a former vice president of the Behrein Petroleum Co.

10,000 Japanese Said To Be on Siam Border

Bangkok (Thursday), Aug. 7 (INS). An estimated 10,000 Japanese troops were reported today to be drawn up along Thailand's southeastern border, facing massed mechanized Thai forces as this ancient land of jungles and temple ruins became the center of a warlike crisis in the Far East.

The Japanese troops were said to be concentrated on the western shore of the "Great Lake" which runs for 100 miles along Thailand's new frontier adjoining Indo-China's portion of Cambodia Province.

More Land at Saigon

Saigon, French Indo-China (Thursday), Aug. 7 (INS).—Thousands of new Japanese troops were disembarked from transports today and immediately began streaming westward in great truck convoys.

Reports current in Saigon said the Mekong Ferry to Pnompenh (near the Thailand frontier) was acting as a bottleneck for troop movements, limiting passage of Japanese trucks to eighty a day. The Japanese, it was said, are commandeering numerous barges, junks and ships and moving a considerable quantity of materials up the Mekong River.

U. S. May Hike Lend-Lease To 14 Billion

By Cecil B. Dickson

International News Service Staff Writer

President Roosevelt has intimated to Democratic leaders that he will ask Congress to increase the lease-lend program to 14 billion dollars shortly after he returns from his mysterious voyage in the North Atlantic, it was learned yesterday.

The actual amount to be requested is to be determined from information on needs of Great Britain, Russia and China gained by his personal emissary, Harry L. Hopkins, on his spectacular flights to Moscow and London.

Already defense officials have prepared a tentative lease-lend expansion program, doubling the present seven billion dollars outlay. This is considered the minimum amount needed to carry out the program during the coming year. It was intimated it might be further increased.

President Roosevelt is expected to return from his "blackout" trip next Wednesday or Thursday and Hopkins, informants said, is expected to be with him.

Other Factors Involved

The amount of the request will be fixed not only on need of war materials for England, Russia and China, but on the industrial capacity of this country's growing armament industries and the manpower available.

Defense industries have requested OPM officials to let them know as quickly as possible how much additional funds are to be laid out for lease-lend materials so they can map their production schedules.

Democratic Congressional leaders have been informed that as soon as the additional requirements have been appraised, they will be called to the White House for a conference on the new request.

The request will be submitted in a special message, which, it was said, will give complete justification for the added expenditure, and will review rather fully the extent of aid already given to England, China and Russia. Russia, it was noted, however, is buying as much war material as possible in the United States on a cash basis.

Industry in High Gear

Defense industries, meantime, are swinging into high production, and another million men, officials said, will find employment within the next 30 days, bringing to about 40 million the number of workers on nonagricultural jobs. By Christmas, all able-bodied men in the country will be needed on jobs in and out of defense industries, officials said.

Plans are under way for immediate placement of selectees over 28 years old, to be released beginning this fall, in defense industries. Many of these men, whose occupations are classified, will be offered jobs even before they are released. In this way, OPM expects to increase the number of skilled workers in industry by about 200,000.

Heat to Continue; Three Overcome

Fair and continued warm weather, with cloudy skies, is the weatherman's forecast for today.

Yesterday's heat, which sent the mercury to a high of 87 at 4 p. m., was responsible for three cases of heat exhaustion. Treated in Washington hospitals were Mrs. Marie Sealfon, 35, 4328 Thirty-second Street, Mount Rainier, Md.; Jesse Crawford, 32, Negro, 1803 Fourteenth Street Northwest, and Ruth Spencer, 23, Negro, 2223 Georgia Avenue Northwest.

one a day over a given area. 3. Reduce deliveries of perisables to as few each day as possible. 4. Eliminate special deliveries.

To reduce consumption of fuel oil here, the District Conservation Committee asked householders to prevent heat waste by installing proper weatherstripping and other insulation; to maintain a night temperature of 65 degrees; to keep hot water temperatures between 140 and 160 degrees, and to subject heating units to periodical cleaning.

Dealers in fuel oil were urged to eliminate deliveries on Sundays and holidays and after 6 p. m. nights except in extreme emergencies.

As part of the gasoline conservation program, Coordinator Ickes personally inaugurated an advertising campaign designed to decrease sales. He posed for photographers with the first red, white and blue windshield sticker to be distributed by filling stations.

Sticker Carries Pledge

The front of the sticker displays the slogan, "I'm using one-third less gasoline." The back bears the pledge, "In the interests of national defense, I pledge to use one-third less gasoline." There is a dotted line for the motorist's signature.

Federal Security Administrator Paul V. McNutt advised all service station workers who lose their jobs as a result of the gasoline consumption drive to register immediately at State and District employment offices.

Edwin W. Jones, director of the District Employment Center, said his organization was ready to aid gas attendants in obtaining new jobs. The Retail Gasoline Dealers, Inc., reported its placements service likewise would aid the workers.

Congress Library Gets Musical Manuscripts

A collection of original musical manuscripts, to be known as the Gertrude Clarke Whittall Foundation Collection of Musical Autographs has just been acquired by the Library of Congress, Archibald MacLeish, librarian, announced last night.

MacLeish stated that the generosity of Mrs. Gertrude Clarke Whittall had made it possible to purchase the manuscripts, formerly in the possession of the late Dr. Jerome Stonborough, of Vienna.

The composers represented in the collection are Beethoven, Brahms, Michael Haydn, Mozart, Schubert, Wagner and Weber.

veto message that this method would entirely disregard defense needs, and would not insure that all the most critical road deficiencies would be corrected, even though such a large sum were appropriated.

Senator Carl Hayden (Democrat), of Arizona, on the floor objected to the President's "gratuitous advice," and Senator Kenneth McKellar (Democrat), of Tennessee, said somebody must have misled the President.

Senator Vandenberg stood up for the President. He ridiculed Senators who, he said, didn't hesitate to break precedents if they could get more money out of the Federal Treasury for their constituents, but were afraid of creating a new and sinister precedent by saving 100 million dollars.

Senator McKellar interrupted that this was the first time he had ever heard Senator Vandenberg argue that President Roosevelt should be trusted.

"It's the first time the President has ever said anything about economy," replied Vandenberg.

was in the World War period, without new legislation.

"During the World War," said Henderson, "there was some authority to control prices. Those in charge of it tell me now that if they had it to do over again they would not talk to everybody and try to satisfy everybody and let prices run away meanwhile."

He added that the situation in the last war showed that authority to enforce voluntary price schedules was not enough.

"Great damage was done then by runaway prices," he said.

for water and saw mirages. They would run about, crying out that they saw a lake. 'Look at the pretty lake," they would say, and they would call to me to try some of the water. Then they would become too weak to stand and they would beg me to bring them water from the beautiful lake.

Stuffed Sand in Mouths

"But I knew there was no water, only sand. I stayed quiet. But they stuffed sand in their mouths, eyes and noses, thinking it was water. It was horrible to see them die, one by one."

The second to die was Domingo Rocha, on the second day. The third Day Elias Cornejo died, the Soccoro's 52-year-old father, German.

"Raphael, my 17-year-old brother, was the next to go," she said, "and then the man called Yucopicio. It was he who upset the water. They all died near the truck and I wanted to stay there with my folks, even if they were dead. But I stayed quiet. I did scream some, but there was no one to hear."

The seventh to die was Thomas Peru. Some had slashed their wrists to get blood to slake the thirst.

Peddler Finds Them

Flores, who was found 5 miles from the truck, also had slashed his wrists but he said no blood came from them.

Francisco Arvallo, a peddler, drove down the road. He saw Soccoro sitting in the middle of the Devil's Highway, 200 yards from the truck.

"I saw him coming," Soccoro said, "but I didn't believe it was really a man and a truck. I thought I was beginning to see things, but anyway, I took off my hat and waved it and screamed." Arvallo found Flores also. They left the bodies on the desert.

OPM officials said that if proper steps are taken at this time, defense contract factories in the Buffalo area can ultimately absorb many more than the 3,600 who were displaced.

Strike Referred to Board

Meantime, the problem of 3,000 other workers, idle because of a six-week strike of the U. S. Gypsum Co., was referred yesterday to the National Defense Mediation Board by the Secretary of Labor.

The strike, which has closed 17 of the company's plants since June 16, arose from demands by the C. I. O. United Mine Workers' gas by-products, coke and chemical workers' division, for a master wage agreement. The company has been producing building-construction materials for ordnance plants.

In other action during the day, the board suspended conferences between the Borg-Warner Corporation, Rockford, Ill., and the C. I. O. United Auto Workers representatives, to permit direct negotiations on a labor dispute in progress. If agreement is not reached by August 19, the board will issue public recommendations, it was announced.

About 888 workers are involved in the controversy, seeking wage increases and a closed shop. The company manufactures material for the Rock Island Arsenal. A threatened strike was postponed when the case was certified to the board on July 28.

Soldier Gets Medal For Risking Life Attempting Rescue

Louisville, Ky., Aug. 6 (AP).—Private Llewellyn C. Alter, jr., 21-year-old, 6-foot member of the Twenty-eighth Air Base Group of the Army Air Corps at Bowman Field, blushed today when he received a medal for "outstanding heroism."

Alter was on fatigue duty last March when an Army plane crashed in a river at Langley Field, Va. He rushed to the bank with other soldiers in an effort to save the Army officer from the plane.

"I started jerking off my clothes," Alter said. "They told me the water was too cold but I guess I was too excited, I didn't listen."

Alter omitted that he fainted from cramp and cold water before he reached shore and other soldiers rescued him. The officer in the plane, Second Lieut. Barnard P. Smith, of Bartow, Fla., drowned.

U. S. Rushes Help For Silk Industry

3 Defense Chieftains Launch Program To Speed Use of Substitute Fibers

By International News Service

A broad program to aid the stricken silk industry was launched last night in a joint action by OPM Associate Director General Hillman, Price Administrator Henderson and Director of Purchases Nelson.

The three defense chiefs formed a special joint commodity section on silk with Lessing J. Rosenwald, retired chairman of Sears, Roebuck & Co., as chief. The new section will meet today with representatives of labor and manufacturers in the silk industry to work out methods of setting the industry back on its feet, maintaining employment and continuing the production of hosiery from substitutes.

The labor committee appointed to meet with the section will continue as an advisory body on labor problems in the silk industry, Henderson said.

Remedial Steps Under Way

In a joint report announcing the program, Hillman, Henderson and Nelson declared they now had "a broad, unified agency to handle the entire problem." They added:

"There are a number of things that can be done." The report stated: "Construction of an additional nylon productive capacity is now under way and the supply of nylon eventually will be much larger than it is now. The same is true of the supply of fine rayon yarns. Many mills are able to use long, staple cotton to advantage.

"We believe that in a great many hosiery mills it will be possible to shift over from the use of silk to the use of synthetic fibers without a halt in production. In many more cases it should be possible to resume operations in the not distant future."

The defense chiefs further stated that everything was being done "to keep unemployment at a minimum," and to "provide new jobs for workers who are displaced."

Nelson, in a separate report on the silk situation, said that the freezing order of silk stocks really made little difference to the industry, since silk supplies would soon have been depleted following the severing of trade relations with Japan.

"While there was still time, we made certain that our Army and Navy would have all the silk that they need," Nelson said.

The following have been invited by Mr. Hillman to serve on the labor committee:

Emil Rieve, president, Textile Workers Union; H. W. Payne, director, rayon division, Textile Workers Union; Solomon Barkin, research director, Textile Workers Union; George Baldanzi, executive vice president, Textile Workers Union; Carl Holderman, of Newark N. J., manager of the joint board, New Jersey Textile Workers Union; Alexander McKeown, president, American Federation of Hosiery Workers; William Smith, secretary-treasurer, Federation of Hosiery Workers; Alfred Hoffman, of Philadelphia, first vice president, Federation of Hosiery Workers; Frederick Umhey, executive secretary, International Ladies Garment Workers (A. F. of L.), and C. M. Fox, president, United Textile Workers of America (A. F. of L.).

Agreement Bars Gulf Shipyard Strikes, Lockouts

The Office of Production Management last night announced conclusion of an agreement covering 21 Gulf Coast shipyards to prohibit strikes and lockouts and stabilize wages for two years.

The pact, effective August 1, is designed to prevent any interruption in production of ships for Great Britain and the rapidly expanding United States Navy and merchant fleets. It is similar to the so-called "masters" agreement reached on the West Coast and now being negotiated for the Atlantic and Great Lakes areas.

Associate OPM Chief Sidney Hillman notified the 21 Gulf port yards that both the American Federation of Labor and Congress of Industrial Organizations had ratified the pact, already agreed to by the operators, Navy Department and Maritime Commission.

Yehudi Menuhin Wins Lower Draft Rating

San Jose, Calif., Aug. 6 (AP).—Yehudi Menuhin, 24-year-old violinist, was reclassified by his draft board today from 1-A, subject to call for immediate service, to 3-A.

George Payne, board chairman, said the reclassification was made because of Menuhin's dependents. The violinist carried his fight for deferred classification to the Selective Service Board in Washington after the local board had refused to take him out of the 1-A class. Menuhin returned Sunday from a South American concert tour.

Siam Dedicated To Freedom, Envoy Asserts

By Mom Rajawongse Seni Pramoj, Minister of Thailand

(Written Expressly for International News Service.)

The national policy of Thailand is at the moment a matter of particular interest throughout the world. This policy is historic and settled, and it can be simply and clearly stated. Thailand is dedicated to preserving her independence through self-reliance, and to maintaining equal friendship with all other nations. Nothing has occurred to modify this policy. It can be assumed that Thailand will stand by this commitment to herself.

The American public may find significant meaning in the fact that the word "Thai" means, literally, "free." Ancient law refers to slaves becoming "Thai," that is, becoming unshackled and free. Our people have adopted this word as the name of their country because they cherish the state of being which it signifies. This single word goes to the roots of Thailand's philosophy. It also contains the answer to many questions which are being posed respecting our country today. . . .

I should stress that there have been occasions in Thai history when practical reason has dictated the necessity of Thailand making some compromises. Thus Thailand borders were successively shrunken, in favor of French Indo-China, at the behest of France, between 1863 and 1907, until at last Thailand felt like a sleeping man unprotected, with his door open to the wilderness.

Like all small states, Thailand has, in her long and colorful past, been called upon from time to time to suffer in silence, so to speak, because her arms were not strong in comparison with the strength of other world powers.

Our people are most desirous, however, that the American people understand well their position. There have been recent intimations that Thailand, in some of her foreign relations, is tending towards aggression. This is quite incorrect.

It should now be emphasized that Thailand feels a particularly close bond of friendly relations with the United States. Complete Thai autonomy was achieved in 1937, largely through the assisting influence of the United States in trade treaty considerations of 1921.

It is also significant, I believe, that Thailand was the first nation of the East to enter into a treaty of commerce and friendship with the United States. That was in 1833.

For several years there has been, almost continuously, an American adviser occupying a high position of counsel in the Thai government. Indeed, our nation owes a considerable debt of gratitude to the United States in several respects.

This is an especial reason for the desire of Thailand to be tolerantly and completely understood in the United States. . . .

A. F. L. Urges Housing Rise

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Aug. 6.—A 600 million dollar Federal Housing program was advocated by the American Federation of Labor's executive council tonight to provide adequate shelter for defense workers.

"There is so great a shortage of even moderately decent housing for defense workers that a program of 150,000 new units is the irreducible minimum," the council said in a statement issued from its annual summer meeting.

"The Lanham bill, which is now being considered by the House of Representatives, provides for only a $300,000,000 authorization," the council said. "This, in the opinion of the executive council, will fall far short of meeting the housing crisis."

The council described present conditions as shocking. It said its survey of the situation disclosed that rents in Corpus Christi, Tex., had increased 200 per cent since the influx of defense workers, and that many of them were unable to find any shelter at all.

At Brownwood, Tex., the survey showed, landlords were getting $60 a month for places that formerly rented for $20, and at Gadsden, Ala., some workers are living in leaking slab huts, stables and garages. This community needs at least 1,000 new homes, the survey said, instead of the projected 250.

Wichita and Parsons, Kans., absorbing 15,000 airplane workers, were cited as two other districts where the situation was acute. There was a housing shortage in Burlington, Iowa, even before 20,000 defense workers came to town, the survey stated.

Roosevelt Wants St. Lawrence Project Put in Omnibus Bill

By the Associated Press

President Roosevelt wants the 285-million-dollar St. Lawrence Seaway presented to Congress as part of an omnibus rivers and harbors bill instead of in separate legislation.

He made his views known in a letter to Chairman Mansfield (Democrat), of Texas, of the House Rivers and Harbors Committee, which concluded hearings on the seaway legislation yesterday.

Mansfield said the President's suggestion would be considered at an executive session of the committee tomorrow.

Already approved by the committee for inclusion in a 281-million-dollar omnibus rivers and harbors bill were the 66-million-dollar Tennessee Tombigbee Project, the 28-million-dollar Clark Hill Reservoir Project on the Savannah River and the $23,700,00 Umatilla Dam on the Columbia River. The bill carries no funds, merely authorizing projects and making them eligible for subsequent appropriations.

Mansfield said the President gave no reason for desiring the seaway included in the omnibus bill, but some opponents of the seaway hailed the request as a sign of growing strength of the opposition forces.

They said that by adding the seaway to the omnibus bill the Administration would be in a position to trade support of the Tombigbee and other projects in return for support of the St. Lawrence project, should such action become necessary.

Leon Henderson, Federal price administrator, yesterday urged construction of the seaway as a "vital part of a foresighted program of national security and economic well-being."

He told the committee that the Nation faced the prospect of increasing its capacity to turn out military goods "at a tremendous rate" and added that the problem of productive capacity expansion was "more pressing in the field of electric power and transportation than in most other areas of economy."

"I want to say emphatically," Henderson declared, "that the St. Lawrence project, with its tremendous potentialities for the generation of electric power, the shipbuilding facilities which it will make available and the transportation capacity which it will afford, is a vital part of a foresighted program of national security and economic well-being."

lice matters.

Although declining to discuss specifically his ideas on management of the force, Kelly said he thought all members of the department when on duty—except plain clothesmen and officers detailed to special work—should wear complete uniforms.

This was in line with suggestions from the Congressional investigating committee that all police officers be as conspicuous as possible while on active duty.

"We are giving Inspector Kelly a tough job—and he knows it," said Young. "The selection was made not on friendship, but on the confidence the Commissioners have in his ability and his record as a police officer."

Maj. Brown leaves on August 15 to go to Buffalo to open convention sessions of the International Association of Chiefs of Police, of which he is president, on the eighteenth.

His presidency of that body expires August 21 and he has told the Commissioner he would apply for retirement soon after.

Immediately after greeting Kelly at the District Building yesterday, the Commissioners announced they would rescind their order placing only one man in a police scout car. Young said the plan was not effective and the old policy of a two-man crew would be readopted.

The idea of having only one man in a car was inaugurated in order to place more men on the street doing foot patrol duty, but complaints from the officers prompted the Commissioners to abandon the experiment.

In the flood of congratulations for selection of Kelly came messages from members of the House Subcommittee that recently completed an investigation of the Police Department.

"I think the Commissioners have chosen the one man in the department who can straighten out this tangle," said Representative William T. Schulte (Democrat), of Indiana, subcommittee chairman. "I know of no one who is better qualified to do a good job. I know the best wishes of the police force and the people of the District go with mine."

Representative F. Edward Hebert (Democrat), of Louisiana, also called Commissioner Young. The new chief, declared Hebert, has a "golden opportunity."

Officials Spike Aluminum Propaganda

By Alfred Friendly
Post Staff Writer

"The aluminum scrap collected from housewives is all going back to be made into new pots and pans."

"The scrap can't be used for defense purposes."

"The collection campaign is a plot of the aluminum trust to create a shortage of utensils so prices can be increased."

"It will cost more to smelt down the scrap than to make virgin aluminum from the ore."

"It's all a plot to make money for the scrap dealers and junk men."

You've heard these comments about the recent Nation-wide aluminum scrap collection? Then you have been listening to willful, or unwittingly duped, Axis propagandists.

Such is the judgment of Office of Civilian Defense officials. Besides categorically denying the above allegations—and offering facts to prove it—they also revealed yesterday that the propaganda stemmed from what they believe to have been a well-organized antidefense campaign.

Unwilling to discuss it while the scrap collections were in progress, lest even more fuel be added to the fire, defense officials now admit their serious concern over the activity of the "anticollection lobby," and opened their files containing excerpts from:

Nazi newspapers published in this country.

Italian language newspapers in the United States.

The Communist Daily Worker (from issues published before the outbreak of the Russo-German War).

Father Coughlin's isolationist, Nazi-sympathetic paper, Social Justice and several other isolationist newspapers.

All the excerpts whistled similar tunes. The burden was that there was plenty of aluminum anyway, that the scrap was not capable of being utilized for defense purposes, that Jewish junk dealers were out to make money from the campaign, and that housewives were being suckred into a position where they would have to buy new utensils at higher prices.

Reason for the Axis interest in sabotaging the campaign, defense officials believe, is that the defense program is very definitely relying on the scrap to piece out armament demands for the vital metal this year.

They cite OPM Director General William S. Knudsen's estimate that production of virgin aluminum from July 1 to December 31 this year will equal only 327,000,000 pounds, as against requirements of 400,000,000 pounds, and that ingots to be produced from the scrap metal may bring the total up to the amount required.

As to the other allegations:

No dealers or junkmen were in anyway involved in the campaign. Scrap was sold directly to smelters by the OPM and Treasury Department. Thus there was no opporunity for middlemen's profit.

Only smelters with defense priority ratings received the scrap. Thus there is no possibility of the metal being remelted and sold to producers of civilian equipment, such as cooking utensils. It must all be sold under defense priority orders.

The scrap metal is most certainly utilizable for defense purposes, either freeing equivalent amounts of virgin aluminum for use where scrap is not suitable, or else going directly into various airplane, battleship, tank, shell fuse, bomb fuse or portable military equipment parts, or into equipment carried by the individual soldiers.

Finally, smelters, eager to get the scrap, insist that it costs less to smelt it, or even just sort it, into usable metal, than to make virgin aluminum from bauxite ore. Even if the cost were higher, however, the need for scrap remains. The dollar question is not an issue. There is simply not enough capacity to convert the bauxite necessary for full aluminum demands. There is, however, smelting capacity for scrap. The bauxite-aluminum process depends largely on electric power-enormous quantities of it—which power is not now available, pending the construction of new dams and generators.

inconvenienced, that the need of the Government for space at this time of emergency must be met. It can be met only by rental or by new construction."

Attorneys informally have expressed the opinion that the commitment is binding and last night experts declared final outcome of the controversy is "still a guess" with odds favoring eventual Government occupancy of the building.

Without mentioning names, the House committee criticized PBA officials for dickering for the hotel with an agent, who, in its view, lacked authority to make the deal.

At the same time the committee criticized Federal officials for failing to give consideration to "the hardships that might be caused by the dispossession of a large number of tenants."

Earlier, the committee declined to consider as evidence a document presented by Harry L. Newman, president of the corporation that purchased control of the building July 3 and entered into the lease agreement. The document, copy of a telegram from an attorney for the building's former owners, was intended to show that Newman held an option to negotiate for disposal of the property.

The committee ruled that inasmuch as the copy of the telegram was received after close of hearings Tuesday, it could not be considered as a part of its record of investigation of the hotel deal.

"Evidence recently given before this committee," one of the resolutions declared, "discloses certain conduct on the part of those persons recently coming into control" of the hotel "which is wholly reprehensible and in violation of the rights of certain tenants with leases" in the apartment.

"This committee recommends," it declared, "that the representatives of the United States Government withdraw from all proposals or understandings to lease said property, unless, in the opinion of the Attorney General of the United States, a binding and legal agreement to lease has already been entered into."

In the second resolution, the committee's recommendation was:

"That in future transactions looking toward the lease of privately owned buildings by the Government, a careful investigation be made by the proper officials of the Government as to the authority of the person with whom they deal, to act in behalf of the owner of the building to be leased, and also of any outstanding leases in said building that might be held by tenants, and that consideration be given before executing such leases, to the hardships that might be caused by the dispossession of a large number of tenants."

Even Republican members of the committee were confident the scant reference in on of the resolutions to an inquiry by the Attorney General was sufficient to guarantee a full-blown Department of Justice investigation.

Aside from the fact that a study of the legality of PBA's agreement to lease would be likely to entail a fairly comprehensive investigation, committee members held that department officials would welcome the chance for an inquiry.

They recalled that on several occasions, the name of Senator Millard Tydings (Democrat), of Maryland, was brought into the investigation hearings. Tydings, the hearing brought out, inspected the building in the company of Newman. Furthermore, Robert L. Grosjean, Tydings' brother-in-law, has been identified as the Grosjean mentioned during the inquiry as one of the directors of the new building corporation.

Tydings, it was recalled, fought elevation of former Attorney General Robert Jackson to be justice of the Supreme Court when Jackson's nomination was before the Senate for confirmation.

Delaying Tactics Blocked

Furthermore, President Roosevelt, it was felt, will not be inclined to discourage any investigation that might concern the Senator who was a central figure in the memorable Supreme Court packing fight which culminated in a White House attempt to "purge" Tydings in the 1938 primaries.

Delaying tactics by several Democratic members of the committee blocked action on the resolutions at a stormy executive session yesterday morning. When one committee member raised the point that the meeting was continuing while the House was in session, contrary to rules, Representative Lanham (Democrat), of Texas, committee chairman, was directed to ask House consent to meet in the afternoon.

The resolutions adopted were offered by Representative Downs, of Connecticut, and Wright, of Pennsylvania (Democrats). Downs was the sponsor of the resolution calling for the inquiry.

Senate Rejects 24-Month Draft Limit

he asserted. "Yet Senators here are arguing over whether we should extend service by 6 months, or 12 months or 18."

The Florida New Dealer said the greatest threat to Army morale comes, not from an extension of service "but when former Presidents, national heroes, men of letters and educators tell the soldiers they are victims of a sinister fraud.

"Their words are as devastating in their effect," he continued, "as those Goebbels himself might utter."

Senator Adams (Democrat), of Colorado, said he did not favor any extension of service but would vote for the Burton amendment because "it would lessen the imposition on the selectees."

"I am fearful this step will be another and perhaps the last step to war," he said.

When Adams said he did not believe any emergency existed to justify retention of selectees beyond a year, Senator Lee (Democrat) asked if the Colorado Senator "was setting up his judgment against that of the War Department."

"When you want to fight a war you call in the Army," Adams answered, "but I wouldn't go the Army for the decision as to whether or when we should fight or for the decision on our conscription policy. I do not subordinate my own judgment where boys' lives are involved."

Senator Clark (Democrat), of Missouri, denied that the United States is in greater peril than a year ago when one year of military training was approved and when, he said, "the experts" were predicting immediate invasion and defeat of Britain.

"It is nonsense, folderol and poppycock to say we are in greater danger today," he told the Senate. He said he was sorry he had voted for the Taft amendment, calling for a six-month extension of service, which was defeated Tuesday, and would vote against the bill.

Senator Austin (Republican), of Vermont, ranking minority member of the Military Committee, said he believed a 12-month extension, or 24-month limit, was "adequate" and that some specific time limit was essential. He said:

"From a certain point of view it was very important—I had it direct from the camps—that the soldiers were entitled to have declared to them that there would be a definite time when their service in time of peace was terminated."

Sea Parley Rumors Gain Momentum

in American and English history.

If the one-tenth had the right slant, all the speculation that went on was building up to a terrific letdown.

Tonight the only one of the missing quartet of American military and naval men who could be located was Secretary Knox, who was reached by telephone at the Marshall House in York Harbor, Me.

The Secretary, a newspaperman himself and thus undoubtedly realizing that he could have put a damper on most of the rumors with a choicely worded denial, was asked whether he had taken part in any sea-meeting with the President or whether he would do so. He said:

"I can give you no comment whatever."

It was explained to him that all sorts of stories were going about, but he said:

"Sorry—that's all I have to say."

Then he hung up.

The other three were still unlocated, and in the cases of two of them, Gens. Marshall and Arnold, members of the War Department were either in complete ignorance of their whereabouts or were doing some fancy evading, if not fibbing.

Inquiries concerning the generals elicited the following unofficial and unsatisfying information:

That they were on a routine inspection tour. That they might have taken time out to do a little fishing near Gen. Marshall's home at Leesburg, Va., 36 miles from Washington. That Gen. Arnold was away last week but positively was in Washington on Monday, the implication of his presence on Monday being that he couldn't very well have gone to sea.

But—a telephone inquiry at Gen. Arnold's home brought the following answer from a woman who said she was the maid:

"Gen. Arnold left here Sunday morning and won't be back until late in the week."

And—a few hours later another telephone call was answered by Mrs. Arnold, who when asked where the general was, said:

"He left here suddenly on Sunday morning on official business. I wish you could tell me where he is."

New York was heard from next. There it was learned that Gens. Marshall and Arnold flew into La-Guardia Field on Sunday afternoon. Where they came from could not be learned. Nor could it be discovered where they went.

Admiral Stark's absence was the most tersely explained—officially. At the Navy Department, it was said:

"He is on leave and will not be back for some time."

Finns Call Russians A Formidable Foe

Fighting in Lake Ladoga Area Is Done in American Indian Style

By Louis P. Lochner
Associated Press Staff Writer

With the Finnish army on the Russian front (By Telephone via Helsinki to Berlin), Aug. 6.—War in the Lake Ladoga area is different from anything I have encountered at any front: east, west, or southeast.

The Finns and Russians are fighting with the most modern weapons in much the same manner as the American Indians and their white adversaries fought long ago in the forests with crude weapons.

The front is everywhere and nowhere. You never know where danger may lurk.

That queer shape some 50 yards ahead in the trees may be merely a natural bunching of leaves and twigs, or it may be a camouflaged Russian who is ready to pull the trigger the moment his sharp eyes spy you.

Hiding in one of the innumerable small dugouts the Finns have constructed near their staff headquarters, you may think you are safe, only to have Russian artillery, shooting from miles away, shatter a nearby tree so that you narrowly escape being crushed as it falls.

Only yesterday three German news men visiting the Finnish front were crossing from one side to the other of a road leading through the forest when a shell hit the road and wounded one of them.

Gradually your eyes become accustomed t oseeing that these northern forests are studded with camouflaged staff headquarters, tents, cars, trucks, artillery and machine gun positions.

It is obvious that blitzkrieg methods are applicable only to a limited degree in terrain such as this.

Moreover, every general and Finnish statesman will tell you that this little republic cannot afford to lose many men. In fact, to recover from this war and the winter war of 1939-40, Finnish sociologists will tell you that every married couple must produce t lest six children.

Hence, Finlnd's general staff relies on every native's excellent knowledge of the woods to conquer square yard after square yard of territory with a minimum loss of life.

"The forest is the Finnish soldier's friend," one hears again and again. It is claimed that the Russians are not as much at home in the woods and that success has been on the Finnish side.

Nevertheless, the key position of Leningrad is still a considerable distance away.

Five days with Field Marshall Mannerheim's small but efficient force of Finns has proved to me that the Russians are mighty tough customers. They stay put even when to do so means sure death.

At defensive tactics the Russians are regarded as unparalleled from commanding generals down to the simplest soldiers. Every Finn admits that the Russian is a formidable enemy who fights fatalistically, without fear of death, who has been excellently trained all these years, who is eminently well equipped.

Russian Rifles Excellent

The Russian uuniform of a rather muddy brown is admittedly better suited to this landscape than either Finland's bluish-gray or Germany's field gray.

The rifles of individual Russian soldiers are so good that any Finn is happy when he can capture one. Russian munitions are said to be more than sufficient.

I visited the northernmost tip of the Stalin line—a giant fortification system extending all the way from Lake Ladoga to the Black Sea—as we pushed southward into old Russia.

What I saw of abandoned bunkers and pillboxes was quite on a par with the Maginot, Siegfried and Metaxas systems.

But in this particular area the Finns adopted the same tactics of circumvention and surprise that the Germans employed against France and Greece.

of it and told the girl his name was "Joe." He said he worked in a Georgia Avenue drugstore.

Later he attacked her a second time and went away, warning her not to call for help or leave the scene for half an hour, police said.

The girl ran to the riding academy and told of the attack. As police investigated, she was taken to Gallinger Hospital and treated for injuries inflicted by her attacker. Physicians confirmed that she had been raped.

A few minutes after police had broadcast a lookout for the attacker, Detective Francis Gaver, of the Twelfth Precinct picked up the suspect near Eastern Avenue and Monroe Street Northeast.

His description tallied with that given by the girl of her attacker in that he wore a tan slack suit. He also was carrying a bottle of wine, and there were bloodstains on his clothes and on his body.

Helmet Fits Him

The girl said her attacker was wearing a white sun helmet. The suspect was bareheaded when arrested, but a white sun helmet found near the scene of the attack was tried on his head and police said it fitted.

Dr. Richard M. Rosenberg, deputy coroner, took strands of hair from the helmet to make laboratory comparisons of it and the suspect's hair. Dr. Rosenberg also confirmed by laboratory tests that the man's clothing and person bore bloodstains.

Hysterical, the attacker's victim viewed the suspect in a line-up of half a dozen rounded up in the park but was unable to identify any of them as the man who assaulted her.

Another line-up is scheduled for tonight, when it is hoped the girl will have recovered sufficiently to be of assistance to police.

In addition to this suspect, tonight's lineup will include a Negro arrested in Silver Spring, Md., last night's line-up will include a Negro he also answered the description given by the girl but was so intoxicated, police said, that he could not answer questions coherently.

Broken Tooth Is Clew

The line-up will be viewed also by a woman who fought off an attacker about ten days ago in the same vicinity of Rock Creek Park.

In both cases, police said, the attacker had a broken tooth. The suspect held at Twelfth Precinct Station has a broken tooth.

Police said the man stoutly protested his innocence in both cases. However, they said, his explanation of the bloodstains found on him proved to be fabrication. In addition, they said, his statement that when arrested he was en route to see his wife and give her some money was questionable.

He told them, police said, that he telephoned his wife between 10 and 10:30 a. m., at her place of employment in Mount Rainier, Md., to inform her of his intentions. The wife was quoted by police as saying her husband telephoned about 11 a. m., that he seemed excited and mentioned nothing about bringing money to her.

In fact, police quoted her as saying she offered to give him money that morning but he refused. Later, police reported, the suspect said he was going to see his wife not to take her money but to ask her for some.

Another Man Accused

Police said the man also told them he usually walked through Rock Creek Park in going to work on a job on Woodley Road but that he did not go to work yesterday.

Meanwhile, Park Police investigating the attack on an 18-year-old girl on the Washington Monument Grounds Sunday night charged Aubrey Duncan, 22, of 805 Mount Vernon Place Northwest, with assault with intent to rape.

Duncan denies the charge. He was arrested near the scene of the attack, on the same night, where he was found by the girl's relatives who beat him up before calling police. He was treated at Gallinger Hospital, then taken back to the Third Precinct police station.

He will be arraigned in police court this morning.

Park Policemen B. J. Beckman and A. G. Havens, who arrested Duncan, are also working on the Rock Creek rape case with Lieut. John E. Scott, of the Sixth Precinct; Detective Sergts. John Cayton and George W. Cook, of the Detective Bureau, and Policemen Frank Lane and Ralph Howard, of Montgomery County.

CIO Aide Asks U. S. Cushion Auto Job Cut

By the Associated Press

Buffalo, N. Y., Aug. 6.—A. C. I. O. United Automobile Workers official said today the Government "will have to dictate steps" if management fails to cooperate in a plan to prevent unemployment as a result of curtailment in automobile production.

Walter P. Reuther, director of the General Motors division of the union, said at a press conference that his plan prevented several months ago to prevent dislocation of the automobile industry during the defense emergency was "resisted by organized management . . . whose chief objection was that business could be carried on as usual."

An executive board member of the U. A. W.-C. I. O., Reuther told its sixth annual convention he had urged that plants begin retooling and gradually swing to defense needs, avoiding "wastage and unemployment" through slashes in car production.

An 'Empty Gesture'

"Management offered to do away with 1943 models, an empty gesture to make the public believe it was putting its best foot forward," he declared.

A 50 per cent curtailment, he asserted, will cause 95,000 workers in the General Motors plants alone, to lose their jobs.

Declaring that "mass demoralization will follow if 200,000 to 300,000 people are dumped on the streets," Reuther said the union would continue to demand that a car reduction be effected on a Nation-wide cooperative basis.

Suggesting the Government should consider the tooling problem first, he recommended steel production be increased, and steel be distributed equitably to all consumer industries including automobile plants.

Vote Group Named

The auto workers approved today appointment of a three-member committee to conduct an election for delegates among members of the Allis-Chalmers Milwaukee Local 248 whose delegation was denied representation at the union's convention.

The election will be held at Milwaukee as soon as possible to permit the delegates to participate in the sessions expected to close late next week.

The convention refused yesterday by a vote of 1,737 to 1,243, to seat ten delegates from the Allis-Chalmers local, accused of communistic leadership. The local, which staged a 79-day strike this year, claims to represent 8,000 workers.

Tax Setup Due for Complete Overhaul in 1942

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

A complete overhaul of the national tax structure in 1942 was projected yesterday as the Senate Finance Committee began work on the $3,229,299,000 defense revenue bill.

Tapping new revenue sources and rewriting into permanent tax law the eight of more revenue acts of the last eight years, the new program would be aimed at a stabilized tax system.

Chairman George of the Senate Finance Committee said defense needs for immediate revenue prevent comprehensive tax revision in the pending bill but predicted initial studies of the broader program will be launched immediately following passage of the present one.

Aimed at a stable tax system, subject only to occasional administrative changes and productive of more or less revenue at the will of Congress by merely raising or lowering rates, the new program would be framed at joint consultations between Treasury and Congressional tax spokesmen.

Friends of the Georgia Senator said his desire to stabilize the tax structure and give the Nation a more permanent basis of taxation, essential to the needs of Government and business alike, influenced his retirement as chairman of Senate Foreign Relations to become head of the Finance committee.

In conjunction with the study, George is expected to propose a salary withholding tax, similar to the Social Security payroll taxes, which would supplement and partly displace the existing income tax system and avert recourse to a general sales tax.

George said the pay roll tax could be imposed upon all above a given salary level. Amounts collected could be used as credit against the regular income tax, while self-employed and professional people would continue to pay income tax exclusively, as would persons drawing income from investments. The plan, he said, would raise vastly more revenue than the present system. Further, he said, it would provide "quick" return for the Treasury at monthly intervals, permit elimination of some "nuisance" excise levies and head off what otherwise might be inevitable—a general manufacturers' tax levy.

The Georgian ruled out consideration of a pay roll tax in the pending bill, along with any present effort to stabilize the tax system, because of the need for defense revenue. He pointed out each week's delay in passage of the present bill meant loss of millions in excises.

The Senate Finance Committee, meanwhile, preparatory to hearing Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau tomorrow, read through individual income tax, corporation tax and excess profits provisions of the House-approved bill. Preliminary examination of the measure will be completed today and in two or three weeks the bill, with committee changes, will be moved before the Senate.

Sentiment of committee members generally was in opposition to any Senate attempt to revive the House-rejected joint income tax provision, because of the stand taken by the House. Only in the event the Treasury recommends joint returns, with earned income modifications proposed by the President, is it likely to receive consideration.

The New Drama Season Is Almost Over Horizon

Baltimore Beats Capital to Punch by Week; Abbott and Costello Organize Vital Unit; News Notes and Idle Chatter of the Theater

ALL THEY'VE BEEN SAYING about a burgeoning season of living drama for the season of 1941-42 seems, from this distance, to be true.

The last time we managed to drive Manager Edmund Plohn, of the National, and his wire-haired ham, Jo-Jo, the four-legged actor that scorns everything but Shakespearean roles, up against a spotlight and hold them there a minute, their consensus was that the new season on E Street will get under way on September 8, with no such foolishness about it as there was last year. They even went so far as to guess at the attractions that will fill out the month—something we won't attempt here and now, having in mind that old one that says "There's many a slip, etc."

AL JOLSON

As such things go, it does seem reasonably safe, however, to say that the most notable event of the early weeks of the new semester, on paper, continues to be the premiere of Maxwell Anderson's new play, "Candle in the Wind," starring Helen Hayes, under the direction of Alfred Lunt, penciled in for the week of Monday, October 6.

Ed Wynn is supposed to be coming along and you may have noticed that Al Jolson's frames already are staring out of the lobby of the Capital's only tabernacle of the animated drama at the passing heat sufferers.

This may all sound a shade tentative, but it also appears to be true. And, so far, we haven't even had a chance to get down to Hains Point. It must be later than we think!

Even with this comparatively early start in Washington, the season is practically beating the gun in Baltimore. On August 25, Frank Craven will turn on the lights and break out the flags at the Maryland Theater in the Monumental City, in "Village Green," a new play by Carl Allensworth, so highly thought of that it will be given no other pre-Broadway showing, but proceed directly from the Maryland to the Henry Miller Theater, New York, to open on Labor Day. Making his first appearance on a nearby stage since his memorable performance in Thornton Wilder's "Our Town," Frank Craven plays a homespun justice of the peace in "Village Green." So we think we'll slip over to Baltimore and see him—just as a sort of tune-up bout.

Service Wins Its Just Reward

Possibly because he has played practically all of the English-made mystery-thrillers on his screen almost as fast as they have come out, the producers of "Night Train" have accorded Henry Hiser's Hiser Theater, in Bethesda, the privilege of celebrating the Washington premiere of their latest spy-chiller, "Mail Train." This new item, opening Sunday, stars Raymond Huntley, who appeared as the Nazi officer in "Night Train" and in "Voice in the Night." Also in this film are Britain's favorite comedy team, Gordon Harker and Alastair Sim, cast as Inspector Hornleigh and Sergt. Bingham, of Scotland Yard.

If there is one thing we couldn't have gotten along without, it is that life membership card (No. 762) in the National Association of Drugstore Cowboys, mailed us by the cherubic Lou Costello, president, and the acidulous Bud Abbott, secretary . . . It hasn't anything to do with the fact that their next picure is "Ride 'Em, Cowboy"—much . . . But it does outline an elegant ten-plank platform, beginning with a demand for roped-off spaces in front of drugstores so cowboys may whistle at passing femmes without being jostled by run-of-the-mill pedestrians—I though "yoo-hoo" is what we did—and ending with a plea for the construction of grandstands for pin-ball kibitzers . . . They evidently forgot the vital matter of stand-up drinking at soda bars!

Patience Overcometh All Things

After years of incapacity through accident and illness, Anna Q. Nilsson, one of the most beautiful and talented stars of the old silent days, has been signed by the Warner Brothers for an important role in "They Died With Their Boots On," starring Errol Flynn. It is almost a decade since Miss Nilsson has been seen on the screen. It is a vivid memory that when she last visited Washington as a member of that "Moulin Rouge" entourage, years ago, her Spartan spirit had not been dulled by the misfortunes that seemed to have put a permanent period to her career. She was the life of the party. A spirit like that deserves to survive.

And that reminds me. On the recommendation of Bette Davis the Warners have cast young Richard Travis opposite her as the newspaper reporter in the film version of "The Man Who Came to Dinner." The role is the most important male assignment in the play, next to the title part, played by Monty Woolley. Miss Davis never had met the six-foot-three, blond Arkansan when she put in her boost for him, but based it entirely upon a screen test of him she had seen. It would be nice to be able to borrow Mr. Travis' horseshoe, rabbit's foot and four-leaf clover.

But-You-Are-Welcome-to-Them Note

Personally, all we have to lend is an old crutch and a used plaster cast!

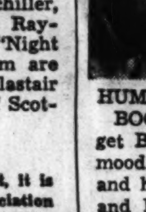
Wideawake Stars of 'Sleeper'

ANN RUTHERFORD AND RED SKELTON reflecting their peculiar reactions to the arduous business of a broadcast in "Whistling in the Dark," the surprise comedy, opening this morning on the screen at Loew's Capitol Theater. Master Skelton, Washington's favorite funny man, attains quick Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer stardom in this story of a brash young man who is heroically scared stiff

LOUELLA O. PARSONS

Sarong vs. Sarong

Hollywood, Aug. 6 (INS).—Dorothy Lamour had better look out. Betty Grable goes into a sarong for "Song of the Islands," which Twentieth assures me will be the farthest thing south in a South Sea musical. Not only has Darryl Zanuck decided that it is time to get Betty out of the serious mood of "Yank in the RAF" and her picture, "Hot Spot," and let her sing and dance again—but she'll do her hula numbers in technicolor to tunes specially written by Mack Gordon and Harry Owens (Hawaii's own) melody maestro.



HUMPHREY BOGART

Bill Le Baron, who will produce "Song of the Islands," won't admit it—but he's moving heaven and earth to get Robert Cummings to costar with Betty. They were a terrific team in "Moon Over Miami." Offhand I can't think of any young actor who has come along faster during the past year than Bob. After "Kings Row," which he's making at Warners, he should be able to write his own ticket. Of course, there's the little matter of a loan to be negotiated with Universal before Bob could go visiting on the Twentieth lot again.

Ann Sheridan and Humphrey Bogart, who cracked box-office records together in "They Drive by Night," will be teamed again in "Nobody Lives Forever," the W. R. Burnett story about a night club owner, who marries his star singer. Believe it or not, this yarn, just purchased by Jack Warner, has a Hollywood background. The singer (Annie) is signed for the movies and her career almost breaks up her marriage. Bogart's role is highly romantic and I suspect, now that George Raft is missing from the Warner lineup, that Bogie will grow more and more heroic on the screen. He's fourth in fan mail popularity on the lot and most of the mail is from women.

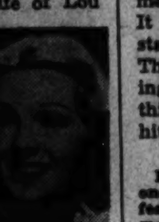
There is a love light in Greta Garbo's eyes again. This time she's dining quietly in hideaway places with her rhumba teacher, Robert Alton. I always seem to be chronicling Garbo's changes of heart. I was the first to tell when she and Rouben Mamoulian took that automobile trip together; the first to mention she and Leopold Stokowski were in Italy; the first to mention when she lost her heart to food faddiist, Gaylord Hauser, and now I am told the Hauser romance is cooling and Garbo is finding the rhumba teacher delightful company.

Simone Simon who has staged more "comebacks" than Sarah Bernhardt staged "farewells," is making another rally in "The Marines Are Ready," at R-K-O. This is the opus with Jack and Tim Holt, Vic McLaglen and Eddie Lowe and Binnie Barnes—and Simone gets the romantic lead opposite Tim Holt. During my Arrowhead holiday, William Dieterle told me Simone gives a really excellent performance in "The Devil and Daniel Webster."

HEDDA HOPPER

Close Play at First

Hollywood, Calif., Aug. 6.—Sam Goldwyn's had so many letters requesting that Eddie Albert play the life of Lou Gehrig that he started investigating, and finds the man who's putting on the campaign for Albert is Ed Barrow, Yankees' manager. He's gotten his relatives and friends to write in. You know, it isn't such a bad idea. Eddie looks like Gehrig, and given the part, he'd become a star, and a valuable piece of property.



ILONA MASSEY

While I've got the bit in my teeth. I'd like to make a suggestion to Darryl Zanuck. Now everybody loves Charlotte Greenwood, so how about starring her in "Tish?" Those stories have been kicked around so long they've become stepchildren . . . Another performer I'd like to speak about is Jerry Lester. You have to go only as far as Charlie Foy's night club in the Valley to see him. He's one of the quickest thinking comedians I've come across, packs the place to the sidewalk.

A slightly inebriated guest got mixed up with his routine and Jerry handled it so well many thought it was part of the act. There applauding him were Fibber McGee and Molly, Harry "Hopalong" Sherman with Lewis Stone, a sheriff's posse of 25, the Art Bakers, Sid Silvers, etc. He took on Jack Oakie the other evening. Jack left through a side door, but quickly.

Our critics were treated to a little of our old-time showmanship, which we need so badly these days, when "New Wine" was shown at the old Padre Vineyard. Five hundred correspondents, their wives and friends were privileged to see a musical picture that's really beautiful. Of course, you can't do much better than to have a picture played to the background of Schubert music, and the beauty of Ilona Massey and amazing performance of Albert Basserman, as Beethoven, were things to remember. You wouldn't believe it, but Alan Curtis does look like Schubert. But it's the story and the way it's done that will have you raving.

Bill Hampton and George Duning, two of Kay Kyser's boys, who wrote "I Can't Remember to Forget" and "Tell It to the Marines," have started a self-publishing firm. Their first is "The Old Looking Glass," a homey, catchy thing, and Kay thinks they'll hit the jackpot.

Kenneth Wilkinson, Army's No. one picturegoer who attended 210 feature-length films in eight months, has been feted here all week. Wilkinson explained, "I don't drink, can't dance, so go to pictures to forget my troubles." Asked what stars impressed him most, he said "All have." But remembers that Deanna Durbin said, "I hope I'll see you again."

Alan Hale, introducing Dennis Morgan to some flyers in Ottawa, Canada, where both are working in "Captains of the Clouds," said, "He's a big broth of a laddie—the well-meaning kind who always says the wrong thing. Come out, Dennis, and say the wrong thing!" Dennis stepped out on the stage, winked at the audience, and burst into song.

To augment her income, Joan Carroll is making bookmarks of woolen yarn and selling 'em at ten cents per mark . . . Leon Erroll and W. C. Fields are reunited in "The Great Man," after 27 years.

Betty Grable's big smile these days is because her cook has just renewed her option on her.

The Clark Gables took their usual outing the other night. Went to see Ethel Waters in "Cabin in the Sky" and then to Ciro's, causing "Oh's" and "Ah's" among the fans around the front door.

Natalie Visart, costume designer on "Reap the Wild Wind," had a problem. There's a scene where Paulette Goddard, in voluminous hoopskirt, has to be spanked. On cue, the skirt flies up in the air. Well, it wouldn't fly. So Natalie took her problem to the machine shop, and what do you think they've rigged up inside the skirt? A mousetrap. And on cue, it lets go!

Mary Wrickes, who played the nurse on the stage in "The Man Who Came to Dinner," has checked in at Warners to play same role on screen. She takes the world's record for being insulted. Woolley calls her "a great, dribbling cow," tells her she has the touch of "a love-starved cobra," and such like sweet nothings. And here she is—back for more!

LEONARD LYONS, whose Broadway column appears regularly on this page, is on vacation until September 1. His pithy paragraphs will be resumed here on that date.

Versatile Lionel

Lionel Barrymore appeared both as composer and performer at a Hollywood Bowl philharmonic concert. As a performer he was narrator for Prokofieff's symphony, based on a fairy tale, entitled "Peter and the Wolf." As a composer, took a bow following the playing of his composition, "Tableau Russe," by the bowl orchestra. This music, played by a symphony orchestra in the new "Dr. Kildare" picture, was conducted by Nat. W. Finston.

Kindling-Wood Virtuoso

BabesonBroadway Gets Under Way

Mickey Rooney and Judy Garland—motion pictures' greatest box office combination—began their seventh picture as a team with the start of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "Babes On Broadway." The film also marks their third co-starring in a lavish musical, following "Babes in Arms" and "Strike Up the Band."

Busbey Berkeley directs and Arthur Freed produces "Babes On Broadway," the same combination that scored with the previous two Rooney-Garland musicals.

Weighty Gown

Rise Stevens, in "Chocolate Soldier," in which she sings opposite Nelson Eddy, wears an Adrian-designed gown that weights 15 pounds. It is a modern dinner dress made entirely of bugle beads.

Ann Sheridan Is Adopted by Navy

Officers of the United States Naval Training Station at San Diego have adopted Ann Sheridan, Warner Bros.' star, into the Navy.

Ann, who was in San Diego with the "Navy Blues" company, received a certificate citing her as "honor man of her company" for "having satisfactorily completed a course of instruction in entertaining the recruit personnel."

Miss Sheridan is having her naval honor certificate framed in silver with the naval insignia.

Paulette Does Take-Off Act

Paulette Goddard does a "strip tease" in Technicolor for a scene of Cecil B. De Mille's "Reap the Wild Wind."

But the Hays office, which recently banned sweaters for glamour girls, isn't likely to do so much as raise an eyebrow when Paulette begins to take off her clothes.

She plays a Key West, Fla., belle of the 1840's in the De Mille sea picture, and as such is bundled in all the crinoline and hoopskirts of the period. Although she is shown taking off four—count 'em—outer garments, she's amply swathed in camisole and pantalettes when the scene "blacks out."

'Bomber Date'

Robert Taylor is gladly cutting down on his own flying these days because of more important demands on his instructor, Max Constat, who is piloting huge bombers across the country for transshipment to England. "Max can't break dates too often to suit me," said Taylor. "Every broken date means another bomber has come off the assembly line."

Sylvan Ends Season With Bard's Fantasy

By Richard L. Coe

England's Shakespeare, Germany's Mendelssohn and a variety of American accents from north, east, south and west contributed to the Sylvan Theater's final and most commendable offering of the season last night. It was also the largest crowd of the Summer Festival—approximately 5,000—which trouped down to the Monument Grounds for The Washington Players' production of "A Midsummer Night's Dream."

The Washington Players is a group rightly named. In its roster are the city's most experienced resident actors and so able a cast were producer Bess Davis Schreiner and Director Denis E. Connell able to lure into "A Midsummer Night's Dream" that it seems a pity for the production to be limited to a one-night stand. With a setting only so natural an amphitheater could provide and costumes charmingly adapted to the play, a repeat performance would surely find an audience.

Of course, many a man believes "A Midsummer Night's Dream" is more fascinating in the reading than in the playing. When Pepys saw the play he noted in his Diary that "I had never seen it before, nor shall again, for it is the most insipid ridiculous play that ever I saw in my life." Hazlitt was more to the point: "Fancy cannot be embodied any more than a simile can be painted . . . fairies are not incredible, but fairies 6 feet high are so."

Hunter Dancers Effective

To avoid that particular incongruity, the Schreiner-Connell production is fortunate in the Alice Louise Hunter Dancers, a half-dozen of whom are wee mites supremely in the naive, dream-like quality of the revel. Tripping about in gossamer, darting into the trees that are the Sylvan's "wings," Miss Hunter's group sets the mood of the fantasy admirably.

Last night's adaptation was by Miss Schreiner, running some two hours and played without intermission. Its editing has an eye to speed without sacrifice of plot clarity—at least what glimmer of clarity the playwright gave to any of his comedies. The Mendelssohn overture and incidental music, thoroughly romantic in character, was played by the Washington Civic Orchestra, Jean Mangansaro conducting.

It would indeed be difficult to pick and choose among the players, but it is scarcely a problem as to which stopped last night's show. Appropriately playing a dog was E Street's favorite canine, Jo-Jo. The writer has had a petting acquaintance with this amiable terrier for some years, but never before has he heard him so veciferous. Shakespeare's directions simply refer to him as "A Dog," but ever the trouper, Jo-Jo filled in his own business in rough Elizabethan style.

Miss Hall Scores

Lansing Hall was a vision of loveliness, to coin a phrase, as Titania, and J. Edmund Veitch, as Bottom, stressed the broad comedy wisely for the far-flung audience. Yerby Pannill and Adele Whiteside McNaughton were the love-torn Hermia and Helena, while William Morrow McGhee and Eugene Kressin played Lysander and Demetrius. Thomas M. Cahill's Egeus was the most admirably spoken of the parts, the acme of dignity. Maurice Jarvis, too, was a thoroughly able Theseus and Hugh C. Smith a daft, if large, Puck.

Christine Irish played Hippolyta and also sang a verse to the Mendelssohn music. Wayne Bobst, Kent Dyer, Harry Crow, Herman Riess, Charles Herndon, Doris McWhirt, Kitty Davis, Marojrie McGann and Miss Hunter completed the cast of principals.

Among the dancers were Ramona North, Valentine Bertran, Jeanne Nuchols, Betty Ann Eilers, Betty Lou George, Ilse Kirchhofer, Betty O'Neal Israel, Constance and Doerman, Betty and Julia Gerardt, Gordon Hamilton, Janice North and Ann Caldwell. Mary Davis' costumes were fancifully conceived and Mr. Connell's direction always flowing.

Altogether, with such a setting, "A Midsummer Night's Dream" deserves another such an evening.

Carey Proves He Knows Navajoes

Harry Carey knows his Navajoes, in whose country he annually makes tripe buying cattle and sheep for his ranch. Last year, while on his trip, Carey loaned an old Indian $125 which the Indian needed to buy some fencing. Mrs. Carey insisted that he would never see his money again. But recently, as Carey started to leave his ranch for Paramount Studio, where he is working in "Among the Living," a young Navajo Indian appeared. He brought with him a trader's check for the amount, plus interest.

Columbia

That wondrous man who steals the Star of Asia and wins the Victoria Cross is back in town. With him is the lady who puts a drunken duchess to sleep, lifts her priceless gem, all but swims the China Seas and then reforms a criminal of some years' standing who's been doing very well in his chosen profession. Clark Gable and Rosalind Russell might have met in Oshkosh for this charade, but M-G-M calls it "They Met in Bombay" and returns the film to F Street this morning at the Columbia.

Grimm and Anderson, had they been striving to entertain the dream-minded adult, well might have collaborated for this fantastic adventure of upper-crust crooks. With a group of cosmopolites gathering in the mystic East for a social event of shattering importance, this comedy has a situation of proven popularity. The duchess, brightly played by Jessie Ralph, takes her exit all too soon for the novelty of the tale, which subsequently settles down to prove, and quite reluctantly one gathers, that crime does not pay. Or, at least, that it shouldn't.

Once beguiled by the less factual aspects of this improbable story, you'll find the film frequently amusing, lightweight entertainment.

'Rio Rita' Bought For M-G-M Film

One of the most famous musical romances in theatrical history was acquired for screen production last week when M-G-M contracted for the film rights to "Rio Rita." The musical play, written by Guy Bolton and Fred Thompson, with music and lyrics by Harry Tierney and Joseph McCarthy, was first presented by Florenz Ziegfeld in New York in 1927. It ran a year and two weeks to crowded houses, and was played by road companies in principal cities all over the United States.

Screen Tough Guy Can't Ride Trains

Warren Hymer is thankful that the subway car on which he now is working for his role in "Skylark" moves only 30 feet back and forth across a sound stage. If it was an actual moving, rolling, jiggling subway train out in the open, he would have to give up his role. The fact is that this husky portrayer of tough muggs gets violently sick on any of the train family, including trains, subways or streetcars.

Little

Robert Donat's unforgettable portrayal of the schoolmaster in "Goodbye, Mr. Chips" returned for a final engagement at the Little Theater yesterday morning.

Looking back on the two years since Donat brought Mr. Chips to screen life, it's difficult to think of any characterization so memorable, so clearly recalled, so unerringly consistent. From youth to old age, from lonely bachelor to gentle widower, the details of the man's life are so thoroughly knit together, so thoughtfully pictured that even to the admirers of the James Hilton original grant the film is an astonishingly true adaptation of the book, a rare feat in public pleasing.

Filmed by an American company—M-G-M—in Britain, "Goodbye, Mr. Chips" manages not only to stress a common bond of Anglo-American understanding, but also succeeds in embodying a truly universal warmth, a sense that all countries and tongues will understand the young man who achieved old age without losing his youth, without slipping away into the memories of his own generation. Greer Garson's Mrs. Chips, while a brief appearance, is as memorable as the star's Academy Award-winning Chips.

Selects of 28 May Be Let Go Due to Housing

Possibility that selectees 28 and over will be discharged from the Army was pointed to yesterday as a means of avoiding a Selective Service bottleneck resulting from legislation extending draft service.

With passage of some form of extension legislation virtually assured, it has been feared it would be necessary to cut down the induction schedule. If men were to remain in service two additional years, or longer, the Army might be hard pressed to find housing and equipment for new inductees, officers said.

However, authoritative sources said yesterday some means of "turnover" would be resorted to to make way for new contingents of selectees.

Meanwhile, 128 new Washington recruits for the Army are scheduled for induction today at Richmond.

Boys' Statements On Simon Slaying Will Be Studied

The District Attorney's office is expected to begin study today of information given to the homicide squad in connection with the slaying of Dr. Heinrich Simon, German refugee and musician, on May 8, after being attacked in the vicinity of Seventeenth and Church Streets Northwest.

Detective Sergt. Jeremiah Flaherty, acting chief of the homicide squad, had taken statements from six boys, said to be members of a gang that roamed the neighborhood. The boys were questioned following information from an inmate of the Industrial School for Boys, who said Simon had been assaulted by one of the boys.

World Agog

It is an indication of the change that has occurred in the world situation that the bare rumor of a meeting between President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill should have set all the diplomatic dovecotes violently in a flutter. The excited curiosity which this wholly unconfirmed rumor has aroused is exactly on a par with the excited curiosity which used to surround the meetings of Hitler and Mussolini at Brennero and elsewhere. In those days the dictators held the initiative, and the democracies were timorously on the defensive. A reunion of Duce and Fuehrer could only mean, the world assumed, some new assault on an unsuspecting neutral, some new blow at the world's peace. A meeting of Hitler and Mussolini today, however, would rate just about a paragraph on an inside page. Roosevelt and Churchill count nowadays! For the war of nerves which the totalitarian powers used to wage with such striking success in the old days is a war now being waged against them. In these circumstances it is not difficult to imagine that the interest in such a meeting as that between Roosevelt and Churchill would be as great in Berlin and Tokyo as in London and Washington. The turn of the dictators has come to wonder whence the next blow will come. The democracies have stirred from their lethargy. It is they who now hold the initiative, and in that circumstance alone there is hope and real comfort.

Airline Headache

In recent months the airlines have surrendered at least 10 per cent of their transports primarily to the Army or secondarily to the British. A fair sample of company experience is revealed by Eastern Air Lines, which reports that 10 of its 14-passenger planes have been sold indirectly to the British Air Commission, 2 of its 21-passenger planes have been sold to the Defense Supplies Corporation, and 10 more 21-passenger planes on order have been released to the priorities board. Moreover, the company has released to the Army 8 4-engined, 40-passenger planes, which were ordered nearly two years ago.

As of today, it is unclear whether or not more transports will be taken over. If so, it is conceivable that commercial air transportation facilities may be reduced to such a degree that the ultimate purpose of the requisitioning, namely, defense, will be indirectly offset. Air traffic officials estimate that on many routes three or four of every five passengers are traveling on defense business. This is an extraordinarily high percentage, and doubtless involves an exceedingly elastic definition of "defense." But, interpreted conservatively, the estimate gives some idea of the proportion of air traffic which is indispensable. For weeks at peak hours the airlines have been turning away prospective passengers, and this month, which is expected to bring an all-time high in passenger applications, proportionately more applications will have to be rejected.

For the simple fact is that airline equipment is already being used right up to the limit of capacity, and the prospect of acquiring new commercial transports is at best dubious. Should more transports now in operation be requisitioned by the Army, or be sought by the British in connection with our defense program, it is not unreasonable to suppose that before long defense traffic on many routes will absorb the entire carrying capacity of the airlines. In fact the airlines might even be prevented from accommodating all of the defense business!

This is, of course, undesirable, and, as a matter of fact, unnecessary. It can be avoided by the development of a fairer perspective of immediate defense requirements. Even the requisitioning of a few more commercial transports would cut seriously into airline volume, for a single transport can and often does carry upward of 100 persons in a day. Multiply that by 10 or 20, representing transports which might be requisitioned, and the sizable loss of passenger traffic is apparent. It takes no master mind, therefore, to appreciate the care which should be exercised in appraising the relative urgency of immediate military transport needs before there is further diversion of commercial transports.

New Police Chief

Inspector Edward J. Kelly will take over the helm of the Police Department at a time when the responsibility of that office far outweigh its honors. The public is demanding more effective enforcement of the law; the police force is in need of overhauling, and a skeptical Congress is awaiting proof that the department is capable of protecting life and property in the Capital City. Acting Superintendent Kelly has thus taken on his shoulders a formidable obligation. Should he fail, the cause of local government in the District as well as that of law and order would suffer a tragic set-back.

From the standpoint of experience Inspector Kelly is certainly qualified for the assignment. He has literally devoted his entire career to police work in Washington. Sometimes he has made mistakes, and there are indications that his fight against crime has not always been as zealous as it might have been. But he is known to be a good detective and an efficient administrator. His elevation to the top place in the department, moreover, will doubtless enhance morale all down the line. For the selection of a man from the ranks is a real incentive to others to give their best efforts to the service.

While Inspector Kelly will doubtless be given a permanent appointment after Maj. Brown's retirement becomes final, he, too, will be under the necessity of making an outstanding record. The House committee which recently investigated the police recommended retirement of officers and men at the age of 60, with allowance for five additional years of service in extraordinary cases. Acting Superintendent Kelly will reach that initial retirement age in a little more than two years. With the spotlight of public interest already on the police and their work, a remarkable record will probably be required to keep him in office for an extended period.

Extensive reorganization of some divisions within the department may be taken for granted. It is to be hoped, however, that Mr. Kelly will begin his shake-up in those sections where the police are weak and not where they are strong. For example, the traffic committee of the Board of Trade has added to the protests of many other civic-minded groups a denunciation of the proposal to abolish the Accident Prevention Unit. Under the expert guidance of Inspector Miller, this unit is one of the few that has modernized its technique and is doing excellent work. The first test of the new superintendent will be his reaction to irresponsible suggestions that accident prevention work be brought down to the level of the detective service, instead of raising the caliber of the detective bureau to that of the accident prevention unit.

Pants Peril

Our own military experience has already proved what a demoralizing effect the wearing of shorts by the younger female element of the population can have upon the armed forces of a nation. And now the Italians have discovered what devastating consequences the wearing of shorts by the mature male elements can have as regards the civilian morale. It is, of course, no secret that Italian civilian morale is now at a desperately low ebb. If it were not for the sobering and steadying presence of the German Gestapo, indeed, there is no telling what might happen in that country. But those who have ascribed this state of national funk to such causes as the destruction of the Italian armies in Africa and Albania, to the food shortage, or to the prospect of bigger and better British bombardments have been altogether mistaken. Count Ciano's newspaper, Il Telegrafo, of Leghorn, has come out with what will at once be recognized by all informed and thoughtful persons as the truth of the matter. The hitherto sunny and genial Italian nature has been rendered morbid by the constant and nightmarish sight of hairy male legs. The irony of it is that the universal wearing of shorts by men has been encouraged by the government itself as a means of conserving cloth. This, declares Il Telegrafo, was a mediocre and mistaken notion, and it advises its male subscribers to get back into long pants immediately.

Come to think of it, about a year ago Signor Mussolini's newspaper, Il Popolo d'Italia, of Milan, bitterly denounced the wearing of long pants by women. The burthen of the article was about as follows: When lovely woman puts on pants, she puts off half her sex at least. She wins no more the ardent glance, but just a sneer from man, the beast. How much effect this article had on Italian fashion we don't know, but it stands to reason that a nation in which one-half the population is disgusted by the sight of hairy masculine legs, and the other half appalled by the unrelieved contours of female hips is not likely to remain indefinitely a "young, fecund and virile people."

It is curious, though, how close Messrs. Mussolini and Ciano can come to a profound idea without actually getting a sound grip on it. A careful study of history will prove that the difficulty in this matter lies neither in men or women but wholly in pants qua pants. Did Gaius Julius Caesar wear pants? Of course not! Pants, long or short, were unknown among the Romans until the decadence of the late Imperial period when, also, they became fashionable among both sexes. Is it too much to say that the decline and fall of Rome was due neither to luxury nor economic breakdown, but merely to this fatal adoption of pants? Well, archeologists have lately shown that in the late Mycenaean period pants were the fashion for both men and women. In Troy, too, in all probability, everybody—Priam and Hecuba, Hector and Andromache, Paris and Helen, Troilus and Cressida, Cassandra and Laocoon—was wearing pants. And look what happened to them! If Il Duce and his son-in-law are really smart about this business, they will at once heave not only their shorts but all their riding breeches and striped trousers as well into the crater of Mount Vesuvius.

Alas, Mr. Wickard!

Between the Department of Agriculture trying to enforce our farm legislation and the farm bloc in Congress trying to scuttle it, the outlook for agriculture is not a pleasant thing to contemplate. Secretary Wickard has announced that wheat farmers will be asked to vote again next spring on the question of marketing quotas. After the hullabaloo raised by the heavy penalties exacted for marketing wheat in excess of current quotas, the Department of Agriculture may well have hesitated to make this announcement. However, the law provides that quotas shall be proclaimed in any year if it appears that the wheat supply will exceed a normal year's domestic consumption and exports by more than 35 per cent. With a bumper crop in prospect and export outlets cut down, the head of the AAA says that the wheat carry-over will be the largest on record by next July. So it is a foregone conclusion that the law in regard to marketing quotas will have to be invoked.

As storage facilities are already filled to overflowing with wheat held against Government loans, a good many farmers no doubt are beginning to realize the wisdom of drastic restrictions upon production and sales at present artificially high levels. But the farm bloc in Congress apparently is not convinced of the necessity of curtailing supply under such circumstances. The House and Senate have passed and sent to conference a bill which would permit wheat farmers who had planted excess acreage to market up to normal production without paying a penalty. In other words, the farmer whose crop was below normal in his allotted acreage, would not, as now, be penalized for every bushel sold off the excess acreage. A Senate amendment to this bill, furthermore, would "freeze" Government-held wheat stocks. And another Senate amendment would remove marketing penalties for excess wheat used to feed livestock or kept by the farmer for home use. This perpetual legislative sniping at the production controls which are such necessary safeguards against financial collapse of the farm program is thoroughly disheartening. For it implies either complete ignorance of the nature of economic law or profound indifference to the consequences of defying it.

Fat Boy

It seems a pity that Leon Henderson has to assume the role of the Fat Boy and try to make the Nation's flesh creep in order to induce a modicum of fiscal statesmanship in Congress. For Secretary Morgenthau is trying to sell defense bonds. Obviously these bonds are not going to be easily salable if the people get the impression that we are on the brink of inflation and Congress behaves in a manner which suggests that at any time we may be pushed over the brink. For in an inflation bonds are the worst means of keeping savings. An investment in bonds at a time of rapidly rising prices means that the static money returns on those bonds will buy less and less. The things with which to protect oneself against inflation are land, equities (particularly those of commodity stocks or those with bonded debt standing on their books), and tangible possessions. This is simple economics to the man in the street. Yet the ironical situation is that in order to stave off inflation it is necessary to mop up the country's savings out of defense wages and profits either in taxes or Government bonds. Secretary Morgenthau no doubt feels that Leon Henderson's testimony takes much of the force out of his bond sales appeal. But Mr. Henderson cannot help himself. Our fiscal situation has been allowed to get into such a state that the inflation signal has to be run up, even though the actual process of running it up is sometimes apt to create the very thing it contemplates.

SONNET

(To the First Lady and Gentleman of the Land)

There has not been since history began
A pair more gallant than the two I sing;
Not in dim days, when Pericles was king,
And his Aspasia wise as any man,
Nor among those who bound our living span;
But we have known these two, and on the wing
Of living hours, of work that makes the thing
We call election, larger than its plan.
Let us who wait, and cloud delays in dreams,
While on us comes with heavy step the strife
Of hemispheres, and star-borne death that seems
The downfall of divine—and worldly—life,
Take measure and direction in extremes
With this good spectacle of man and wife.

Special Police Bill

Referring to your editorial under the caption "Special Policemen" on August 4, 1941, and to the letter of Leroy Westbury, president of the United States Special Police Association, I beg to state as follows:

It is very difficult to understand why Mr. Westbury should raise an issue about this matter and complain that The Post has committed "a serious error" in as much as the editorial in question never referred to the Government guards commonly known as "United States Special Police." There is as much difference between "United States Special Police" and mere "special police" as between day and night, and I cannot quite understand why he should make a fuss of the matter.

In this connection I wish, as a taxpayer, to protest most vigorously over the pending bill passed by the House and now under consideration before a Senate committee proposing that Government building guards receive from $1,500 to $1,900 per annum.

The recent passage of the so-called Ramspeck-Mead bill will insure salary increases for every deserving Government servant in a more equitable way. At present Government building guards are paid from $1,200 to $1,500 per annum for privates. The officers such as sergeant, lieutenant and captain, of course, receive a much higher base pay, and they will be more than compensated for their labors under the new Ramspeck-Mead bill.

An investigation of this guard force will disclose that a great majority, at least 95 per cent, are pensioners of the United States Government receiving $80, $40, $50, $75 and as much as $100 or more a month for some disability or as retirement pay. A great majority of these men are retired, disabled former servicemen who are drawing substantial pensions from the Government. To cite a case in point: A captain of the guard now in a downtown Government building is presently drawing $120 a month retirement salary plus $150 a month as captain of the guard thereby drawing $270 a month. The average guard (private) draws at least $50 a month plus his base salary, thereby receiving at least $160 a month. Congress or the Budget Bureau would do well to look into this aspect of the pending bill and put a stop to the clamor of these watchmen for higher salaries.

The average guard possesses no special or high qualification. The requirements for this job are not in consonance with the high salary proposed by the House. If Congress proposes to change the civil service classification of the guard force, why not also change the classification of other Government servants?

Guard Rails

I read your article concerning the death of Michael Fisher. He fell from a ledge at the Zoo.

The last paragraph of the article stated: "Two years ago, according to Zoo police, another boy was injured fatally in a fall from the cliff, which is not protected by guard rails. A path skirts the top of the cliff to within 5 feet of the brink."

Two years ago a child was killed because of the lack of proper protection from the edge of that cliff, and nothing was done to insure no recurrence of that tragedy. Who in this city is the cause of two children's deaths? Why was nothing done about the building of a rail at a dangerous place like that in a public park?

I have never written a letter to a newspaper before. But I never had a baby before, either. My son is 6 months old now. If anything like that should ever happen to him, I would not take it lying down. ETHEL S. DECKELMAN.

USO Objectives

The objectives of the USO are so unqualifiedly commendable that to support it is a genuine privilege. Partly because of this fact, it seems unfortunate that so many radio appeals for contributions should be overloaded with patter about maintaining "morale," coming frequently from speakers who obviously do not know the meaning of the word. Indeed, there is at times a note of solicitude which might almost cast doubt upon the stamina of the Army personnel. However, the writer has recently had opportunity to observe and to meet men in uniform in various parts of our country—as he has in the past had opportunity to observe and to meet the soldiers of many other countries—and he is convinced that to say the United States is developing a unique and highly superior Army is far within the bounds of moderation.

Too much care cannot be taken to insure that neither the men in the Army—who are, it must be remembered, our fellow citizens on temporary leave—nor the public should be given a wrong impression of the spirit and purpose of the USO. Above all, let us see to it that no attitude of patronage and no emotional heat mar the efforts put forth. If we strum this "morale" string too hard or too long, there is real danger that the cohorts of neurotic unctioneers will soon march up to declare that the boys are "under-privileged," "disadvantaged," "ill-fed," "ill-clad," "ill-housed," etc.

The simple commanding fact is that the conditions under which these young men must carry on in the performance of a magnificent civic duty afford to all of us an opportunity to participate in an hospitable, courteous, gracious, decent piece of work. And, surely, that is enough. A CITIZEN.

Lindbergh And Ickes

Charles Augustus Lindbergh asserts he has no connections with the Reich, and asks Secretary of the Interior Harold C. Ickes to retract his insinuation that he is a tool of the Reich. Mr. Lindbergh, as usual, befogs the issue. The actual cleavage between him and Ickes, as a representative of the American people, is not whether Lindbergh is a Hitler agent, but whether he carries out Hitler's wishes and wins Nazi approval. He certainly does. And his position gives aid and comfort to the enemies of defense.

In public meetings pro-Nazis shout: "We want Hitler! We want Lindbergh." And Nazi newspapers in Germany quote with approval from Lindbergh's speeches. Lindbergh is either for or against Nazi Germany. It is impossible for him both to support and to condemn Germany. If he supports her, he opposes our nationally approved defense program. That is, he cannot shut his eyes to the facts of Nazi aggression and at the same time put America first. Whoever heard him condemn the conquests of European countries or deplore their enslavement? Is it not true that he is pro-Fascist and anti-democratic?

If Lindbergh is sincere in his appeal to the President concerning Ickes' speech, July 14, 1941, he will make public his repudiation of the commendation Nazis gave him by returning his Nazi medal. By this act he can declare his adherence to the determination of his country to resist Axis domination of our commerce, industries, and Government.

Owning Dogs

It makes me positively ill to read in many of the newspapers the sickening discussions about dogs. One would think that they are small, furry humans the way they are petted, cried over and coddled. Say one word against them, no matter how justified, and the dog lovers are up in arms. Children can die by the hundreds, from starvation, disease, and what not, but who raises an outcry? Yet let a dog be talked about and the very heavens are called upon.

We move to the suburbs for peace and quiet and fresh air. What happens? Our nights are made hideous by the barking and howling of dogs They all seem to belong to deaf owners. They do not hear them for some strange reason. Our lawns are overrun, our flowers are destroyed, and there is mess all over the place. One and one's children cannot walk down the public highways and streets without being yapped at and sometimes chased by some flea-bitten excuse of a dog.

For Pete's sake let's use a little judgment and discretion. Let's keep our dogs home where they belong and let's keep them quiet. After all they are only dogs, and they should be treated as such. Mere sentimentality does not raise them to the level of humans, although they seem to be regarded as such by the cadlers, biscuit buyers and 8 o'clock walkers. A law against dog owning in settled communities would certainly get my vote. I consider a dog owner who lets his pet run wild, or lets him make a lot of racket, as one of the lowest forms of human life. Your neighbors, who have to put up with this, feel the same way about you.

Monroe Doctrine

It is a relief to have the America First Committee, through its leaders and its chief spokesman, the Chicago Tribune, come out openly in favor of abandoning the Monroe Doctrine. More than a month ago, Gen. Wood said in an interview that he didn't believe we should try to defend this Hemisphere below the bulge of Brazil. So the "ring of steel" talk has been merely a kind of propaganda screen, apparently.

The America First Committee does quite a bit of flag-waving. Its speakers keep talking about American forefathers, and American traditions, and Americanism. They always seem to imply that it is the America First Committee that is truly American, and that follows in the paths of the founders of this Nation. So it is interesting, and even startling, to find them calmly and openly recommending that we now scrap the Monroe Doctrine—the doctrine that has been the cornerstone of American foreign policy for generations, and the doctrine the German high command has always been most eager to have us give up.

Retaining Draftees

To disband our armies now is to invite Hitler to move in on the Western Hemisphere while the United States is at its weakest. That a state of emergency exists warranting the retention of draftees beyond the first year of service, as provided in the conscription law, is tragically obvious. Citizens should urge their representatives in Congress to declare this state of emergency, so that, unlike all the other would-be neutrals now conquered by or in a death grip with Hitler, America may not commit suicide.

The Post Impressionist

Expatriate

If you take the "Pan-American Highway" from Tapachula to Guatemala City, you'll stop at Malacatan, just over the border. It's not much of a town, a few stores, one hotel, and a mile or so of thatched huts straggling over the hill into the coffee and banana fincas. Ninety-nine per cent of the population is Indian. The rest is a scrambled mixture of Polish, German, Jewish, Spanish and Irish-American.

Before the hour was out, the Irish-American representative was crowding the doorway of the hotel, his dungarees and khaki shirt flapping loosely in the wind.

"My name's Manahan, Daniel Joseph Manahan," said a worn, hoarse voice with just a tinge still of the Irish brogue. "I heard an American was here and I thought you might be wanting to see the town. Though there's really not much to see." He shrugged the thin shoulders wryly.

The man was a giant of an Irishman, the curly black hair still on his head, but all the meat gone from him. That's what 20 years in the tropics will do when you've had the fever and bad luck and no money. Really not an old man, between 40 and 45, he looked 60. Something in the dead eyes, in the stooped shoulders made you think of an old man at the end of his tether.

I was the first American he had seen in a year, and the sight opened all the old faucets of his memory. He talked eagerly, as though he were afraid I would go before he finished. There was pathos in the voice, and yet he blamed no one. "That was the way life went. Some made it, and some didn't. A little luck both ways and there you were."

He had come to Central America some 20 years ago, with money and the wanderlust feet. The first year he lost the first, and the second carried him back into the fincas of Guatemala. Up and down the country he traveled, working for a spell at bananas and then at coffee, but never satisfied anywhere. Finally, he landed dead broke in out-of-the-way Malacatan with total assets, a native wife and five children. His bonus from the United States Army lifted him temporarily, but a hard-luck car and sickness pushed him back. When I was there he was selling the last of his personal effects, a Gillette razor and a pocket knife.

Manahan lives on the edge of town, in a thatched hut encircled by "the best-trimmed hedge in the village." Behind, there is a papaya tree and a little ground for black beans.

"By thunder," the tired voice exclaimed, "a man don't need much down here. Papaya, a few black beans and corn meal at a penny the pound for tortillas—once a man gets used to it, he can live on that."

Sometimes he talked of making money by "hauling to the States," and then the hoarse voice grew hoarser and more excited. "Coffee at 30 cents a pound in the States! Did you hear that?" he asked little Hugo, the innkeeper, in Spanish. "By gory, now if I could find some way of hauling coffee up there, wouldn't I be on easy street!"

Or it was bananas. "Bananas at 25 cents a dozen in Washington!" Hugo would be told again of the news. "Twenty-five cents a dozen. Be gorra, now if there was some way . . ." and so on through the whole gamut of exported articles.

Always he had in his mind the vision of some day climbing back on top, of recovering the American citizenship, forfeited through nonresidence. "Some day I'll get back in the States. I'll get together a hundred dollars and find some one at the border who will listen to my story and take it to the President . . ."

And so the evening goes.

At 9:30 a little barefaced creature with Irish freckles peeked in at the open doorway. "It's Julia, my Irish daughter, come to take me home." He pats the silky black hair that is like his own and rises.

"You think it's awful for a white man to live in a place like that." He points in the direction of the little thatched hut. "But I don't mind. It's little Julia here that worries me. She's the only Irish one I've got. Sometimes, when she hasn't clothes to go to school, she's ashamed to go. Oh, gorry, when there's no money and it's damp and the old woman complains and the kids cry, then by God, it's hell."

Then his lanky legs were stretching homeward under the stars with the tiny "Irish" Julia beside him, clinging to his hand. In a minute they were beyond the plaza and the blackness of a Malacatan night had swallowed them up.

They were two people going back into alien territory. One of them had made a choice. The other would never have a chance. Born to one world, she would spend her life living in another.

Watching them go, while old Hugo, the innkeeper, barred the door, was like seeing one's own people swallowed up by a foreign world. "They don't belong there," one wanted to say; and yet voices kept asking, "Where do they belong?" WILLIAM HANCOCK.

National Motto

Mr. Pegler might be glad to hear that it won't be necessary to look for a "second-string" national motto supplementing "E Pluribus Unum."

His new motto, "Keep your shirt on," is already included in the good old one which means even more. It means not only to keep one's shirt on, but also to roll up one's sleeves and work, and work unceasingly for the unity of our Nation, which is just the opposite of totalitarian uniformity.

"One out of many"—that's the best motto ever devised for the United States because it is basically contrary to the imperialistic "Divide et Imperia" (divide and rule).

Today more than ever we should and must firmly stick to the original, not merely on rubber-stamps, but deep in our hearts. We don't want and we don't need any other motto, if we always remember that out of many we are and ever will be one nation indivisible.

Laws To Restrict Unioneers

THE humble working-stiff, the employer and George Spelvin, American, may be pleased to hear that two bills have been introduced in the House to repeal Justice Felix Frankfurter's bench-made legislation holding professional unioneers to be above the anti-trust law and, further, to repeal the right of union racketeers to persecute people and blackmail business at will. These two bills emanated from the hearings of the subcommittee of the House Judiciary Committee on the broad and scandalous topic of union racketeering and from other disclosures of extortion, thievery, terrorism, vandalism and Muscovite sabotage conducted under authority of charters issued by the A. F. of L. and the C. I. O.

PEGLER

These private organizations, having no more right than the Elks, the Boy Scouts or the Detroit Purple Gang to violate American laws, have, nevertheless, acquired a privilege so to do and that privilege was recognized in a majority opinion of the Supreme Court written by Justice Frankfurter in the case of the Carpenters' Union a few months ago. In that opinion, Justice Frankfurter undertook to say what Congress had in mind in passing certain prior legislation and the minority opinion accused him of usurping the legislative function of Congress.

One of the pending bills was introduced by Representative Francis Walter, a Democrat, from down in the Lehigh Valley of Pennsylvania, where wrong John Lewis would have you believe that all the miners are his loyal followers, whereas many and probably most of them are subjects of a dictator instead. The other was put in by Representative Mike Monroney, of Oklahoma City and both have been referred to the Judiciary Committee rather than to the Committee on Labor, because it is recognized that there is no chance of obtaining a favorable report on any anti-union-racket legislation from the latter group.

BOTH bills would have the effect of discrediting the Wagner Act in important particulars and of repudiating the Clayton and Norris-LaGuardia Acts wherein they have been construed to mean that the unioneer may jerk men out on strike where no labor controversy exists for the purpose of Hitlerizing new groups of suckers and by the anschluss process. The Clayton and Norris-LaGuardia Acts also have been construed to mean that even when a union is in the wrong in a jurisdictional or anschluss raid the offenders cannot be punished for circulating defamatory lies about an employer resulting in the boycott of his product and financial loss to an innocent victim of union rivalry.

Representative Walter's bill leads off with three long explanatory or whereas clauses which declare plainly the intent of Congress in adopting this remedy. The purpose of these clauses is to prevent distortion of the Congressional intent by the Supreme Court.

Such explanatory matter is more or less out of style, but Representative Walter went back to this old-fashioned procedure for one definite and undisguised purpose, namely to whereas the ears off any clique of the Supreme Court which, in the absence of such declared intent, might presume to say that Congress meant something when it meant anything else but.

HE WOULD make it unlawful for any union or its officers to conspire in restraint of trade for the purpose of forcing an employer to abandon relations with another authorized union. He would make liable to punishment any union or its officers for extorting money from an employer or for imposing unreasonable restrictions on the adoption of new and more efficient machines, equipment or materials. And he would forbid any combination by a union with an employer to fix prices, allocate customers, restrict production, stifle competition or monopolize trade.

All District courts would be authorized to issue injunctions where lawful labor objectives are absent and it is distinctly provided that the stoppage of any defense work shall not be regarded as a lawful labor objective, pending a hearing before the National Mediation Board.

THE PROTECTION of inefficient methods of production or distribution also is declared not to be a lawful objective and a 30-day cooling off period is provided under injunction during which a master or, in defense jobs, the Mediation Board, shall determine whether a legitimate labor objective is sought. And, finally, every person, whether unioneer or employer, convicted of conspiring against the act may be fined not more than $5,000 or imprisoned for one year or both.

Monroney's bill is similar, but apparently less extensive and, moreover, lacks that declaration of Congressional intent, the lack of which might tempt Mr. Frankfurter again to conclusions such as that which his colleagues of the minority, in the Carpenters' Case, declared to be a usurpation of the legislative function.

Official Nazi Explanation

Four Communiques

By the Associated Press

Berlin, Aug. 6.—Adolf Hitler's headquarters issued this communique today:

As apparent from numerous reports, Soviet leadership no longer possesses a reliable picture of the situation on their own front.

Sticking to the principle of unconditional truth, therefore, the greatest reticence prevailed for German reporting, as it was undesirable to give the opponent valuable clews. The justified desire of the German people to be informed daily on the course of operations, therefore, had to wait.

The Fatherland had even to tolerate the fact that wrong conceptions arose and enemy countries disseminated misleading rumors. Now the time has come in the face of the beginning of new operations to cast light upon the course and results of the tremendous struggle which began with the break through the Stalin Line.

Between the Black Sea and the Finnish Bay the nature of the territory and our own strategy required making a break-through at three decisive points: South of the Pinsk marshes, in the direction of Smolensk and south of Lake Peipus.

In the three reports to follow, the fight of the groups which operated in these areas is related and in the conclusive fourth report, the results of these operations are to be evaluated.

Operations on the Finnish front and the fight of the navy must be reserved for a later report.

Report No. 1.

After the Dvina, between Dvinsk and Riga, in stubborn fighting, and Latvia had been cleared of the enemy, the army group of Field Marshal Gen. Ritter von Leeb faced the task of breaking through the Stalin Line running from the Latvian-Soviet border and simultaneously of defeating Soviet armed forces in Estonia.

In an audacious onslaught, the army under Col. Gen. Busch and the tank group under Gen. Hoeppner, fighting on the same sector, succeeded in breaking through strongly fortified, stubbornly defended positions south of Lake Peipus.

Ostrov, Porkhov and Pskov fell after a short, fierce battle.

Thus the pre-condition was created for a swing around northward to start an attack in the direction of Leningrad. Despite most difficult road conditions and embittered resistance, the greatest exertion of troops on the left wing of forces advancing between Lake Ilmen and Lake Peipus could thrust forward close to Narva in order to block the land bridge between Lake Peipus and the Finnish Bay.

The army of Col. Gen. Von Keuchler, operating in Estonia, first captured the fiercely defended cities of Dorpat, Viljandi and Pernau. In numerous stubborn individual skirmishes it drove the enemy divisions back northward beyond Tapa.

Operations of this army group are not yet completed. Nevertheless, in this battle sector over 38,000 prisoners have been taken, and 355 tanks and 655 pieces of artillery captured or destroyed.

The air fleet of Col. Gen. Keller shares outstandingly in these successes. In this battle sector, it brought down or destroyed on the ground 771 enemy planes.

Report No. 2

On the southern wing, the army group under command of Field Marshal Gen. von Rundstedt from the beginning had to overcome especially difficult terrain, weather conditions and a numerically far superior army.

In long, drawn-out, heaviest frontal fighting, the armies of Infantry Gen. von Stuelpnagel and Field Marshal Gen. von Reichenau, assisted by the panzer group of Col. Gen. von Kleist, had to fight themselves forward until they succeeded in making the opponents give way and in driving a wedge beyond Zhitomir to the gates of Kiev.

With this break-through deep beyond the Stalin Line, it became possible to turn southward in a broad front between the Dniester and the Dnepr, cut off the enemy's retreat and begin an encirclement battle which presently is raging at full fury. In these battles, which resulted in extremely high losses for the enemy, an outstanding share falls to Hungarian and Slovak units fighting shoulder to shoulder with German armed forces in loyal comradeship of arms.

Simultaneously with these operations, German-Rumanian units under the supreme command of Gen. Antonescu forced the stiffly defended Prut and liberated Bessarabia from the enemy despite the fiercest resistance and almost impassable terrain.

Thereafter the army of Col. Gen. Ritter von Schobert, comprising German and Rumanian troops, was thrown into operations across the central Dniester northeastward in order to establish connections with forces coming from the north.

A tentative count in this battle sector reveals over 150,000 prisoners, 1,970 tanks and 2,190 pieces of artillery.

Report No. 3

In the center of the east front, the army group of Field Marshal Gen. von Bock victoriously concluded the great battle of Smolensk. The extent, duration and severity of the fighting is historically unique in the unabating sequence of destructive blows against the Bolshevist forces.

In the almost month-long struggle, the armies of Field Marshal Gen. von Kluge, Col. Gen. Strauss and Col. Gen. Baron von Weichs, as well as panzer groups under Col. Gen. Buderian and Col. Gen. Hoth inflicted exceedingly bloody losses on the enemy.

Roughly 310,000 prisoners fell into our hands here; 3,205 tanks, 3,120 pieces of artillery and an uncounted quantity of other war materials were captured or destroyed.

The air fleet of Field Marshal Gen. Kesselring had a decisive share in this victory. The Soviet air force lost 1,098 planes in this battle sector. The course of this struggle will be reported in detail in tomorrow's communique.

Report No. 4

The successes scored on the east front and the figures revealed in today's special communique raise the totals reported in the communique of July 11—which were 400,000 prisoners, 7,615 tanks, 4,423 pieces of artillery, 6,233 airplanes (destroyed or captured)—to 895,000 prisoners, 13,145 tanks, 10,388 pieces of artillery and 9,082 aircraft.

The successes achieved, which by far surpass our highest expectation, can be evaluated correctly in their entirety only if one considers that the bloody losses on the part of this extremely tough and bitter fighting opponent are many times the number of prisoners.

Units of the army of the field S S and the air force in the face of this stout opponent achieved almost superhuman tasks of endurance and bravery.

To the superiority of German leadership, the unsurpassed quality of our armaments, the excellent training and battle experience of the troops, but primarily to the heroism of the German soldier and his comrades in arms goes the credit for crushing the thoroughly equipped Soviet forces.

Marching achievements of infantry divisions, which in battle operations covered more than 1,000 kilometers (621 miles) deserve special credit. These maneuvers could only be achieved on the basis of excellent organization, signal service and connections with the rear as well as on the basis of the fact that it has been possible to restore the railway network in occupied enemy territory almost completely close to the battle zone.

Conscious of their superiority and assured of final victory, the German forces now stand ready to continue with a new phase of operations in this destructive battle, which has begun with a sequence of the greatest victories.

Inside Germany

By Elbert Baldwin

Russian War Shows Rise of the Junkers

A REVOLUTION may have taken place in Germany within the last few weeks, one of which not only the outer world but even Germany itself is still unaware.

The German attack on Russia is the sign.

For in deliberately attacking Russia, Germany assumed the risk of a war on two fronts.

Now, from the first, Hitler has held that a war on two fronts was the root cause of Germany's last defeat and consistently, obdurately, even passionately, has ever since opposed an attack on Russia before England was defeated.

Opposed to Hitler, however, stood the German general staff. Equally consistently it has maintained that England should not be invaded before Russia had first been crushed and eliminated as a fighting power. Otherwise, an armed and powerful Russia stood poised at Germany's back, in a position to strike the moment that the German military machine became involved in England.

THIS VIEW of the German general staff is well enough known. But, if corroboration were needed, I had it at first hand. For I remained in Paris during and long after the German occupation. The nature of my work there, head of a business advisory organization, brought me into constant and even intimate contact with German officials, both military and civilian. This matter of opposed viewpoints between Hitler and his staff was talked over many times.

Up to that point, Hitler had prevailed. Not only had he prevailed in the matter of German policy towards Russia but, at the moment of the critical German breakthrough into France, at Sedan, it was Hitler who overruled the general staff and, instead of following up the opening to the south, exposed 200 kilometers of his flank by striking west to the Channel.

To be sure, the thrust succeeded. By driving between the French and the British, Hitler eliminated England on the Continent. The rest of the attack on France became little more than a mopping up operation. But it had been a reckless risk to take and one which the general staff had felt to be wholly unnecessary.

THE PRICE of his victory was, for Hitler, a further deepening of the gap between himself and his generals; of, in political terms, the gap between the Nazi Party of which Hitler is the chief, and the Junker Party, which, as yet, has no single leader.

Up to Sedan, Hitler and nazism dominated. But Sedan, Dunkerque and the occupation of Paris may have marked the zenith of Hitler's power.

Perhaps that power would have continued had the attempted invasion of England succeeded. For, right after the occupation of Paris, the attempt was made. It was then that the "langoustes" became so plentiful on the shores of Normandy and Brittany and even down into the Vendee. "Langouste" is the French name of the ocean crayfish, first cousin of the lobster. It was by this name they called the corpses of German soldiers recovered all along the coast.

By the time I left Paris last fall, the intangible impact of many things, the implication of words, the attitude of German officers, had already led me to feel that Hitler's eclipse was near. This present German attack on Russia—the attack always sponsored by the German general staff but always opposed by Hitler—seems to bring confirmation.

Hitler no longer dominates the military. The German general staff now dominates Hitler.

Matsuoka, the Japanese Foreign Minister, visited Berlin.

From the German point of view, the visit was at first marred by the Jugoslav declaration of independence from German hegemony. But the German steam roller went into action. The way it crushed Jugoslav and Greek and British resistance must have been impressive to the Japanese visitor in Berlin.

It was also at this time that Hitler was supposed to have urged upon his guest the Russo-Japanese non-aggression pact. If this pact was intended to keep Russia immobile while Germany invaded England and Japan struck South, it made sense. To Stalin it made sense, also. For it has been Russia's policy to remain immobile while the other powers bled themselves white. To agree to do what Russia intended to do anyway [up to such time when so little a thing as a treaty could be disregarded], was no sacrifice.

BUT had Hitler intended to attack Russia, even at the time when he urged Matsuoka to enter into a nonaggression pact, then the pact does not make sense. For in event of a German attack on Russia, to immobilize Japan as well as Russia was certainly not in Germany's interest.

It may be argued that the treaty was intended only as a blind; as a means of lulling Stalin into a sense of false security, when a German attack would fall as a thunderbolt out of the blue and find Russia unprepared.

If so, the scheme did not work. For at the very moment that Stalin cheerfully signed the agreement, he was mobilizing his divisions on the German frontier.

Can it be assumed that Stalin already knew that the issue between Hitler and his general staff had reached a crisis; that Hitler was losing; that the whole German war plan was changing to the plan of the general staff, of which the very first chapter was attack on, and elimination of, Russia before invading England?

Can it be assumed that Hitler, striving to retain supremacy in Germany against his general staff, sought to strengthen his position by a diplomatic victory, namely, a Russo-Japanese nonaggression pact, which, though only on paper, might yet serve to justify an invasion of England first, of Russia later, if at all?

IF these things can be assumed, then everything else begins to make sense.

It makes sense that Hitler was sincere in urging a Russo-Japanese nonaggression pact upon his visitor. For if an invasion of England was to be the next step, the immobilization of Russia, if only by a treaty, was at least a paper justification for the plan which Hitler has maintained since the beginning.

But if so, then something very sudden and very radical must have happened in Germany just afterward to explain the German attack, not on England, but on Russia.

May it be assumed that the German general staff realized its cause would be lost if Hitler once started the attack on England? For once the invasion of England started, there would be no going back. No matter how opposed in military policy the general staff might be to Hitler, once that Hitler had committed Germany to an attack, the staff would have no choice, in loyalty to the country proper, but to carry out an attack of which it basically disapproved.

THIS, then, the situation in Berlin at the time of the visit of Japanese Foreign Minister Matsuoka:

Said Hitler to himself, "I must impose an invasion of England upon my general staff, and at once. If I do so I will impose upon them the necessity of serving me. But if I fail to do so they will usurp power. However, if I can get Russia and Japan to sign a nonaggression act I will have my justification for attacking England first."

Said the general staff, to itself, "If we allow Hitler to make this Russo-Japanese nonaggression pact an excuse for attacking England before Russia is disposed of, then we will have no choice but to serve as best we can a military policy which we know is basically all wrong. No; if we are to bear the responsibility for the military destiny of our country, we must overrule this political leader and carry out what, militarily, we know is best. But we cannot yet afford to throw him out. The man, no matter how we disagree with his military plans, has public following. In the midst of war we cannot afford a revolution; at least, not in public. But now or never we must take control before this man commits us to an invasion of England which, even if successful, will leave us dangerously exposed to Russia."

SOMETHING of this kind seems really to have happened in Berlin, and suddenly, within the very days in which Matsuoka was capping his conferences with Hitler by further conferences with Stalin.

In the days that Matsuoka was negotiating the Hitler-suggested Russo-Japanese nonaggression treaty, the German general staff assumed control in Germany.

The planned invasion of England, the Hitler plan, was changed into an attack on Russia, the plan of the German general staff from the first though the plan which, from the first, Hitler has opposed.

If so, then Hitler is now no longer free in the Nazi Germany which he himself created. Power has returned to the hands which, ever since the assassination of Gen. von Schleicher, have been biding their time until forced by the imminence of events, to act.

Germany is again Junker—not Nazi—Germany.

COULD so radical a change have occurred in Germany and remain unknown to not only the outer world but within Germany itself?

It is not only possible but probable.

For even if the German general staff has replaced Hitler as the supreme military authority, Hitler nevertheless remains in the imagination of millions of German workmen and soldiers as the God-head of their country. The staff is forced to keep that God-head in place in its own interest. For not to do so, to replace it with itself, would provoke a revolution within Germany. A revolution would, of course, spell national defeat. And national defeat will spell no less the end of the Junker Party than of the Nazis.

Hence no matter how much Hitler and his staff may be opposed to each other, and no matter how much the one dominates the other, they both ride of necessity in the same boat and must profess unity with each other. The one thing neither can disclose is that there has been a fight and that either has prevailed.

Of interest however, an unpublished letter which reached this country only very recently, as to the German people who follow Hitler, trust in the general staff:

"The first enthusiasm is gone," it said, "The attitude towards Hitler is no longer blind and worshipful. There is much bewilderment over the difference between what Hitler has preached and things he has done. The war has lasted longer than expected. It has expanded beyond what was expected. However, there is one thing which is holding the Germans together. That is the memory of what happened after the last war."

A Strange Oversight

The latest statement from Mr. Hoover, Mr. Landon, and a number of other eminent men is so astounding that it can be explained only by saying that the man who wrote it and those who signed it have not taken the trouble to discuss the situation with responsible and informed persons. The whole statement is based on the notion that the question whether the United States goes to war or remains at peace depends upon how much we participate in the European conflict between the Axis on the one side and, on the other side, the British in the Atlantic and the Middle East and the Russians in European Russia.

LIPPMANN

But as a matter of fact the immediate and critical question of peace or war for the United States arises on the other side of the world, that is to say in our relations with Japan in the Pacific Ocean.

THERE in the Far East during the past week we have been on the very verge of war, not of the imaginary war of the isolationists in which American soldiers are supposed to be landed in Europe to fight their way to Berlin, but of a very real war in the Pacific which might begin any day. Yet in regard to this extremely urgent and dangerous threat of war, Mr. Hoover and his friends have not a word to say. Indeed they seem to be unaware of it. Thus they talk about "the Axis end," which means Germany and Italy, and never even refer to the power—namely Japan—against which the main body of all our forces is mobilized.

They complain about the occupation of Iceland and the Atlantic naval patrol and "other belligerent moves" against Germany and Italy, but they are silent about the momentous action in freezing the Japanese assets and in establishing the machinery of an embargo against Japan. If only they had taken the precaution to examine the real situation and to inform themselves before issuing their statement, they would never find themselves in the position of seeking to prevent war in the abstract, yet ignoring the most immediate and the most likely actual war in which the United States may become directly and deeply engaged.

IN FACT, it is evident from their statement that they do not realize that since the Japanese occupation of Indo-China, the situation in the Pacific has become so delicate and so explosive that only the most powerful diplomatic action, and some good luck besides, can prevent war. What Mr. Hoover thinks about this desperately real problem in the Pacific, he has never ventured to tell the American people.

Yet as a matter of history the present phase of the conflict between Japanese imperialist expansion and the United States began when Mr. Hoover was President, and the original and fundamental decision to oppose Japan was made by him. He was the President who decided not to recognize the first Japanese aggression in Manchuria in 1931. And he was the President who sent American representatives to Geneva to rouse the world against Japan. And he was the President who sent his Secretary of State to Mr. Roosevelt, when he was President-elect, to see to it that the Hoover-Stimson policy of opposing Japanese aggression would be maintained by his successor.

Yet today when his successor is face to face with the final consequences of that policy, and in the very week that the issue has been rising to the extreme crisis, Mr. Hoover is out with a statement which has been writtten by somebody who does not know that there is a crisis in the Far East.

FOR IF you take the generalities in the statement and try to apply them to the actualities in the Far East, they do not make sense. One would have to say that Mr. Hoover now advocates the following: That we should not have frozen Japanese assets or cut off fuel and metals, for these are certainly "belligerent moves" which the statement deplores, that apart from delivering supplies to the Chinese government in San Francisco we should do nothing for China, that we should not oppose Japan if she seizes the Netherlands Indies or Singapore, that we should stand by and let Japan obtain control of the resources of the East Indies, that we should let the British be driven out of the Pacific, that we should let Australia fall under Japanese domination, that we should let the Philippines be encircled and rendered helpless, that we should be uninterested in whether Japan conquers Siberia or becomes allied with a Russian puppet government and thus establishes herself as our nearest neighbor in Alaska.

Thus Mr. Hoover, who initiated the present policy of opposing Japanese expansion, would now, if his statement is to be taken as applying to the Far East, let the Japanese expand, let them conquer the Chinese, the British, the Dutch and the Russians in Siberia. Thus if we ever do have to fight Japan to make good the policy Mr. Hoover inaugurated, we shall have the satisfaction of doing it all alone, uncontaminated by association with any imperfect or distasteful allies.

IT IS more generous to suppose that Mr. Hoover does not think these things, that in fact he accidentally overlooked the Far Eastern situation and forgot to think about it at all. The disservice of a statement like Mr. Hoover's is that it will be read in Japan, and the Japanese will quite naturally suppose no former President of the United States could fail to be thinking seriously and responsibly about the not inconsiderable crisis in the Orient. If they then conclude that Mr. Hoover has announced his intention of obstructing the President of the United States, the Japanese may make the enormous error of thinking it safe to take those final steps which will inevitably and inexorably precipitate war.

For the chances of preserving the peace in the Pacific depend altogether upon convincing Japan before the irrevocable steps are taken that she faces a combination which is too formidable for her to challenge. The combination of China, Britain, the Netherlands Indies, Russia and the United States is a very formidable combination indeed, and if we are able to keep the peace, it will be because we have had the intelligence and the resolution to organize that combination,—to align against Japan's final bid for supremacy in the Far East everybody who has a reason for opposing Japan. And when that has been understood, when it is seen that the Russian army and navy and airforce in Eastern Siberia are worth at the moment a whole fleet of our unbuilt warships, it becomes rather obvious why the United States Government has decided to aid Russia via Siberia.

Family Buying Habits Need Revision To Meet New Taxes

By M. S. Rukeyser

(Written for International News Service)

This is the second of three articles by Merryle Stanley Rukeyser, noted writer on economics, outlining a blueprint for the average American family budget to meet the emergency of higher taxes and rising prices.

New York, Aug. 6. (INS).—Unless you strike a bonanza on the income side of your personal ledger, you will have to provide for taxes payable next year by applying the ax to your family budget.

This is not a pleasant process. It entails stepping down on the stairway of family living standards.

But the family, with intelligent foresight, can develop an emergency design for living which will enable it to make the best of this period which calls for sacrifices.

The common sense procedure is to estimate your total tax liability for 1941, about which Congress is still debating, and to earmark out of each month's income a cash fund amounting to one-twelfth of your annual tax liability.

Fixed Incomes Hardest Hit

In order to do this, the average bread winner will have to sit down with his housewife and decide what family comforts should be eliminated in order to free funds for taxes. Obviously, this involves a shift from pursuit of the "more abundant life" to an episode of relative consumer abstinence.

Those on fixed incomes are up against it. As prices and taxes rise, they must either cut down their purchases, thus lowering their family scale of living, or radically change their buying habits. The latter is preferable. It involves shifting purchases to obtain the most economical values.

Fortunately, certain items in the household budget are comparatively stable and for a time resist inflationary upswings. Rent, light, gas, telephone, transportation and insurance, which bulk large in the budget of every family, are in this category. These relatively fixed items of family expenses help to keep us consumers afloat even when sensitive prices of such commodities as foodstuffs and apparel, and taxes rise vastly more rapidly than our sluggish incomes.

Strike at Extravagance

A helpful aid during this period of family economic readjustment is to take a fresh view of all household practices and give up economic waste and extravagance. Rather than necessities.

This entails a scientific understanding of the nutritive value of food and also the economy of buying goods in season—when they are less expensive. Housewives should begin now to study the health secrets of various foodstuffs and balance the family diet as well as the family budget.

You can get good reference books on this subject at any library or by writing the Department of Agriculture, the Children's Bureau, or consumer's division of the Office of Price Administration and Civilian Supply in Washington.

Wartime necessities and priority orders are spurring the invention of synthetic products. Frequently the substitutes are better than the original, and it is the special obligation of the family purchasing agent, the housewife, to be thoroughly informed in these times concerning the availability of new and cheaper products.

Buying Economically

When prices reflect consumer prejudices rather than merit, the analytical buyer can effect savings. For example, there is no scientific justification for the New York preference for white eggs, which sell at a premium.

As a matter of fact, though housewives in New York pay more for white eggs, Boston housekeepers prefer brown eggs. In the early days of the Republic, the hens near New York laid white eggs, and at that time the color was an index of freshness. At Boston the nearby hens specialized in brown eggs. But now both cities draw their huge egg supplies from distant places and there is no longer any correlation between color and freshness.

Likewise, silly prejudices and foibles, instead of mere caloric value, are reflected in meat prices. Popular cuts sell out of all proportion to their relative nutritive worth. Consumer predilections for ribs and loins have led to absurd disparities in quotations for what comes out of the carcass. The fashionable housewife avoids shanks and flanks, chucks and rounds, overlooking the basic fact that they constitute an economical means of buying energy for members of her family.

In the next and concluding article of this series, I shall make other concrete suggestions for dressing up your family budget in khaki.

Helms Must Tell Retirement Plans

Capt. Henry Helms of the park police has been ordered to report to his immediate superior officer, Francis F. Gillen, senior assistant superintendent, today to state whether he is going to hand in his resignation.

It had been reported that Helms, connected with the park police for 20 years, contemplates retirement soon. Gillen said Helms is on leave on a fishing trip and before he left said nothing about retiring.

"If Capt. Helms is going to retire," Gillen said, "I think I should know something about it. I have asked that he report to me at once so that I may be advised of his intention."

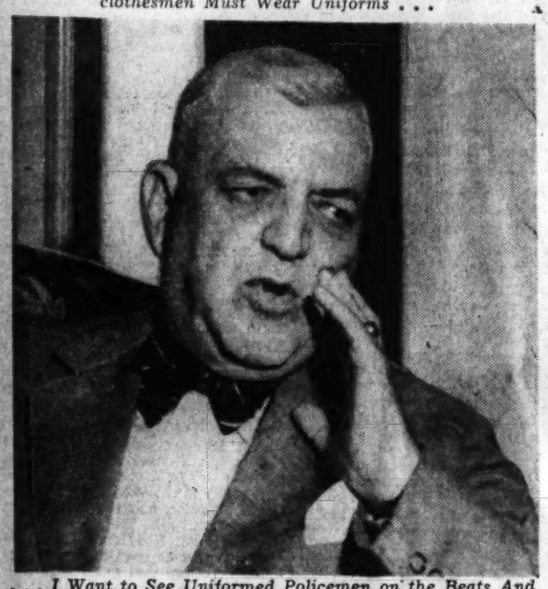
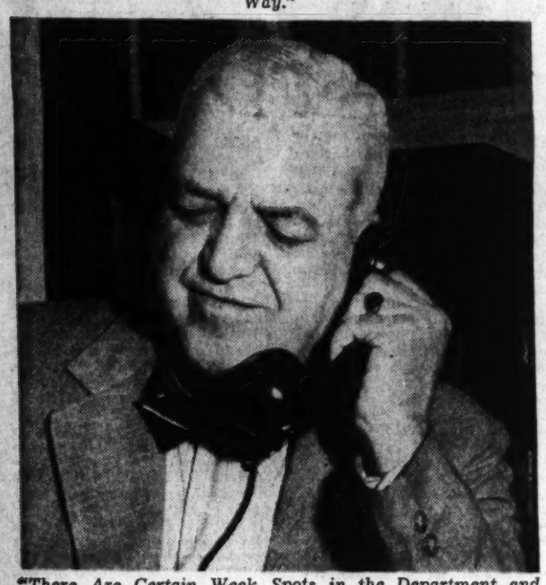
Chief Kelly, Once a Swampoodle Rookie, Got to Top the Hard Way

"My First Order Is That Every Policeman Except Plainsclothesmen Must Wear Uniforms . . .



. . . I Want to See Uniformed Policemen on the Beats And I Want to See Them Patrolling the Beats in the Old Time Way."



"There Are Certain Week Spots in the Department and These Must Be Bolstered. I'm Going to Do Everything In My Power."

Mrs. Kelly

The new police chief's wife, Mrs. Elsie M. Kelly (left), was kept busy last night greeting friends who came to their home to offer personal congratulations on Kelly's appointment. Below—Kelly as a captain of the Third Precinct in 1931

Washington's new police chief, soft-spoken, white-haired Edward J. Kelly, last night defined what it takes to make a good policeman: "A lot of plugging and a lot of digging."

And that is the formula that has brought realization to a dream Kelly has entertained for 35 years, since the time he was a rookie walking a beat down around the gas house in Swampoodle.

The genial Irish-American, who has been called Washington's super sleuth, relived parts of his career in an interview at his home, 1290 Kalmia Road Northwest. The story of every case showed the plugging-digging tenacity plus the photographic memory of the natural-born, old-school policeman.

Take the celebrated Arnold Liberty Bond robbery, back in 1918 when he was a detective sergeant.

Chief Kelly remembered every detail because, as he said, "Well, you never forget."

"A couple named Arnold checked in at the old Dewey Hotel on L Street," he related. "They handed a box containing $18,750 in Liberty Bonds to the clerk, a man by the name of Sidney Jordan. The next morning when they called for the bonds they found the man had cleared out.

"I found the man lived at a boarding house between Twelfth and Thirteenth on K Street, only to find Jordan had left there in a green taxi taking away a trunk. Then I checked every taxi company but none had a taxi of that description."

The new chief went on to say that he then checked all hotel hack stands, finally located the driver at the Willard, and through him traced the suspect to the Union Station, where it was learned he had entrained for New York.

Then followed a discouraging search—for a time in the metropolis. "Pennsylvania Station officials had seen a man of Jordan's description get in a cab with the tag number 23,613," related Kelly, again illustrating his amazing memory. "There was no such taxi with that number. But, finally, the next day I was covering again at the Pennsylvania Station when I saw a cab with the tag number 23,631. Through the driver, I found the man's address and caught him there. He was disguised, wearing a red wig, but I pulled that off and found the bonds in a trunk in the corner of his room."

Kelly, the son of a policeman, Lieut. John F. Kelly, whose service on the force commenced in 1861, has used the same technique on a score of other famous cases and usually with the same good results. Some of these the Mannie Sullivan murder, the slaying of three Chinese in the Chinese Education Mission in 1925, and this year the Eklund sniper killings. The tip that led directly to the arrest of Eklund came from an underworld contact Kelly had developed in past years. Kelly, like most veterans, believes in a policeman "getting down the alleys and into the poolrooms. You can't get a lead after an accomplished crime unless you have the contacts."

The veteran officer is beginning his new job with an open mind but he says: "There are certain weak spots in the department and these must be bolstered . . . There is also the question of morale. My first order is that every policeman, except plainclothesmen, must wear uniforms. I want to see uniformed policemen on the beats and I want to see them patrolling the beats in the old-time way."

Kelly, who steps into perhaps the hottest seat in the District government, but without qualms, was interrupted continually by a barrage of phone calls from well wishers. His wife, Mrs. Elsie M. Kelly, was kept busy greeting friends who came to congratulate the couple personally.

Chief Kelly's record is the story of 35 years relentless fight against crime, of advancement the "hard way." "It was plenty of hard work," was the way he put it.

From his school days at St. Aloysius and Gonzaga College, Kelly wanted to be a policeman. Frequently visiting his father's precinct, he watched law enforcement from his 'teens.

Appointed to the force in 1906, he patrolled the Swampoodle beat for three years before being assigned to the old bicycle squad, counterpart of the modern scout car. He was promoted to detective sergeant in 1915 and in 18 years service in the Detective Bureau won 21 commendations, both from the Commissioners and police superiors. His investigative work brought him recognition as one of the best detectives in the country.

In 1929 Kelly was made a lieutenant and two years later left the Detective Bureau as a captain assigned to the Third Precinct. An inspector since 1935 he has had supervision of Precincts 6, 8, 10, 12 and 13. Earlier he refused the post as detective chief offered him by Superintendent Pelham D. Glassford.

And about the present stormy crime situation in Washington . . . is old-time Washington police efficiency coming back? Kelly smiled, then turned serious. "I am going to do everything in my power," he said.

STEEL WORK RISES FOR THE STATLER HOTEL—TO BE WASHINGTON'S LARGEST

"This hurts us worse than it does you."

So says the Board of Trade's Greater National Capital Committee as it tells organizations angling for convention accommodations that the times are not just right for big gatherings in Washington.

Normally, the GNCC does all it can to attract large groups here. But these are not normal days. The housing squeeze being what it is, only relatively small groups can convene in the Capital with assurance that their delegates would find suitable quarters and meeting rooms would be provided.

Approximately 150 conventions are scheduled to be held here in 1941, compared with more than 200 last year. In 1940 delegates numbered 82,000, this year it will be 55,000 or less.

But the tourists keep coming. According to GNCC estimates, which are based on visitors clocked at Smithsonian Institution, the Capital had 1,500,000 out-of-town sightseers in the first six months of 1941. This is an increase of about 100,000 over the same period last year.

Except for March, all of the other five months through June 30 of this year were ahead of the same months in 1940 in the matter of tourist volume.

All this has given rise to stories, seeping through the hinterland, that it is impossible to get a room in the Capital City. Columnists write about people engaged in Government business having to put up in Baltimore and commute.

The hotel people are disturbed by these tales. Granting their quarters are, let us say, comfortably occupied, the hostelers still fear that if conventions and visitors and businessmen are discouraged from coming to Washington, there will be a piper to pay when leaner days eventually arrive.

Published here for the first time are highlights of a chart showing that 25 leading Washington hotels had more than a half million rooms vacant during the year ended June 30.

the table, only 246 rooms were untenanted when President Roosevelt was reinaugurated on January 20, 1941, for example. On vacancies. On June 28—one month ago—the 25 July 4 of last year, however, there were 2,876 hotels had an average of 2,092 vacancies.

The No. 1 month of the last year, in this respect, was July, 1940, when the 25 showed a total of 78,598 unoccupied rooms. Lowest, as might be expected, was April—cherry blossom time—with 7,737. The grand total of vacant hotel rooms for the 12-month period was 506,583.

Hotels submitting figures for the study were: Ambassador, Benedick, Blackstone, Capitol Park, Carlton, Commodore, Continental, Dodge, Fairfax, Hamilton, Harrington, Hay-Adams, Lafayette, Martinique, Mayflower, New Colonial, Plaza, Raleigh, Roger Smith, Roosevelt, Shoreham, 2400 Sixteenth, Wardman Park, Washington and Willard.

"It is the considered judgment of those who have given attention to and are expert in this subject that any discouragement of the convention program during the period of the emergency by blanket cancellations would have an adverse effect for a long time after the emergency ends and that it would be a most undesirable course which should be adopted only upon showing of a most urgent need which can be met in no other manner," says a statement by the hotel association.

"There has been no consistent crowded conditions and the present hotel facilities are adequate to meet all present demands of the public and, in 1942, according to schedule, the facilities will be considerably enlarged by the opening of a large hotel (Statler) having 850 transient rooms, which hotel is now under construction and the opening is advertised for July, 1942."

Washington's hotel accommodations are adequate to meet the need, says Arthur Harnett, executive secretary of the association. This in spite of the fact that some are subletting space for office use, notably the British Purchasing Committee on the Willard's ninth floor and a Treasury bureau at the Raleigh.

Slim Girl Has Curves, Thin One, Just Nerves

By Ida Jean Kain

WHAT DO the slim girls have that the thin girls lack? Specifically, a well-developed chest, beautiful leg contours and superb vitality—and they make the difference between getting a lot of fun out of life and feeling sorry for yourself.

So if you are to compete with the vital slim girl who wears clothes with dash and whose personality has zip and sparkle, you are going to have to change your ways, my bony, bony lassies.

First, you are going to stop eating between meals and stop having all those rich desserts in place of the foods you need. Anyone would rather have pie than spinach, but to build up your vitality you must eat the foods you need, then maybe the ones you like.

Three 'Square Meals' Needed

You will have three well-balanced, nourishing meals a day and take plenty of time to eat them. It's a good plan for the thin girl, summer and winter, to have a bowl of hot whole grain cereal every morning, with cream and whole milk. Don't say you couldn't eat it, because you can. Start with a small serving and, if you have absolutely no appetite, mix in a little wheat germ to boost the Vitamin B.

And from now on plan menus that do something for you. See that you get plenty of whole milk, eggs, potatoes, fresh vegetables and fresh fruits. Build your menus around that list and have the rich foods and desserts afterwards. Make sure that you never skip a meal.

You'll have to exercise to improve your circulation, digestion and assimilation—and to make your figure come out right. If you can take up sports this summer, there are three that might have been invented expressly for you thin girls—archery, rowing and swimming. They will not only give you a well-developed chest with dimples at the base of your throat instead of those salt cellars, but will also give you nicely rounded arms and a proud posture.

Take It Easy At Start

If you cannot manage sports, pattern your exercises along the lines of the same trio. You can do the backstroke and breast stroke for calisthenics, sit on the floor and do forward-bending and circling to simulate rowing, and exercise with a medicine ball to develop chest and arms. Start out with 5 minutes, increase to 10, and later to 15. Take your exercise easy and relax between movements.

The surest way to develop skinny legs would be to take up tap or ballet dancing, and a class is always more fun than solo exercise. But if that is beyond you, make a practice of dancing around on your toes for 15 minutes a day, broken up into two periods. You will be surprised at the change this will make in your legs.

There are the measures that will give you a healthy nervous system and beautiful figure—a well-rounded health program is what they amount to.

Bedroom Should Be Serene Retreat From the World

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin

Few of the glamour luxuries can compare with the pleasure of a charming and comfortable bedroom. Not just a place to sleep, but a place where you can rest and ruminate, retreat and restore your courage, fix up and putter, keep your personal treasures and express your private preferences in decorating.

It doesn't take a mint of money, but it does take eagerness and ingenuity. A room we saw recently was charming in an exquisite sort of way. Though, on analysis, there weren't such a lot of expensive furnishings involved. The color scheme was the lovely part—pink and pale mauve. The walls were painted in pale mauve and the floor carpeted in a misty patterned rug in light mauve. Against this background a pink-flowered sateen was used for bedspread and chair covering.

The bed—a mattress and springs on legs—was set in an alcove made with plyboard and concealing two closets on either side. This was outlined with floral stripes, cut from the sateen, which were pasted on the wall. A row of cushions for the head of the bed included flowered ones alternated with plain mauve sateen. Curtains of crisp white organdy finished with valance of the flowered sateen—a dressing table skirt of white organdy also finished with a swag valance of the pink flowered sateen—a beautiful mahogany highboy . . . these really finished off the furnishings of the room, lamps with pink glass bases and white shades and clear plastic toilet things added accent.

Another pleasant bedroom was all in white and blue with maple furniture. White walls and white muslin curtains, a blue and white toile de Jouy type figured cotton fabric quilted for a bedspread, the same blue and white for chair covers, plain blue rug, and there you had as fresh an effect as anyone could want.

Subtle Accent for Black

From myriad pastel shades and splashy prints emerges black to predominate the midsummer scene. This calls for a change in your perfume. The delicate floral scents are perfect with your white or pink dress but out of harmony with your sophisticated black outfit. With this in mind, the chic model above chooses "Amphrodisia"—a heady champagne—caviar fragrance to accent the merry widow naughtiness of her midsummer black dress and hat. "Jet" is still another sophisticated perfume created especially to add the essence of "oomph" to black

More Plastics In Refrigerators

Housekeepers who buy electric refrigerators in 1942 will find them equipped with more than 50 plastic parts, predict engineers of the larger refrigerator manufacturers in a survey by the plastics department of the duPont Co.

A compositet 1941 electric refrigerator has some 30 plastic parts and more than 77 possible plastic applications, the survey reveals. Refrigerator and plastic engineers already have developed a number of new plastic parts for 1942 models.

Scarlet Nail Polish Going Out

Hollywood, Calif.—Scarlet nail polish is sufferitg an almost total eclipse among the pulchritudinous members of the Navy Blues Sextet. With the exception of Claire James and Lorraine Gettman, who still prefer ruby red nails, the Sextet is in favor of a meeker shade that is very new and which the girls call a "true pink." Marguerite Chapman introduced the new shade to Peggy Diggins, Georgia Carroll and Kay Aldridge and showed them her own unique way of applying it.

Marguerite files her nails to perfectly round tips—also finding more favor among Hollywood girls than the pointed mandarin tips that have been so popular. She then applies a coat of white "prolong," followed by a thin application of the pink polish, leaving the ends of her nails untouched for a second coat of white on the tips. This new polish has a dull rather than a glossy finish.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Lovable at Home, Brilliant Man Embarrasses Wife In Company, by 'Hogging' Conversation and Telling Ribald Anecdotes; Is There Way of Quelling Him?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: My husband is really a wonderful person and I love him dearly. If we were off on an island, all to ourselves, we would be the happiest mortals alive. Our problem is purely social. My husband has a brilliant mind and he loves nothing better than to delve deep into some subject, either by himself or with me. But this side of his nature is known only to a privileged few, and the others sum him up as a "queer duck."

A partial explanation could be that for 10 years (before we met) his work put him in contact with a good many mediocre people, with whom he was obliged to converse as a matter of policy. I think this is where he must have acquired his bad habit of making meaningless, pointless conversation. This habit has carried over into our married life and he seems unable to shake it off, even in the company of interesting people.

When we have guests, he turns on his small talk as one might turn on a gramaphone; as though he were obliged to entertain continuously through the evening. He jokes, clowns, puns and gesticulates—in a not too clever manner, alas. Also, (I suppose I should mention), he rather enjoys telling ribald anecdotes; and one of his favorite stories (in company) concerns two cats who do their courting under his window. He gives them such human characteristics (carrying on a mimicry of their dialogue, somewhat in the Walt Disney manner), that it is extremely embarrassing to listen to. Yet he is not this way when we are alone.

On one particular evening we had as guests a couple of friends just returned from the Orient and I was eager to hear of their trip. But they couldn't get a word in. When we have guests my prime concern is that they enjoy themselves. And I like to listen. I encourage others to talk of themselves, and I have learned a great deal in so doing. Also I am intensely interested in people, and love to study the way their minds work and note their different ways of expressing themselves. As a result I have many friends, and many of them come to me for advice. So much so, in fact, that my husband has nicknamed me "Mary Haworth the second."

I can tell the instant a person begins to get bored, and when, in company, my husband talks on and on about himself, with the guests all but yawning in his face, I can hardly bear it. I have spoken to him about it many times—trying to show him how little he profits from a friendship if he doesn't give the other fellow a chance to reveal himself. Sometimes he agrees that I am right. Indeed, he has conscientiously tried to reform—but his attempts are not successful. The poor dear gets so confused. He begins his monologue; then realizes he shouldn't have launched it, and either ends it very abruptly or leaves it hanging in mid-air! This convinces me that my approach to the situation is not what it should be.

As I said before, we could be very happy without any friends at all. But on the other hand, I enjoy people, and if I had my way, we would join musical, literary and dramatic groups and have a wealth of friends of a serious nature. But for the time being we are stymied in that respect, and will be until this problem is solved. What do you suggest? My husband has just left on a week's vacation and I would like your reply before he returns.

Record His Performance And Let Him Hear It

DEAR L. T. S.: If your husband could be given the experience, just once, of hearing himself as others hear him, it might impress upon him the necessity of intelligently weighing and economically measuring his vocal contributions to "company" thereafter. Would it be possible, I wonder, for you to rent and rig up a concealed dictaphone recording outfit in your living room that would "take down" his boring, embarrassing wing-bag performance, the next time you have guests? By "playing back" such a recording to him a few days after the guests had departed (and he had had time to forget what he said) you might accomplish all that you have tried, and failed, to achieve by worried remonstrance.

Such a disk, if given an absurd title, might become at once a family joke and an enduringly convenient rebuke to him. It could be turned on for his benefit whenever he had forgetfully blitzkrieged another group into enervated silence. Or you might contrive a merry, elliptical warning reference to it (in a wifely "aside" to him) whenever he showed signs of launching into one of his tedious talkathons.

In my opinion, his tendency toward "word hemorrhage" (as I once heard a woman describe such garrulity) cannot be overcome by subtle stratagems. Bold measures are required. For instance, since he is amiably open to constructive suggestions, ask him to pledge his word of honor that he will follow your lead, the next time you have guests, by confining his utterances to intelligently provocative questions and courteous comment on the information thus evoked.

Having secured his promise, invite the most interesting conversationalists you can corral (preferably persons who have never been exposed to your husband at his oracular worst), and give them the spotlight for the entire evening. Your husband may find himself so relaxed, diverted and informed, at the evening's end, as finally to see the pleasurable profit of not "doing all the talking." Also, his performance as attentive listener (for a change), may result in cordial, behind-the-hand compliments from his guests—which, if faithfully collected and repeated to him by you, should encourage him to stick to the role.

It is possible your husband's out-of-control talkativeness is symptomatic of lack of poise, stemming from the moot "inferiority complex." Persons of proper self-regard, who are comfortable in the conviction that people, for the most part, like them "as is," never make spectacles of themselves, trying to be the life of the party. They know that "easy does it"—and this is a lesson your husband needs to learn. So perhaps you can teach him by giving him to hear, firstly, how he sounds when straining too hard and defeating his purpose, and, secondly, how other people sound when granted an opportunity to converse, in a civilized, round-table manner, on topics having substance and significance. Right Diet Will Fill Out Figure For Swim Suit

"BATHING suits may make some girls look glamorous—me, I just look like a scarecrow!" you sigh if you're thin!

But have you ever really tried to gain weight? We don't mean by indiscriminate stuffing! For you can eat and eat and eat without gaining a single ounce if you choose low-calory foods instead of the fattening high-calory ones.

Perhaps that's why you're thin. You just naturally head for beef loaf (only 150 calories a serving), lettuce salad (100), sponge cake (100).

You neglect the foods that could make you fat, such as beef pie (400 a serving), fruit salad (200) and chocolate pudding (215 a half cup).

So you'll get to know which foods are your friends, keep a calory chart on hand. Once you know that a good-sized pat of butter has 100 calories, you'll slip an extra pat in whenever you can. You may even develop a fondness for creamed foods—white sauce is 416 a cup!

Don't worry about not getting fat! For every 4,000 extra calories you gain an extra pound!

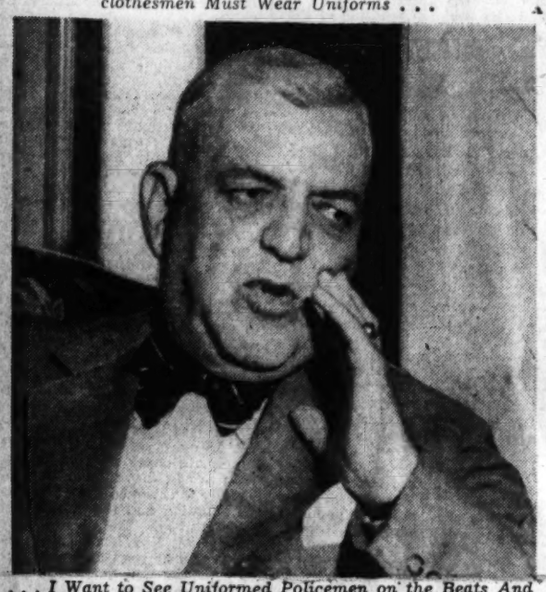
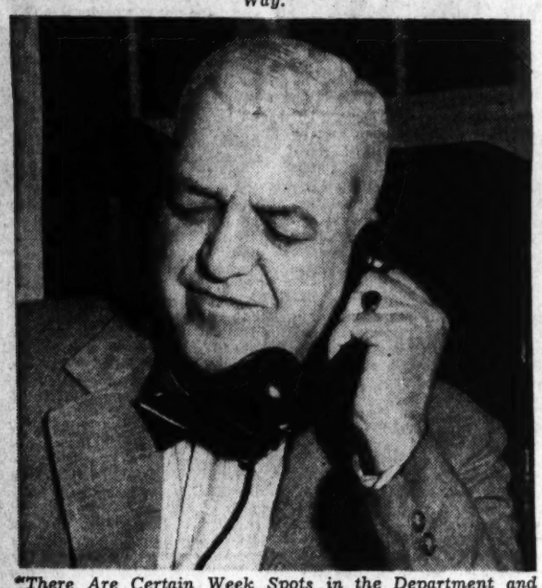
Chief Kelly, Once a Swampoodle Rookie, Got to Top the Hard Way

"My First Order Is That Every Policeman Except Plainsclothesmen Must Wear Uniforms . . .



. . . I Want to See Uniformed Policemen on the Beats And I Want to See Them Patrolling the Beats in the Old Time Way."



"There Are Certain Week Spots in the Department and These Must Be Bolstered. I'm Going to Do Everything In My Power."

Washington's new police chief, soft-spoken, white-haired Edward J. Kelly, last night defined what it takes to make a good policeman: "A lot of plugging and a lot of digging."

And that is the formula that has brought realization to a dream Kelly has entertained for 35 years, since the time he was a rookie walking a beat down around the gas house in Swampoodle.

The genial Irish-American, who has been called Washington's super sleuth, relived parts of his career in an interview at his home, 1290 Kalmia Road Northwest. The story of every case showed the plugging-digging tenacity plus the photographic memory of the natural-born, old-school policeman.

Take the celebrated Arnold Liberty Bond robbery, back in 1918 when he was a detective sergeant.

Chief Kelly remembered every detail because, as he said, "Well, you never forget."

"A couple named Arnold checked in at the old Dewey Hotel on L Street," he related. "They handed a box containing $18,750 in Liberty Bonds to the clerk, a man by the name of Sidney Jordan. The next morning when they called for the bonds they found the man had cleared out.

"I found the man lived at a boarding house between Twelfth and Thirteenth on K Street, only to find Jordan had left there in a green taxi taking away a trunk. Then I checked every taxi company but none had a taxi of that description."

The new chief went on to say that he then checked all hotel hack stands, finally located the driver at the Willard, and through him traced the suspect to the Union Station, where it was learned he had entrained for New York.

Then followed a discouraging search—for a time in the metropolis. "Pennsylvania Station officials had seen a man of Jordan's description get in a cab with the tag number 23,613," related Kelly, again illustrating his amazing memory. "There was no such taxi with that number. But, finally, the next day I was covering again at the Pennsylvania Station when I saw a cab with the tag number 23,631. Through the driver, I found the man's address and caught him there. He was disguised, wearing a red wig, but I pulled that off and found the bonds in a trunk in the corner of his room."

Kelly, the son of a policeman, Lieut. John F. Kelly, whose service on the force commenced in 1861, has used the same technique on a score of other famous cases and usually with the same good results. Some of these the Mannie Sullivan murder, the slaying of three Chinese in the Chinese Education Mission in 1925, and this year the Eklund sniper killings. The tip that led directly to the arrest of Eklund came from an underworld contact Kelly had developed in past years. Kelly, like most veterans, believes in a policeman "getting down the alleys and into the poolrooms. You can't get a lead after an accomplished crime unless you have the contacts."

The veteran officer is beginning his new job with an open mind but he says: "There are certain weak spots in the department and these must be bolstered . . . There is also the question of morale. My first order is that every policeman, except plainclothesmen, must wear uniforms. I want to see uniformed policemen on the beats and I want to see them patrolling the beats in the old-time way."

Kelly, who steps into perhaps the hottest seat in the District government, but without qualms, was interrupted continually by a barrage of phone calls from well wishers. His wife, Mrs. Elsie M. Kelly, was kept busy greeting friends who came to congratulate the couple personally.

Chief Kelly's record is the story of 35 years relentless fight against crime, of advancement the "hard way." "It was plenty of hard work," was the way he put it.

From his school days at St. Aloysius and Gonzaga College, Kelly wanted to be a policeman. Frequently visiting his father's precinct, he watched law enforcement from his 'teens.

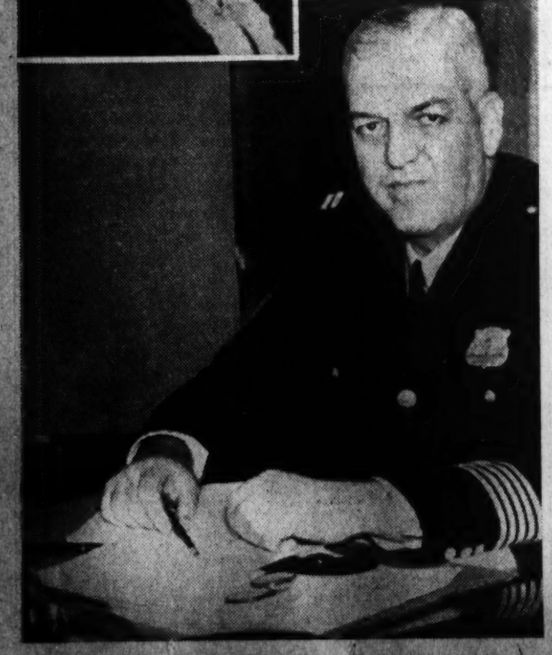
Appointed to the force in 1906, he patrolled the Swampoodle beat for three years before being assigned to the old bicycle squad, counterpart of the modern scout car. He was promoted to detective sergeant in 1915 and in 18 years service in the Detective Bureau won 21 commendations, both from the Commissioners and police superiors. His investigative work brought him recognition as one of the best detectives in the country.

In 1929 Kelly was made a lieutenant and two years later left the Detective Bureau as a captain assigned to the Third Precinct. An inspector since 1935 he has had supervision of Precincts 6, 8, 10, 12 and 13. Earlier he refused the post as detective chief offered him by Superintendent Pelham D. Glassford.

And about the present stormy crime situation in Washington . . . is old-time Washington police efficiency coming back? Kelly smiled, then turned serious. "I am going to do everything in my power," he said.

Mrs. Kelly

The new police chief's wife, Mrs. Elsie M. Kelly (left), was kept busy last night greeting friends who came to their home to offer personal congratulations on Kelly's appointment. Below—Kelly as a captain of the Third Precinct in 1931



Out of the Album—Kelly comes by his profession honestly. His father, Lieut. John Kelly (right, above), was commander of old No. 6 on New Jersey Avenue, south of E Street. Kelly had been on the force three years when the picture at right was snapped as he called from a box in No. 6. Kelly, a member of the bicycle squad, was proud of his bike, vintage of 1909, bell and all

"This hurts us worse than it does you."

So says the Board of Trade's Greater National Capital Committee as it tells organizations angling for convention accommodations that the times are not just right for big gatherings in Washington.

Normally, the GNCC does all it can to attract large groups here. But these are not normal days. The housing squeeze being what it is, only relatively small groups can convene in the Capital with assurance that their delegates would find suitable quarters and meeting rooms would be provided.

Approximately 150 conventions are scheduled to be held here in 1941, compared with more than 200 last year. In 1940 delegates numbered 82,000, this year it will be 55,000 or less.

But the tourists keep coming. According to GNCC estimates, which are based on visitors clocked at Smithsonian Institution, the Capital had 1,500,000 out-of-town sightseers in the first six months of 1941. This is an increase of about 100,000 over the same period last year.

Except for March, all of the other five months through June 30 of this year were ahead of the same months in 1940 in the matter of tourist volume.

All this has given rise to stories, seeping through the hinterland, that it is impossible to get a room in the Capital City. Columnists write about people engaged in Government business having to put up in Baltimore and commute.

The hotel people are disturbed by these tales. Granting their quarters are, let us say, comfortably occupied, the hostelers still fear that if conventions and visitors and businessmen are discouraged from coming to Washington, there will be a piper to pay when leaner days eventually arrive.

Published here for the first time are highlights of a chart showing that 25 leading Washington hotels had more than a half million rooms vacant during the year ended June 30.

the table, only 246 rooms were untenanted when President Roosevelt was reinaugurated on January 20, 1941, for example. On vacancies. On June 28—one month ago—the 25 July 4 of last year, however, there were 2,876 hotels had an average of 2,092 vacancies.

The No. 1 month of the last year, in this respect, was July, 1940, when the 25 showed a total of 78,598 unoccupied rooms. Lowest, as might be expected, was April—cherry blossom time—with 7,737. The grand total of vacant hotel rooms for the 12-month period was 506,583.

Hotels submitting figures for the study were: Ambassador, Benedick, Blackstone, Capitol Park, Carlton, Commodore, Continental, Dodge, Fairfax, Hamilton, Harrington, Hay-Adams, Lafayette, Martinique, Mayflower, New Colonial, Plaza, Raleigh, Roger Smith, Roosevelt, Shoreham, 2400 Sixteenth, Wardman Park, Washington and Willard.

"It is the considered judgment of those who have given attention to and are expert in this subject that any discouragement of the convention program during the period of the emergency by blanket cancellations would have an adverse effect for a long time after the emergency ends and that it would be a most undesirable course which should be adopted only upon showing of a most urgent need which can be met in no other manner," says a statement by the hotel association.

"There has been no consistent crowded conditions and the present hotel facilities are adequate to meet all present demands of the public and, in 1942, according to schedule, the facilities will be considerably enlarged by the opening of a large hotel (Statler) having 850 transient rooms, which hotel is now under construction and the opening is advertised for July, 1942."

Washington's hotel accommodations are adequate to meet the need, says Arthur Harnett, executive secretary of the association. This in spite of the fact that some are subletting space for office use, notably the British Purchasing Committee on the Willard's ninth floor and a Treasury bureau at the Raleigh.

Slim Girl Has Curves, Thin One, Just Nerves

By Ida Jean Kain

WHAT DO the slim girls have that the thin girls lack? Specifically, a well-developed chest, beautiful leg contours and superb vitality—and they make the difference between getting a lot of fun out of life and feeling sorry for yourself.

So if you are to compete with the vital slim girl who wears clothes with dash and whose personality has zip and sparkle, you are going to have to change your ways, my bony, bony lassies.

First, you are going to stop eating between meals and stop having all those rich desserts in place of the foods you need. Anyone would rather have pie than spinach, but to build up your vitality you must eat the foods you need, then maybe the ones you like.

Three 'Square Meals' Needed

You will have three well-balanced, nourishing meals a day and take plenty of time to eat them. It's a good plan for the thin girl, summer and winter, to have a bowl of hot whole grain cereal every morning, with cream and whole milk. Don't say you couldn't eat it, because you can. Start with a small serving and, if you have absolutely no appetite, mix in a little wheat germ to boost the Vitamin B.

And from now on plan menus that do something for you. See that you get plenty of whole milk, eggs, potatoes, fresh vegetables and fresh fruits. Build your menus around that list and have the rich foods and desserts afterwards. Make sure that you never skip a meal.

You'll have to exercise to improve your circulation, digestion and assimiliation—and to make your figure come out right. If you can take up sports this summer, there are three that might have been invented expressly for you thin girls—archery, rowing and swimming. They will not only give you a well-developed chest with dimples at the base of your throat instead of those salt cellars, but will also give you nicely rounded arms and a proud posture.

Take It Easy At Start

If you cannot manage sports, pattern your exercises along the lines of the same trio. You can do the backstroke and breast stroke for calisthenics, sit on the floor and do forward-bending and circling to simulate rowing, and exercise with a medicine ball to develop chest and arms. Start out with 5 minutes, increase to 10, and later to 15. Take your exercise easy and relax between movements.

The surest way to develop skinny legs would be to take up tap or ballet dancing, and a class is always more fun than solo exercise. But if that is beyond you, make a practice of dancing around on your toes for 15 minutes a day, broken up into two periods. You will be surprised at the change this will make in your legs.

There are the measures that will give you a healthy nervous system and beautiful figure—a well-rounded health program is what they amount to.

Bedroom Should Be Serene Retreat From the World

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin

Few of the glamour luxuries can compare with the pleasure of a charming and comfortable bedroom. Not just a place to sleep, but a place where you can rest and ruminate, retreat and restore your courage, fix up and putter, keep your personal treasures and express your private preferences in decorating.

It doesn't take a mint of money, but it does take eagerness and ingenuity. A room we saw recently was charming in an exquisite sort of way. Though, on analysis, there weren't such a lot of expensive furnishings involved. The color scheme was the lovely part—pink and pale mauve. The walls were painted in pale mauve and the floor carpeted in a misty patterned rug in light mauve. Against this background a pink-flowered sateen was used for bedspread and chair covering.

The bed—a mattress and springs on legs—was set in an alcove made with plyboard and concealing two closets on either side. This was outlined with floral stripes, cut from the sateen, which were pasted on the wall. A row of cushions for the head of the bed included flowered ones alternated with plain mauve sateen. Curtains of crisp white organdy finished with valance of the flowered sateen—a dressing table skirt of white organdy also finished with a swag valance of the pink flowered sateen—a beautiful mahogany highboy . . . these really finished off the furnishings of the room, lamps with pink glass bases and white shades and clear plastic toilet things added accent.

Another pleasant bedroom was all in white and blue with maple furniture. White walls and white muslin curtains, a blue and white toile de Jouy type figured cotton fabric quilted for a bedspread, the same blue and white for chair covers, plain blue rug, and there you had as fresh an effect as anyone could want.

Subtle Accent for Black

From myriad pastel shades and splashy prints emerges black to predominate the midsummer scene. This calls for a change in your perfume. The delicate floral scents are perfect with your white or pink dress but out of harmony with your sophisticated black outfit. With this in mind, the chic model above chooses "Amphrodisia"—a heady champagne—caviar fragrance to accent the merry widow naughtiness of her midsummer black dress and hat. "Jet" is still another sophisticated perfume created especially to add the essence of "oomph" to black

More Plastics In Refrigerators

Housekeepers who buy electric refrigerators in 1942 will find them equipped with more than 50 plastic parts, predict engineers of the larger refrigerator manufacturers in a survey by the plastics department of the duPont Co.

A composite1941 electric refrigerator has some 39 plastic parts and more than 77 possible plastic applications, the survey reveals. Refrigerator and plastic engineers already have developed a number of new plastic parts for 1942 models.

Scarlet Nail Polish Going Out

Hollywood, Calif.—Scarlet nail polish is sufferitg an almost total eclipse among the pulchritudinous members of the Navy Blues Sextet. With the exception of Claire James and Lorraine Gettman, who still prefer ruby red nails, the Sextet is in favor of a meeker shade that is very new and which the girls call a "true pink." Marguerite Chapman introduced the new shade to Peggy Diggins, Georgia Carroll and Kay Aldridge and showed them her own unique way of applying it.

Marguerite files her nails to perfectly round tips—also finding more favor among Hollywood girls than the pointed mandarin tips that have been so popular. She then applies a coat of white "prolong," followed by a thin application of the pink polish, leaving the ends of her nails untouched for a second coat of white on the tips. This new polish has a dull rather than a glossy finish.

Mary Haworth's Mail

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: My husband is really a wonderful person and I love him dearly. If we were off on an island, all to ourselves, we would be the happiest mortals alive. Our problem is purely social. My husband has a brilliant mind and he loves nothing better than to delve deep into some subject, either by himself or with me. But this side of his nature is known only to a privileged few; and the others sum him up as a "queer duck."

A partial explanation could be that for 10 years (before we met) his work put him in contact with a good many mediocre people, with whom he was obliged to converse as a matter of policy. I think this is where he must have acquired his bad habit of making meaningless, pointless conversation. This habit has carried over into our married life and he seems unable to shake it off, even in the company of interesting people.

When we have guests, he turns on his small talk as one might turn on a gramaphone; as though he were obliged to entertain continuously through the evening. He jokes, clowns, puns and gesticulates—in a not too clever manner, alas. Also, (I suppose I should mention), he rather enjoys telling ribald anecdotes; and one of his favorite stories (in company) concerns two cats who do their courting under his window. He gives them such human characteristics (carrying on a mimicry of their dialogue, somewhat in the Walt Disney manner), that it is extremely embarrassing to listen to. Yet he is not this way when we are alone.

On one particular evening we had as guests a couple of friends just returned from the Orient and I was eager to hear of their trip. But they couldn't get a word in. When we have guests my prime concern is that they enjoy themselves. And I like to listen. I encourage others to talk of themselves, and I have learned a great deal in so doing. Also I am intensely interested in people, and love to study the way their minds work and note their different ways of expressing themselves. As a result I have many friends, and many of them come to me for advice. So much so, in fact, that my husband has nicknamed me "Mary Haworth the second."

I can tell the instant a person begins to get bored, and when, in company, my husband talks on and on about himself, with the guests all but yawning in his face, I can hardly bear it. I have spoken to him about it many times—trying to show him how little he profits from a friendship if he doesn't give the other fellow a chance to reveal himself. Sometimes he agrees that I am right. Indeed, he has conscientiously tried to reform—but his attempts are not successful. The poor dear gets so confused. He begins his monologue; then realizes he shouldn't have launched it, and either ends it very abruptly or leaves it hanging in mid-air! This convinces me that my approach to the situation is not what it should be.

As I said before, we could be very happy without any friends at all. But on the other hand, I enjoy people, and if I had my way, we would join musical, literary and dramatic groups and have a wealth of friends of a serious nature. But for the time being we are stymied in that respect, and will be until this problem is solved. What do you suggest? My husband has just left on a week's vacation and I would like your reply before he returns.

DEAR L. T. S.: If your husband could be given the experience, just once, of hearing himself as others hear him, it might impress upon him the necessity of intelligently weighing and economically measuring his vocal contributions to "company" thereafter. Would it be possible, I wonder, for you to rent and rig up a concealed dictaphone recording outfit in your living room that would "take down" his boring, embarrassing wing-bag performance, the next time you have guests? By "playing back" such a recording to him a few days after the guests had departed (and he had had time to forget what he said) you might accomplish all that you have tried, and failed, to achieve by worried remonstrance.

Such a disk, if given an absurd title, might become at once a family joke and an enduringly convenient rebuke to him. It could be turned on for his benefit whenever he had forgetfully blitzkrieged another group into enervated silence. Or you might contrive a merry, elliptical warning reference to it (in a wifely "aside" to him) whenever he showed signs of launching into one of his tedious talkathons.

In my opinion, his tendency toward "word hemorrhage" (as I once heard a woman describe such garrulity) cannot be overcome by subtle stratagems. Bold measures are required. For instance, since he is amiably open to constructive suggestions, ask him to pledge his word of honor that he will follow your lead, the next time you have guests, by confining his utterances to intelligently provocative questions and courteous comment on the information thus evoked.

Having secured his promise, invite the most interesting conversationalists you can corral (preferably persons who have never been exposed to your husband at his oracular worst), and give them the spotlight for the entire evening. Your husband may find himself so relaxed, diverted and informed, at the evening's end, as finally to see the pleasurable profit of not "doing all the talking." Also, his performance as attentive listener (for a change), may result in cordial, behind-the-hand compliments from his guests—which, if faithfully collected and repeated to him by you, should encourage him to stick to the role.

It is possible your husband's out-of-control talkativeness is symptomatic of lack of poise, stemming from the moot "inferiority complex." Persons of proper self-regard, who are comfortable in the conviction that people, for the most part, like them "as is," never make spectacles of themselves, trying to be the life of the party. They know that "easy does it"—and this is a lesson your husband needs to learn. So perhaps you can teach him by giving him to hear, firstly, how he sounds when straining too hard and defeating his purpose, and, secondly, how other people sound when granted an opportunity to converse, in a civilized, round-table manner, on topics having substance and significance. M. H.

You neglect the foods that could make you fat, such as beef pie (400 a serving), fruit salad (200) and chocolate pudding (215 a half cup).

So you'll get to know which foods are your friends, keep a calory chart on hand. Once you know that a good-sized pat of butter has 100 calories, you'll slip an extra pat in whenever you can. You may even develop a fondness for creamed foods—white sauce is 416 a cup!

Oxford Regatta to Lure Sea-Minded Society

Throngs of Washingtonians Will Attend Week-end Event on Maryland's Eastern Shore; Many Will Sail Their Own Boats

By Carolyn Bell

If you don't know a jib from a mains'l and have a fuzzy idea that a tack is something people are constantly sitting on—you had better stay away from Gibson Island. This Maryland resort seems to harbor the boat enthusiasts to end all boat enthusiasts and just about nine-tenths of them are Washingtonians.

The Oxford Regatta being staged at Oxford, on the Eastern Shore, this weekend will draw a large crowd from the Capital. Mr. and Mrs. Athur Clephane—both ardent devotees of sailing—will be on hand. They plan to cruise down on the "Blue Lagoon" with Mr. and Mrs. Charles Wallace, of Baltimore. The Clephanes spend just about every weekend with her brother, Jack Markell, at Gibson Island. There will be a number of races at the regatta, one down from Gibson Island to Oxford on Friday and another back on Saturday. Numerous shorter races will be held in between and on Sunday.

Corrin Strongs Sail 'Narada'

Maj. and Mrs. L. Corrin Strong have long held out for the sail—versus the motor. They own and race the Narada, a lovely sail boat. The Strongs have a cottage at Gibson Island, where Mrs. Strong has been spending the summer. Maj. Strong, who recently was called to active service with the Army, has not been able to spend as much time aboard the Narada as in previous years, but does manage a weekend now and then.

For the first time in many years Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Wise are "boatless." But they, too, have managed a number of pleasant weekends at Gibson Island this year. They have recently returned from a jaunt to New England, where they visited at Prides Crossing, Mass., and in Maine.

Mr. and Mrs. William Barron Kerkam, jr., have their boat, Zingara, anchored at Gailsville, Md., just below Annapolis. They have managed to steal a weekend now and then to be aboard their boat with a party of friends. At present Mrs. Kerkam is visting in Marblehead, Mass., as the guest of Mrs. George Briggs, of this city.

Melville Grosvenor Star Boat Champion

Star boat champion at Gibson Island—at least he has been for the past few years and it is more or less taken for granted that he will cop the prize again this season—is Melville Grosvenor. The son of Dr. Gilbert Grosvenor, president of the National Geographic, not only sails boats but has his whole family doing it. Mrs. Grosvenor is skipper of her own vessel. All three children manage their own little sailboats.

Mr. and Mrs. Donald McKnew can be found cruising about the waters that surround Gibson Island almost any weekend now. They have a cottage there, and have had for a number of years. Their young daughter, "Sunny" McKnew, handles a sail like a veteran and, according to all reports, is "cleaning up" in all of the children's races this season.

Motorboat advocates are Mr. and Mrs. Walter Guy and Mr. and Mrs. Chan Mason. The Masons, who usually spend their summers at Gibson, are there now and have their new launch tied up not far from their home.

A great number of the sailboat champions have cruised up South River to visit Mr. and Mrs. Sam Scrivener, who have taken a place there for the summer, rather than at Gibson Island.

Among the guests at yesterday's party were Mrs. Dwight Cooke, Mrs. Herbert Peacock, Mrs. John Hasley, Mrs. Carl Tilman, Mrs. Lloyd Hoppe, Mrs. McClain Smith, Mrs. D. A. Hart, Mrs. Fred Evans, Mrs. Malcolm Kerlin, Mrs. Miller Foster, Mrs. Mignon Williams, Mrs. Hubert Snoke, Mrs. George Goetzman, Mrs. Charles McNabb, Mrs. Norton Hough, sr., and Mrs. Ludwig W. Rohde.

Jansky, Mrs. Hazen Colvin, Mrs. Charles Gilmore, Miss Margaret Leary, Mrs. George Kane, the mother of the bride-to-be, and Miss Eleanor Kane, the bride-elect's sister.

About the Town

with Dudley Harmon

TO SEE CHIC and handsome Mrs. Pilson Warren dining at the opening of the new airport restaurant on Monday evening, you would never suspect she has been working an average of 12 hours a day for months. Mrs. Warren, who is a member of the Junior League, was receiving congratulations from every side on the really beautiful modern room, all of which she designed, even down to the knives and forks and costumes of the waitresses.

Dudley Harmon

At a table for two with a friend, Mrs. Warren wore an all-white costume, with a small hat made of water lilies. "I don't expect to take a vacation this summer," she said. "I'm knee deep in designs for the lobby of the new apartment house which is being built on Woodland Drive, next to the Wardman Park."

"But don't call me an interior decorator," she laughs. "I'm an architectural designer. In other words, instead of placing chintz doo-dads here and prints there, I use nothing that isn't functional to the design. For instance, the curtains"—pointing to the floor-length blue and white draperies at the enormous glass windows looking out onto the field—"are only there to keep out the glare. They are made of glass and are immune to water, sun and fire."

THE SIDE of the room looking out over a terrace and the field beyond is made entirely of huge plates of glass. The wall opposite is of rift wood, a very fine grained oak. Mrs. Warren had this wood repeated in the dining-room chairs, which are upholstered in a new water-repellent material recently invented by the duPont laboratories.

The ceiling of the dining room and the dresses of the waitresses are of a soft shade of gray which Mrs. Warren calls "aluminum color." The only ornament on the ceiling is a feather design surrounding an indirect light, which was borrowed from the United States Mint (compare it with the feather tracing on a dime).

THE BEAUTIFUL air terminal building will not be 100 per cent completed until Mrs. Warren has finished the design for a soda fountain. "Behind the fountain," she explains, "I'm using a mural made from the only negative in existence of the first flight of the Wright brothers at Kitty Hawk. The print is owned by Orville Wright, who has sent it to me to be photographed for the mural."

Mrs. Warren spent two years studying at Williamsburg. "Just long enough to convince me I don't like eighteenth century furniture." Now she specializes mostly in modern design. The current Washington boom finds her in her shop from 9 in the morning until midnight.

HERE AND THERE. Diplomats who returned on the West Point have been cautioned not to talk for publication about their European experiences. However, I learn that some of them were so hungry by the time they reached Lisbon that they splurged on big meals to the point where they fell ill from overeating. . . . Mr. and Mrs. Cavendish Cannon, who arrived here early in the summer from duty in Athens, lost trunks of furs, brocades and beautiful clothes at Belgrade. Their trunks were at the station, which was blown up by the Germans. On the other hand, their boxes containing clothes brushes, the dog's dinner plate and tooth brushes came through unscathed. "Wouldn't you know?" sighs Mr. Cannon, who is now on duty at the State Department. They had to leave their furniture behind in Athens.

Mrs. Meacham Off to California To Visit Daughter

Virginia Decker Is Wed; Couple Will Live Here

The wedding of Miss Virginia Mae Decker and Harold Ham took place at 3:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon in the rectory of St. Paul's Church with the Rev. Edmund J. Fontaine officiating. A reception followed at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. Laura Mae Decker. Mr. Ham is the son of Mrs. Flossie G. Ham, of Charleston, S. C.

The bride wore a blue green crepe frock, floor length, trimmed with rhinestone clips, and a matching brimmed hat and carried a bouquet of white roses and gladioli. Miss Helen Decker was her sister's maid of honor. She wore a pink jersey frock trimmed with lace and carried pink roses intermingled with delphinium. Miss Eulalie Harrison served as flower girl. Her frock was of pink net and she carried an old-fashioned nosegay. William T. Ham served as best man for his brother.

Mrs. Decker, who received with the couple at the reception, wore a black frock with an embroidered organdy jacket. Mrs. Ham had chosen a black and white ensemble. When the couple left by plane for New York the bride wore a red and white traveling outfit. After a stay in Atlantic City they will make their home in the Garden Towers, 2325 Fifteenth Street. Mr. Ham attended the College of Charleston and Georgetown Law School. He is a member of Pi Kappa Phi and Delta Theta Phi.

Mrs. Uline Hill Busy With Plans For Her Wedding on August 20

Setting her forthcoming marriage for August 20, Mrs. Uline Hill and her daughter, Patricia, are busy making wedding and household moving plans preparatory to leaving for Detroit on August 14.

Mrs. Hill's marriage to Dr. Jean Paul Pratt, Detroit physician, will take place in the new home which the couple has chosen in the doctor's home city. They will entertain there at a large reception September 10. During the past few months, Mrs. Hill has been a frequent visitor in Michigan and her fiance has made numerous trips to the Capital, so the news of the approaching nuptials does not come as a complete surprise to her many Washington friends. The wedding will be strictly a family affair, with Miss Hill acting as her mother's only attendant and Dr. Pratt's son, Charles, now a student at Trinity College, Hartford, Conn., serving as his father's best man.

Before their departure next week Miss Hill and her mother will be honored at a number of farewell parties.

This afternoon Mrs. Robert Soutter will honor Mrs. Hill at a cocktail party; tomorrow the bride-elect will share honors with Mrs. Cecil Moss, a house guest of Mrs. Theresa Goode, at a cocktail party at Mrs. Goode's home; on Saturday she will be the guest of honor at a luncheon-shower to be given by Mrs. Bernice Heffner and Miss Ruth Hamilton at the Shoreham. On Wednesday Mrs. J. Frank Kelly will give a dinner for her.

Meanwhile her daughter, Patricia, will be feted by the members of the younger set. Among the farewell parties is a dinner to be given in her honor by William Fitzgerald at the Chevy Chase Club Saturday night.

Dr. Pratt, who is a fellow of the American Medical Association and of the College of Surgeons, as well as the author of many medical textbooks, is chief of gynecology and obstetrics at the Ford Hospital in Detroit. He is a member of Sigma Xi and Alpha Omega Alpha, honorary medical fraternities.

Women Voters Hear Address On Foreign Policy of Pioneers

Speaking on "The Foreign Policy of the Founding Fathers" at a departmental meeting of the District League of Women Voters, Mrs. Charles Dearing yesterday called attention to the pitfalls which may lie in attempts to draw guidance for the present crisis from pioneer leaders of the Nation.

"The inaccuracies resulting from partial quotation are perhaps best illustrated by the cavalier treatment accorded Washington's Farewell Address," Mrs. Dearing told the league's foreign policy department, meeting at the home of Mrs. M. O. Lorenz, 3510 Porter Street Northwest.

"It was only against permanent alliances that Washington warned; he gave his indorsement to 'temporary alliances for extraordinary emergencies'," she poined out, explaining that "the qualifying phrases in this address are frequently overlooked."

Background Forces Should Be Studied

Mrs. Dearing stressed the fact that the Farewell Address was delivered against the specific background of intrigues by which the French minister of foreign affairs, Charles Delacroix, had sought to influence the 1796 Presidential election in the United States toward an administration more favorable to France against England.

"Ordinary prudence suggests that, if we are to be guided by the wisdom of the founding fathers, we inquire closely into the peculiar forces contributing to the formulation of their political wisdom," she said.

In evaluating the arguments of those "who insist on documenting their current statesmanship by appeals to ideas of men who can no longer speak for themselves," she said two questions should be asked:

"Are the major factors—political, economic and social—that conditioned the foreign policy of the founding fathers comparable to those which now characterize our position in the family of nations? From the standpoint of strict interpretation, are the founding fathers accurately quoted?"

Change of National Interests Is Cited

She pointed out that the United States' interest centered primarily on domestic problems until it became a creditor Nation. "It was then that our economic vistas broadened or were redirected into search for outlets not only for our surplus goods, but for our accumulations of capital which could not longer find profitable outlets at home.

"By this route we have reached a position in the field of international politics somewhat comparable to that of the European nations when they were seeking outlets on our continent for their goods and capital," she added.

Mrs. Dearing holds a doctor of philosophy degree in American history from the University of Wisconsin.

The Trapp Family Singers, who are giving two concerts in Washington this week, took time out from their music yesterday to be honor guests at a tea at the Arts Club. Trapp Family Appreciates Most the 'Free Air' of America

Baroness Maria von Trapp, surrounded by her large family of exiles dressed in colorful Austrian costumes, sat in a downtown hotel yesterday and talked about their life in America.

What would they miss most in this country should they have to return to their conquered homeland? The drug stores, the five-and-tens, the cafeterias, "but most of all, the free air of America, and the tremendous music appreciation we have found everywhere in this country."

The Trapp family, all of whom sing and play instruments, gave a chamber music concert in Meridian Hill Park Tuesday night and will give another at the same place tomorrow night.

"It is a most satisfying business to sing for America," said the baroness, "for you can feel the audience's appreciation surging like a wave up and down."

Their castle and lands have been confiscated by the Nazis in Salzburg, Austria, and they have been in this country since 1939 on tour. They were here once before, in 1938, and returned to their homeland for a short while. "But when we returned we were questioned by the Gestapo because of our outspokenness against Nazism," declared Baroness von Trapp, "and our friends were afraid to talk to us. Then we came back to America."

They have a home now in Vermont and have applied for citizenship. The scenery there is something like Salzburg, said the baroness, "only softer."

The children are all very versatile. The eldest, Rupert, is a doctor. Another of the sons, Werner, is a goldsmith.

Agathe, one of the daughters, does woodcuts, and another daughter, Martina, has painted a madonna which now hangs in the cathedral at Peoria, Ill. They all knit Austrian sweaters and stockings, which they dub the "Trapp family handicrafts."

Needleworkers Make Time Fuses for U. S.

"Women who formerly had been needle workers are now making time fuses for shells and torpedoes in the Frankfort Arsenal in Philadelphia," Mrs. Ellen S. Woodward, member of the Social Security Board, pointed out in an address yesterday.

"Male watch makers had been tried, without success. But the needle workers secured by the State Employment Service succeeded where the watch makers failed," she said, emphasizing that "many women have the kinds of abilities that are important in defense work."

As to silk industry workers, affected by the cessation of factory operations, Mrs. Woodward said that State employment offices "are doing everything possible" to transfer them to other jobs and "in some cases referring them to training courses where they can fit themselves for defense jobs."

Mrs. Woodward spoke on the Business and Professional Women's Club's program yesterday afternoon over WINX on "The Vocational Aspects of the Social Security Program."

Mrs. Woodward discussed the board's "new personnel policy," by which nearly 100 young college men and women were hired for work during their vacations this summer. The Civil Service Commission, which worked out the plan, gave a special examination to college juniors last spring and those who passed were "eligible for appointment to do seasonal work—during their vacations—with the Social Security Board or other Federal agencies," she explained.

Group to Study Aid to Cripples

Dr. Ella Oppenheimer, director of maternal and infant welfare in the District Health Department, has been named chairman of a committee of the District Society for Crippled Children to study ways in which a $1,300 fund of the society can be spent most advantageously.

The fund was cleared from the sale of Easter seals, from which returns are still filtering in.

Mrs. C. D. Dowe, a member of the board of directors, in discussing the society's activities yesterday, said that the possibility of establishing an office with a paid secretary was being considered.

The society, which was reorganized within recent months, is headed by M. J. Uline, with Algernon P. Reeve, first vice president; Albert W. Howard, second vice president; William H. Sardo, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Beulah J. Drake, recording secretary; James C. Dulin, treasurer and chairman of the budget committee.

The 14-member board of directors includes Senator Arthur Capper, of Kansas; Mrs. William E. Borah, widow of Senator Borah; Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, president of the Board of Education. The society is a branch of the National Society for Crippled Children.

Legion Women To Hear Past National Chief

Mrs. William H. Corwith, of Rockville Center, Long Island, past national president of the American Legion Auxiliary, will be honor guest at the convention of the District auxiliary, opening tomorrow at the Department of Commerce auditorium.

Mrs. Corwith, who is now affiliated with the National Broadcasting Co., is vice chairman of the emergency training committee of the Nassau County women in Defense.

She is connected with the office of N. B. C.'s public service counselor and is engaged in furthering a closer relationship between the listening public and the radio networks, it was explained by Mrs. Rae R. Zaontz, radio chairman of the Disrtict department of the American Legion Auxiliary.

Mrs. Corwith served as national president of the auxiliary in 1940 after having been chairman of its radio committtee for four previous years, during which time she planned and produced a number of Nation-wide broadcasts. She served on the awards committte of the Women's National Radio Committee in 1938 and 1939.

Forecast for the District of Columbia—Fair with some cloudiness and continued moderate temperature Thursday and Friday, gentle northeast and east winds Thursday becoming southeasterly Friday.

For Maryland and Virginia—Fair with some cloudiness and continued moderate temperature Thursday and Friday.

Conditions

Fair weather prevails over the lake region, the Ohio Valley and the Middle Atlantic States under the influence of an extensive high-pressure system which is moving east-southeastward into the North Atlantic States. The cool dry air mass associated with this system brought lower temperatures to the Middle and North Atlantic States Wednesday afternoon with maxima between 85 and 90 degrees. Warm humid air continues to dominate the weather over the Southern States causing generally cloudy weather with numerous showers and thunderstorms. Warm moist air has now moved northward from Arizona and New Mexico into the plateau region and Middle Rocky Mountain States attended by showers and thunderstorms. Hot weather continues over the Central Plains States and the upper Mississippi and Missouri Valleys, but cooler air attended by considerable cloudiness and some showers is spreading southeastward into the Dakotas ending the heat wave in that section. A maximum temperature of 109 degrees was reported again Wednesday afternoon at Pierre, S. Dak.

HAY FEVER and ASTHMA

Science has not yet found a preparation which will give relief to all hay fever and asthma sufferers. This is understandable when one realizes that both of these conditions can be caused by many things, such as pollens from flowers, weeds, perfumes, animal hairs, improper diet, etc. However, science has discovered that many cases of hay fever and asthma get amazing relief from the administration of a certain vital food element. Allo-tan, a rich source of this important element, gives relief to thousands of sufferers year in and year out. Allo-tan is put up in inexpensive, easy-to-take tablets.

Pope Brought Peru, Ecuador Truce, Paper Says

Copyright by New York Times

Rome, Aug. 6.—A prominently displayed item from Buenos Aires in today's Osservatore Romano, Vatican newspaper, reveals for the first time that Pope Pius XII intervened personally to bring about the armistice between Peru and Ecuador and that this intervention took place not only in the two countries involved but in the United States, Argentina and Brazil.

According to the Osservatore Romano, the Pope communicated "directly with the Presidents of Peru and Ecuador, as well as with the governments of Argentina, Brazil and the United States, in favor of a friendly settlement of the conflict."

It adds that the news of the armistice "was certainly learned with the most profound satisfaction by the Holy See, which has always solicited for the preservation of peace among the nations."

This notice could not have been published without the consent of the Pope himself, hence it is to be considered official.

Make no mistake about it. Hitler has already flung his ultimatum in our teeth.

You don't believe it? Well, read this excerpt from Bill Shirer's "Berlin Diary."* He wrote these fateful words last December in Berlin. And while you read them, remember . . . this corn-fed Iowa boy is no wild man, no scheming politician. He's one of our most distinguished foreign correspondents, a veteran newsman who has covered the European beat for the past fifteen years. Since 1934 he's been on the death watch of democracy in the German Capital.

"Does Hitler contemplate war with the United States? I have argued this question many times with many Germans here and not a few Americans and have pondered it long and carefully. I am firmly convinced that he does, that if he wins in Europe and Africa he will in the end launch it unless we are prepared to give up our way of life and adapt ourselves to a subservient place in his totalitarian scheme of things."

Hitler broadcasts over CBS from Berlin

Those words mean exactly what Mr. Roosevelt has told Congress. They mean that America is in grave danger. They mean that if we permit our army to be broken up now and two-thirds of our soldiers sent home, we are inviting disaster.

The President has put the issue squarely to Congress and the Nation. We say . . . back him up, keep the army at full strength, Congress must declare a state of emergency.

HOLC Board Split Over Shift to N.Y.

Home Owners Loan Corporation is moving to New York City within a few weeks, but that it will be there the same competent organization it has been here for the past several years is to be doubted. The pending transfer has made that much difference. Word has reached members of Congress that the HOLC board is hopelessly split over the New York shift. Alone favoring the transfer is Chairman John H. Fahey. Opposing it are said to be the other four board members—T. D. Webb, F. W. Hancock, jr., Fred W. Catlett and W. H. Husband.

A bitter fight is reported to have been staged at a board meeting several weeks ago. Fahey, who had announced publicly on July 2 that the agency would move, only a few hours after he had informed his fellow board members, called on the board to sign a lease for the New York headquarters that he had personally inspected. The board revolted against the chairman, it's reported, and refused to sign until it had been ordered to get out of the city by President Roosevelt and Jesse Jones, Federal Loan administrator.

His hands tied, Fahey said he would get the orders, in writing. The order did arrive from the President, but not for several weeks. Meantime, curiosity was aroused over the whole deal. Jones' letter to the President merely said that he (the President) would have to "direct the move." The President didn't direct that HOLC be moved out in a body and he pointed out that some offices should be retained here.

Though they have now committed themselves for the New York lease, the four board members are understood to be fighting to keep the board itself and about 200 employes here. Again Fahey is alone in his stand. The chairman is insisting that the board members go to New York along with the great majority of the employes. And again the President may be called on to settle the issue. An HOLC spokesman refused comment on this entire story. Members of Congress have knowledge of the HOLC dissension and it wouldn't be a surprise if the Lanham Committee looked into the matter.

Transfer Studied

The committee yesterday examined the possibility of Agriculture Department decentralization. It heard Milton Eisenhower, Land Use coordinator, testify that 2,100 of the department's 12,500 employes here could be transferred out of Washington without hurting efficiency. As reported here yesterday, Eisenhower said that 638 employes could be transferred out immediately and that 1,400 others could be sent to Beltsville, Md., if Congress would appropriate another two million dollars for new buildings.

Eisenhower revealed that 130 Forest Service regional employes will be sent to Philadelphia, but not to Upper Darby as originally planned. Upper Darby, it seems, also have a space problem. The Credit Union Division of the Farm Credit Administration also will be moved, Eisenhower said. It has more than 100 employes. The witness argued against complete removal of any single agency and the committee appeared to agree that the principle of partial transfer of a number of agencies was sound.

Agriculture Undersecretary Appleby and Triple-A Administrator R. M. Evans will visit Great Britain soon to study agricultural conditions . . . Census employes will meet this afternoon in the cafeteria to discuss the campaign for civil service status . . . Milton Eisenhower was warmly complimented for his testimony yesterday before the Lanham Committee . . . Mark O'Dea, a New York advertising man, has been appointed press agent for the Maritime Commission . . . Representative Martin Kennedy, of New York, suggests that members of the House give up half of their office space and make 500 rooms available for defense agencies.

War Building Site Is Hit In Senate

Arlington Plan Would Leave D. C. A 'Ghost Town,' Reynolds Declares

Criticism of plans to locate a 35 million dollar War Department building in Arlington County, Va., flared into the open on the Senate side of the Capitol yesterday with Senator Robert R. Reynolds (Democrat), of North Carolina, chairman of the powerful Military Affairs Committee, leading the attack.

Reynolds not only declared his opposition to the project, but warned that if the building goes up, "this city may be a ghost town after the emergency."

Reynolds, whose opinions on matters affecting the War Department carry great weight, pointed out that location of the building across the river eventually would force the migration of thousands of Capital residents to Virginia and that sharp contraction of Federal agencies could be expected to follow the passing of the defense emergency.

The proposed building, said Reynolds, "might go in some such place as the Soldiers' Home."

Senator Pat McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada, a member of the Appropriations Committee, which has yet to approve expenditure of money for the building, backed Reynolds' opposition, but on different grounds.

Prefers to Move Residents Out

McCarran, who also is chairman of the District Committee, declared he was "absolutely opposed to moving Federal departments out of Washington."

Rather than do that, he said, he would prefer to see District residents move out of the city. He reasoned that the District was specifically set aside as the seat of the Federal Government, where Congress should have absolute control without interference from local authorities. He pointed out that the War Department, located in Virginia, would be beyond the reach of Congress.

Senator Millard Tydings (Democrat), of Maryland, also a member of the Appropriations Committee, said he believed Congress would "give consideration" to revision of plans for the building.

Controversy over the building is now in the hands of a subcommittee headed by Senator Alva B. Adams (Democrat), of Colorado. The subcommittee is considering the eight billion dollar defense bill, of which the building appropriations is a part. This item in the bill, Adams said, would not be reached before Friday.

Meanwhile, District Commissioner John Russell Young, indorsed proposals to locate the building on the grounds of the Soldiers' Home.

Senseman Wins Prize At Glad Show

Cornelius E. Senseman, of 8908 First Avenue, Silver Spring, Md., won the blue ribbon for the best bloom in the twenty-first annual gladiolus show of the Takoma Horticultural Club which opened last night at the Takoma branch of the Public Library, Fifth and Cedar Streets Northwest.

Employed at the Department of Agriculture, Senseman has raised gladioli for nearly five years in his garden. He has taken many ribbons at other flower shows. The prize-winning flower was a light coral "Frank J. McCoy" with 8 florets and 12 buds. It was entered in the specimen class. The winner held seven blue ribbons, two reds and a white in all.

A salmon-colored Picardy with nine florets measuring about 5 inches in diameter and bearing six buds was judged the second best flower. It was entered by Francis Scofield, of Lanham, Md., who captured four blue ribbons, two reds and one white.

The third best bloom was an apricot seedling not previously exhibited, with J. Earl Bassett, 6205 Twenty-ninth Street Northwest the winner.

Besides 22 classes of gladioli there were 13 groups of midsummer flowers, including miniatures. The gladioli blooms, judges declared, were the best the club has exhibited in many years. Dr. Howard Watkins, of Somerset, Md., and Mrs. V. L. McKinstry, of Hyattsville, were judges.

Five rosebuds of deep red arranged in a small green glass brought a blue ribbon to Mrs. C. E. Ross, of Falls Church, Va., in the miniatures measuring between 7 and 3 inches.

Miss Isabel Smith, 612 Ogelthorpe Street Northwest, won first place in the class under 3 inches with a flat piece of pottery containing sweet alyssum, argeratum and tiny marigolds.

The show will be open to the public today from 9 a. m. until 9 p. m. George U. Graff was chairman and Clarence G. Carr vice chairman.

Slaying Suspect Held for Jury

Robert P. Porter, 47, colored, 415 B Street Southeast, was ordered held for action of the grand jury yesterday after an inquest into the fatal shooting Tuesday of his brother, John Francis Porter, 49, of the same address. The older brother died Tuesday night as the result of injuries in an altercation.

A coroner's jury yesterday also exonerated Kenneth Moore, 34, 4418 Georgia Avenue Northwest, in the death of Homer Jenkins, 50-year-old World War veteran, 4408 Georgia Avenue Northwest, who died Monday as a result of injuries suffered July 28.

Firemen Save 'Nine Lives'

1 "KITTY'S GONE - She's down that hole in the wall and can't get out. Call the police; get the rescue squad!" The cry was sounded at 10 last night from 1228 Eleventh Street Northwest. The neighbors all joined in

2, TO THE RESCUE came the firemen, headed by Sergt. G. H. Reed. With hammer and chisel they cracked through the wall. Forty minutes they worked. Then . . .

3, . . . "THERE SHE IS," the neighbors sighed. Sergt. Reed pulled the little grey kitten from the hole. She was frightened, thought surely her nine lives were gone

4. "HOORAY," was the shout and the crowd cheered the rescue squad. Sergt. Reed handed kitty over to Sherley Adams, of 1230 Eleventh Street. Now, kitty was glad and she purred because curiosity hadn't killed this cat

Postlude By Ray C. B. Brown

Program of American Music Presented by Catholic U.

Music Department of the Catholic University presents a concert of American compositions on Wednesday night in McMahon Hall. Department artists: Joseph J. McGrath, Minna Niemann, Max Kobre, Virginia Roberts, Hendrik Essers and Hugh O'Neill. Assisting artists: Olive Whitney McGrath, Margretta Eckloff, Emerson Meyers and George Wargo. Program of music by Joseph J. McGrath, Samuel Barber, Edward MacDowell, Mary Howe and Emerson Meyers.

Following the pleasant precedent established a year ago during the summer school session, the music department of the Catholic University presented last evening a concert devoted to native compositions. It was, in fact, the second concert of the session, one having been given last week without notification to the reviewers through an oversight on the part of the busy faculty. Half a loaf, however, is better than none, and the second program was enjoyed without wasting regrets over the one that was missed.

BROWN

If Joseph J. McGrath's name appeared on the program more often than that of any other composer, the fact is not to be attributed to his forwardness but to some unavoidable confusion in the arrangement of the two concerts. If his modesty suffered, the auditors did not, for his talent has a variety that holds and rewards one's interest. His "Sonata Romantica" for violin and piano justifies the title perfectly by its reflection of the whole romantic movement from Schubert to Franck.

Four of his songs, voiced with taste and fine phrasing by Olive Whitney McGrath, disclosed the range of his lyric sensitiveness. "How Sweet the Moonlight Sleeps" is a deft setting of Shakespeare's lines without a trace of Elizabethan imitation; "Soontree," a captivating whimsy; "Our Lord and Our Lady," moving in its reverent simplicity, and "Threnos," a modern embodiment of the Greek attitude toward death.

Miss Wiemann also contributed MacDowell's "Sea Piece: A. D. 1620," which has unmistakable reference to the Pilgrims of Plymouth and to Felicia Heman's familiar words, "The breaking waves dashed high on a stern and rock-bound coast," and a "Berceuse" by Mary Howe, who can write with or without dissonance and make her points equally well. This piece of hers has a swaying and soothing theme of memorable quality.

Emerson Meyers was assisted by George Wargo in an authoritative performance of his sonata in one movement for piano and viola, which had its premiere last March when the Washington Composers Club gave a concert for the associated music teachers. This admirable work grows upon one at a second hearing, and it deserves a wide circulation.

Margretta Eckloff was the soprano soloist in a reading of Samuel Barber's setting of Matthew Arnold's "Dover Beach," for voice and string quartet. The more one hears this work the more one is impressed by its remarkable fidelity to the poet's mood of foreboding.

McCarran Seeks Fewer D. C. Boards

Will Draft Bill To Put New Fire Safety Agency Under Wage Unit

Senator Pat McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada, chairman of the District Committee, yesterday served notice that he means what he says about reduction of the number of boards now functioning within the municipal government.

At the close of hearings on legislation to establish a board to promulgate safety regulations to protect private industry workers in Washington, McCarran announced that he would draft a bill to assign these duties to the Minimum Wage Board.

No increase in the present size of the board is contemplated, he said. Enforcement of safety rules would be in charge of a director of Industrial Accident Prevention, assigned to the board. McCarran stated that the transfer of additional powers to the board would be effected by embodying provisions of an accident-prevention bill passed by the House in the present minimum wage law.

Labor, Citizens Approve.

Representatives of 20 labor organizations and the Federation of Citizens Associations appeared at the hearing in support of the House bill and agreed to the change.

Willy Arnheim, financial secretary of the Road, Highway and Heavy Construction Laborers Union, told the committee that the District last month set an all-time record for industrial accidents—3,222. Six workers were killed in July and three in June, he said. Thus far this year, he stated, 39 workers have been killed and 18,148 injured.

Arnheim called the Rock Creek sewer project especially hazardous. Loose material lies around in the sewer tunnel where water on the tunnel floor and inadequate lighting add to the dangers, he declared.

Sidney R. Katz, appearing for the Industrial Union Council, urged that the committee consider safety regulations for Government employes. He called "enormous" the number of accidents in the tabulation division of the Census Bureau.

Ward Boote, assistant chief counsel of the United States Employes Compensation Commission, called the committee's attention to the fact that the commission now is charged with administration of the District compensation law.

Criticizes Plan

Boote urged that the commission be given the added responsibility of safeguarding District workers, pointing out that safety legislation amending existing commission law is now before Congress. He criticized the accident-prevention board bill as enforceable only by Police Court action.

Many people will gamble with their dollars, but few will gamble with going to jail," countered Corporation Counsel Richmond B. Keech.

Baxter Smith, chairman of the safety committee of the federation, criticized the commission for "reaching for power."

Mrs. William Kittle, Minimum Wage Board member, said the board was ready to accept additional responsibilities.

W. T. Cameron, appearing for the Labor Department, also indorsed the bill.

Contributions For Mrs. Fones Rise to $101

The fund for Mrs. Rose Fones, 74-year-old widow, of 416 Third Street Northwest, whose life savings of $1,167 were stolen from her room last Sunday, leaving her penniless, had reached a total of $101 contributed by Post readers up until 7 o'clock last night.

Also Mrs. Fones received five letters in her mail yesterday from well wishers containing a total of $16. One of them, signed by an "Unknown Friend," said, "I'm inclosing a little money hoping it might be a help toward paying your room rent."

"I aim to pay these people back if I get my mony," Mrs. Fones told The Post yesterday. She still doesn't realize how anyone could steal money.

Garfield Park Greets 'Alumni,' Including Former May Queen

JUST KIDS AT HEART—"Suzy" Sheridan, playground director, and Dr. Sam Zola go wading at Garfield's homecoming

It was "homecoming day" at Garfield Park Playground, Second and F Streets Southeast, yesterday and alumni who played baseball and waded and swung on the trapezes years ago were back to do it again—or at least to reminisce.

Miss Evelyn Sheridan, director, who is known affectionately as Miss "Suzy" for no particular reason, explained the idea of the homecoming days, the first of which was six years ago.

"Somebody was always dropping in and saying 'How's so-and-so?' So I decided to arrange a day when they could all come back and see each other."

They came from all parts of the District and, in fact, distant parts of the country. One of the first to show up was Mrs. T. K. Sharp, who had journeyed all the way from Ohio, for the event.

On her heels was Private William Barnes, formerly of 414 New Jersey Avenue Southeast and now of Fort Bliss, Tex. He arranged a furlough to come back for the occasion.

Mrs. Gladys Belt, 3205 Fifth Street Northwest, walked up to register in the visitor's book, with her daughter, Patsy, 6.

"Why there's the playground's first May Queen!" remarked Miss Sheridan. Mrs. Belt, who is the mother of four children, recalled the thrill of the day 18 years ago when she was the star of the playground's May festival.

Mrs. G. E. Tabler, 76, of 160 F Street Southeast, walked in with her grandson, Anthony Walker, 25, same address, who used to play at Garfield. Now he is studying for the priesthood. Mrs. Tabler was attracted back for homecoming day because nearly all her children, nieces and nephews had played there at one time or another.

There were scores of others including ministers and priests such as the Rev. Elmer Kimmell, now of Arbutus, Md., and Father George Gingras, of this city, and doctors like Dr. Francis Allman, Providence Hospital physician.

When greetings had been exchanged a baseball game started between the alumni and the contemporary playground contingent. Also there was horseshoe pitching, walks around the playground and stories of long ago.

'Oldest' Group Honors New Members of 80

The Association of Oldest Inhabitants of the District met in the old Union Engine House at Nineteenth and H Streets Northwest last night to honor members who had reached the age of 80 since June 4.

Histories of the honored members were read by Charles H. Bates, a vice president of the organization. District Commissioner Charles W. Kutz also gave a short talk.

Motorcycle Officer In Collision With Car; 7 Others Injured In Capital Accidents

D. C. Traffic Deaths This Year. 49
Same Date Last Year 40
Total Last Year 79

Death of a motorcycle policeman and a pedestrian yesterday marked the District's forty-eighth and forty-ninth traffic fatalities of the year, while another motorcycle policeman and six persons were injured in other Washington accidents.

Park Policeman Thomas P. Fogarty, 42, injured early Friday when his motorcycle collided with an automobile in Rock Creek Park, died at 9:20 p. m. in Walter Reed Hospital.

Fogarty, who lived at 325 Franklin Street Northwest, was rounding a curve on Beach Drive near Military Road when the collision occurred. Police listed Lewis Felker, 39, of 338 Farragut Street Northwest, as driver of the car.

Frank F. Hill, Negro, of 2322 Florida Avenue Northwest, was fatally injured by a streetcar at Fourteenth and I Streets Northwest. He died in Emergency Hospital at 6:25 p. m., a short time after the accident. Walter B. Bowman, of 2328 Minnesota Avenue Southeast, operator of the streetcar, said Hill "walked right into" the vehicle.

Nelson Franz Skogland, 33, motorcycle policeman with Metropolitan Police force for five years, suffered a possible fracture of the hip when he made a sudden stop to avoid crashing into the rear of a speeding motorist he was chasing up Calvert Street past the Shoreham Hotel. He went over the handlebars. He was taken to Emergency Hospital by a scout car. He lives at 3113 Lyndale Place Southeast. The speeder escaped.

They are: Betty Shiro, 25, of 324 Eighteenth Street Northeast; Marjorie Hackney, 23, of 1418 Twelfth Street Northwest; Harry Schwitzer, 30, of 1760 B Street Northeast, and the driver of the car, Edward Duraud, of 1714 C Street Northeast.

John McDonald Maines, 18, of Broad Creek, Md., suffered a possible fracture of the hip when his automobile left the roadway at Hawley Place and Nichols Avenue.

Struck by an automobile near his home at 101 B Street Southeast, Abner Jones, 45, was taken to Emergency Hospital with leg and head injuries.

With Shirley Povich

Three rollicking come-backs are being staged by individuals who were flops in the majors last year, or had you noticed? But for every guy who is bouncing back from a poor year in 1940, there are five who are having rough seasons in the big leagues. The rosters o fthe two leagues are studded with floperoos.

POVICH

We were just taking a sort of inventory and on the sunny side of the reckoning are the names of Jeff Heath, of the Indians; Roy Cullenbine, of the Browns, and Lefty Gomez, of the Yanks. They have come crashing back with superlative performances after sorry seasons in '40.

Heath was one of the players who said he couldn't play ball for Oscar Vitt last year and proved it by hitting a miserable .219, but apparently he can play ball for Roger Peckinpaugh. He's among the first five hitters in the league with a lofty average in the .350s and is outhitting himself as of 1940, by more than 130 points. Nice going.

Gomez Was Ready for Discard

Cullenbine was in deep disrepute at this time last season. The Dodgers, who gave him a cash bonus of $25,000 after Judge Landis declared him a free agent in the winter of 1939-40, were moaning at their investment. Cullenbine could scarcely buy a hit and the Dodgers sold him to the Browns with great alacrity for a very nominal sum. The Browns, too, considered they were stung on the deal when Cullenbine finished up with a mere .230 average last season. Look at him now. He's a .350 hitter, with extra base power.

The third notable come-back is being provided by Lefty Gomez, and it couldn't happen to a nicer fellow. During the winter, Gomez was considered washed up. When the Yankees threatened to sell him at the waiver price, he had to talk his way back onto the club. They wouldn't even give him a contract for any stipulated salary. They were awaiting his 1941 performances. Well, Gomez, who won only three games throughout last season, and lost as many, is now one of the top pitchers in the league with his ten victories and three defeats.

The other day as Gomez ascended the steps of the Washington dugout on his way to the field, Bucky Harris playfully banged him on the back. "Cut that out," said Gomez. "You might wake me out of this dream. I still can't believe I've won ten games already. Leave me with my reveries."

Appling, Radcliff, Wright Flop

But as we were saying, for every startling come-back, five guys who had good seasons last year are flopping. Consider the case, for example, of Luke Appling, of the White Sox. He was the second leading hitter in the league last year with a .348 average. He isn't hitting .300 this season—.291 to be exact. And despite the fact that he has been the White Sox clean-up man for most of the season, he has knocked only 26 runs across the plate.

Three American League outfielders who were some shucks last season are having a horrible year. Rip Radcliff, who hit .342 for the Browns and was the league's fourth leading batter in '40, is batting an anemic .281 at this writing. Taft Wright, nicely up there with .337 last year, isn't hitting .300. Walter Judnich, the Browns' candidate for the rookie-of-the-year honors in 1940 when he hit .303, can't get up a gallop. He's hitting .2.54.

Buck Newsom, is of course, the pitching flop of the year. He has already lost eight more games than he did throughout 1940 when he had a 21-5 record, and he has won 13 fewer. Newsom made grand claims that he is the league's highest paid player this season and he may be, but by the end of the year he can make another claim: He was the league's most over-paid player.

Two fellows who were among the best southpaws in the league last season are having a sorry time of it trying to win ball games this year. Ken Chase, who rolled up 15 wins for the Nats, can lay claim to only four this season, and he has lost 13. Al Milnar, No. 2 man to Bob Feller on the Cleveland staff with his record of 18-10 last season, is far behind that pace. He has dropped 13 games already and won only eight.

Remember Debs Garms?

And Schoolboy Rowe doesn't like it a bit, either. Rowe lost only three games in 1940 and turned in 16 wins, but look at his record as of today. Four wins and 5 lickings. Not very good.

The American League has no monopoly on the floperoos, however. Look at Debs Garms, the man who hit .355 for the Pirates last year to lead the league in hitting. At last reports, he (1) wasn't hitting .310 and (2) wasn't in the line-up.

Paul Derringer, of the Reds, who tossed 20 wins into the Cincinnati club's successful pennant bid in 1940, is no star this year. He has already lost 12 games, as many as he dropped during the last season, and he can show only eight wins. But Derringer's teammate Bill Werber, is the prize bust of the year perhaps. Werber was a valuable .277 hitter with the National League champions last year, but this far he has been able to muster only an anemic .207 figure and perhaps you noticed he isn't in the line-up any more.

On the Line

NO ARGUMENT HERE

New York, Aug. 6.—All speculation over the identity of the highest salaried ball player should end next winter. Joe DiMaggio is going to ask for $80,000 for 1942. And even if he is belted down 10 or 20 thousand dollars less than that sum, he'll still be getting about twice as much as his nearest rival. Probably more than twice, because it looks as if Bobby Feller, who would have made $40,000 next year, will be making $21 a month on another kind of squad, when the 1942 season opens.

CONSIDINE

Babe Ruth reached his high-water mark of $80,000 in 1930 and held it there for two years before slipping back to $75,000. He was raised to his peak from $70,000, which sum he earned in 1927, 1928 and 1929. Looking at Babe's 1929 record, which more or less sponsored the pay raise to $80,000 in 1930, we find that Babe played in 135 games, went to bat 499 times, scored 121 runs, made 172 hits, smacked 46 home runs and batted .345.

Up until today's assignment in Boston, DiMaggio was hitting .372, had played in 105 games, had gone to bat 419 times, scored 100 runs, made 156 hits, belted 25 home runs and driven in 94 runs. Joe has about 50 games left to play, counting ties. There is little doubt that he will surpass Babe's 1929 mark in every department except home runs. Joe is either leading or contending in every department of the sizzling American batting race.

Joe's Arguments Will Be Strong

What Joe asks for and what he gets out of Ed Barrow usually are two different things. But he'll have one vastly important thing on his side next time he argues his case. For the first time he will have absolute proof that he draws customers personally. That was Ruth's great forte, of course, and the reason Babe made more money out of baseball than any other man ever did or probably ever will. Babe played on more colorful Yank teams than the present one, but nevertheless he remained the top lure. As attractive as were the old Yanks, there would be cancellations galore when word spread that Babe was going to be missing from the line-up—as he was on 19 occasions in 1929.

The Yanks couldn't win a pennant through the three-year period of Babe's highest salaries. Nor, curiously enough, was Babe named most valuable player in any of those years. In fact, he got that title only once, and that was in 1922.

DiMag's batting streaks and the way they have sparked the Yankees this season have not only taken the club to the top of the league race and insured a rich World Series but will attract more than a million and a quarter customers to the Yankee Stadium for regular league games this season. On the road the team will draw perhaps another million fans and share secondarily in the profits derived from same. The 1941 club, with a comparatively modest payroll, will make more money than the 1929 club.

He's the Clincher

The magic name DiMaggio has done most of this, granting the fact that he couldn't do it alone and duly allowing for the splendid comebacks of Keller, Ruffing, Gomez, Dickey and Rolfe, and the fine seasons being had by Rizzuto, Gordon and Henrich. But DiMag has been the clincher. The newspapers, radio and newsreels sing his praises because he is the one Yank the baseball public demands to read about, hear about and see. In St. Louis last month the management of the Browns bought advertising spreads in local papers to urge hibernating St. Louis fans to come out to the park to see if Joe could prolong his batting streak. P. S.—They came.

All this will be on Joe's side when he goes after more money than any ball player has dreamed of earning since the days of the immortal Babe—more money, of course, than F. D. R. makes. Joe has many profoundly good arguments on his side, including proof that he attracted at least $80,000—the sum he wants—in extra admissions during the span of a few days while he was making good his assault on the old batting marks of George Sisler and Willie Keeler.

There will be a few scattered grumbles, we dare say. We doubt if the Yankee management will take kindly to Joe's salary ambitions, in view of the fact that the executors of the estate are sort of looking to the Yanks to help with the huge tax demands on the late Jake Ruppert's fortune.

Dutch Leonard Beats A's Before 16,000 Fans

Knuckle Ball Hurler Wins Sixth in Row

Jimmy Bloodworth, Travis Star Afield; Victory Is Nats' Second Against A's

By Shirley Povich
Post Staff Writer

Big Dutch Leonard and his little knuckle ball, a pretty good pair, stood up nicely at Griffith Stadium last night and the Nats raked in a 5-1 victory over the Athletics under the lights. Sixteen thousand fans happily kibitzed the proceedings.

Leonard was winning his sixth straight start and calling a halt to the season-long torment of the Nats by the Athletics, who had won nine out of ten previous games between the clubs this season. He held the A's to eight hits and walked nobody.

But the Nats generally were behaving splendidly. Somehow they stirred up some power and blackjacked Bill Beckman out of the ball game with three lengthy three-baggers and a potent double mixed among their nine hits.

Three Double Plays

Leonard, if he is no ingrate, will accept his victory with a bow in the direction of his pals around second base—Cecil Travis and Jimmy Bloodworth. They were helping him over the hump all evening with fancy plays and in each of the last three innings they choked off the A's threats to get back in the ball game with fancy double plays.

Verily, the Nats performed like world champions against the club that, all season, had made them look like bums. Travis was grabbing tricky grounders all evening, or leaping for fancy one-handed catches, and Bloodworth was a potent middle man in all of the three double plays. He contributed one back-handed grab of a ball off Suder's bat in the eighth inning that was on the incredible side.

The power boys, however, were George Archie, Buddy Lewis and Jake Early, who collected the Nats' three important three-baggers off Beckman. Three runs spawned from those blows.

Dean in Relief

It was just as well that the Nats were cuffing Beckman around, because when Relief Pitcher Chubby Dean appeared in the proceedings after the fifth inning, the Nats got no more runs. However, Leonard was very much in command with his 5-1 lead at that ponit. His control was perfect and only two of the A's hits were better than singles.

Leonard struck out the first man to face him and then struck out another in the first inning, but he

Son of Sandy Flash Takes Final 2 Heats

By Orlo Robertson
Associated Press Staff Writer

Goshen, N. Y., Aug. 6.—Two comparative newcomers to big time racing showed some 25,000 villagers and city folk how to achieve success in the shortest possible time today as Bill Gallon lived up to expectations and won the sixteenth Hambletonian at Good Time Park.

The brown son of Sandy Flash, coming back to take the final two heats after finishing far back in the first mile, gave trotting's richest prize at the first asking to R. H. Johnston, Charlotte, N. C., cotton textile manufacturer, and his little, weather-beaten driver, Lee Smith, from Dadeville, Ala.

Johnston took up the sport only three years ago and not until the Southern sportsman purchased Bill out of the Hanover, Pa., Shoe Farms 1939 yearling sales did Smith come into the big time with marked success. Today's victory, worth $20,365.95, boosted Bill Gallon's earnings for two years to nearly $35,000—a pretty fair investment on his original sale price of $1,800.

Is Made Favorite

But Bill Gallon, christened Ashley Hanover by Lawrence Sheppard, of the Hanover Farms, did not achieve success without a struggle. Backed by a great 2-year-old record, the Southerner was made odds-on choice to take the first heat by the crowd that packed every niche and corner of the track on the outskirts of this little town.

His Excellency, many times runner-up but never a winner, gave Bill Strang, Brooklyn warehouse and trucking man, hopes of realizing something on his investment of $6,100 by trotting off with the first mile in 2:07¼—the slowest time in the history of the "corntassel" derby. Bill Gallon, off to a poor start, could do no better than sixth as Patrick Sullivan's lightly regarded Merwynna, of Machias, Me., took runner-up honors after Sheppard's Lucky Hanover had been disqualified for fouling in the stretch.

The second and third heats, however, were different stories. Both times Smith got the favorite away with the leaders and he was right there, ready to move to the front when the final test came. The second mile he outugamed His Excellency in a photo finish to win in 2:05½ and in the final test he pulled

New York, Aug. 6.—A field of 636 golfers, smallest entry list since 1937, will try to capture 143 of the 150 starting places in the 1941 National Amateur Golf Championship in next week's 28 sectional quaulifying rouunds. The tournament will be played at the Omaha Field Club, August 25-30.

Six others, headed by the 1940 winner, Dick Chapman, automatically drew exemption from these 36-hole tests as former champions. Added to the list was Charley Yates, of Atlanta, former British Amateur champion, who is in the Army.

(A field of 16 at the Country Club of Maryland will play for four places, one of the most generous allotments awarded the U. S. G. A. to any section. It is believed a majority of the 16 contestants are from Washington.)

The sectional qualifying test at Denver, Colo., will be played next Monday and the other 27 on the following Thursday. As usual, the number of qualifying places allotted to each section was deter-

Tigers' 11 Runs In 3d Inning Beats Indians

By the Associated Press

Cleveland, Aug. 6.—The Tigers were at bat 17 times against three Cleveland pitchers in today's third inning, and their 11 runs comprised the biggest half-inning of the season. The final score was 11 to 2.

Every Detroit batter except Rudy York was at the plate twice, as six hits, two errors and seven passes ran up a total equaling the American League record set by the Red Sox in 1928 and equaled by the Athletics in 1933.

After Bill Sullivan had rolled out, Jim Bagby walked Frank Croucher. Al Benton, who proved to be the winning pitcher, sacrificed, but Catcher Rollie Hemsley made two errors by dropping the ball after tagging him and then throwing wild to first. Radcliff was passed, filling the bases, and Gehringer's single drove in two. Soup Campbell lost a liner and let in a pair on McCosky's triple, and Higgins' homer was good for two more.

Al Milner came in, walked Bruce Campbell and York, and Sullivan's single added another tally. So did Croucher's. Benton's second sacrifice was followed by two more passes, scoring a run.

Joe Krakauskas then let McCosky single two more in and walked Higgins to fill the bases before Bruce Campbell's grounder ended the carnage.

Rejuvenated Reds Halt Cardinals, 5-1

By the Associated Press

Cincinnati, Aug. 6.—The Cincinnati, Reds came to life today and/or the St. Louis Cardinals fell to pieces as the World Champions tacked together a 5-to-1 victory behind the eight-hit, seven-walk, nine-strikeout hurling of Johnny Vander Meer. It was Vandy's tenth decision of the year.

The main blow of the game was a phenomenon for the Red fans, a home run by Mike McCormick. Sophomore Mike now has hit all three of the Red homers since June 21, when Bucky Walters got one. Two men were on base today, and with Vandy striking out the Cards about every time they got a man on third, the game was safe in the third inning.

The boys from St. Louis found it extremely easy to get on the sacks. In the first inning with one down, Terry Moore tripled and Johnny Mize walked, but Country Slaughter hit into a double play.

In the third, they filled the sacks with none out on two singles and a walk, so Vandy struck out Mize, Slaughter and Jimmy Brown.

They got their run in the fifth after two were out on a walk, an infield hit and Brown's single, but Vandy fanned Martin Marion.

They threatened again in the eighth when Brown walked and Marion singled, but Gus Mancuso forced Marion and Walker Cooper pinchhit into a double play.

Just to make it complete, Vandy fanned the last Card to come up in the ninth—Coaker Triplett.

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Aug. 6.—The Pittsburgh Pirates won their fifth straight and their seventeenth in 20 games today when they romped off with an easy 13 to 3 triumph over the Chicago Cubs.

The Bucs pounded three Cub pitchers for a total of 13 hits, including Truett Sewell's first homer of the season, while the Cubs made nine hits off Sewell. It was Sewell's eleventh win of the season, including five over the Cubs.

By the Associated Press

Saratoga Springs, N. Y., Aug. 6.—They loaded Whirlaway with everything but a milk wagon today, but it made no difference at all to Warren Wright's whizz-bang.

Packing 130 pounds, the triple crown winner came back at Saratoga for his first start since Attention upset him in the Arlington Classic a week and a half ago. For three-quarters of a mile he was far back. Then he unhooked his crushing kick in the stretch and put his nose on the wire to win the 1-mile Saranac Handicap from War Relic, Man o' War's speedy son who captured the Massachusetts Handicap in his most recent outing.

The Kentucky cannonball did it, too, while spotting War Relic 13 pounds and the others in the five-horse field all the way up to 22 in the weights. Not only that, but he had a strange boy in his saddle and he caught the pacemakers in the stretch despite showing once more his wacky habit of bearing out all the way down the straight road home. Piloting him was Alfred Robertson, the steady Scot, who was asked to take over the job because Eddie Arcaro is grounded under suspension and Wendell Eads, Wright's contract rider, turned up with a leg injury he suffered in a fall while exercising a horse yesterday.

It didn't make much difference that Vic Emanuel's Omission wound up a surprisingly good third, only half a length back of the "big horses," while Hal Price Headley's Alaking and Mrs. Payne Whitney's The Rhymer trailed the others home. This was strictly Whirly against Man o' War's boy.

Ladies Day Today; Hudson to Hurl

Today will be a special Ladies Day at Griffith Stadium as Sid Hudson and Lester McCrabb oppose on the mound in the final of the Nats brief series with the Athletics.

The team will be in Boston tomorrow, the usual Ladies Day, for the first of a four-game series with the Red Sox in three days.

A victory would bring the Nats out of the cellar, for a few hours, at least, as the Browns and White Sox have a night game scheduled.

Peterson Named To Boston U. Post

Kirby Higbe Hurls 4-Hit Ball to Win

Dodgers Score Two Runs in 9th Inning; Now Lead Cardinals By Three Points

By the Associated Press

New York, Aug. 6.—The rampaging Brooklyn Dodgers put on a two-run rally in the ninth inning tonight to beat down the New York Giants, 3 to 1, before 52,791. Kirby Higbe pitched four-hit ball and the victory, the Dodgers' sixth straight, shoved them into first place in the National League by three percentage points over the St. Louis Cardinals.

Entering the final frame each club had scored a run apiece. Dolph Camilli's twentieth homer of the second in the second stanza, a long soaring drive which dropped into the upper right-field stand, gave Kirby Higbe a slight margin until the seventh inning. But Babe Young tied the score with a line blast into right-field seats.

Carl Hubbell, who had pitched magnificently over the first eight innings, faltered in the ninth as the Dodgers poured over the winning runs.

Joe Medwick doubled sharply into left field to open the inning. After Camilli's sacrifice moved Medwick to third base, Dixie Walker unloaded a tremendous triple to the center-field fence scoring Medwick and then romped home when Jimmy Wasdell punched a single over the infield.

Kirby Higbe, in notching his fifteenth success of the season, highest total recorded by a National League pitcher, allowed four hits and permitted only one man to reach second after Young's homer.

Leonard Wins Over Macks For Nats, 5-1

had the help of Roger Cramer in turning back the A's scoreless in the second. Dick Siebert opened with a single to center, but in the same motion he trifled with Doc Cramer's throwing arm and was thrown out trying to take two bases.

The Nats' first hit off Beckman was a rather nice one. It was a triple that Jake Early banged against the right field fence to lead off the third inning and it evolved as the Nats' first run. Early temporarily knocked the wind from himself with a slide into third base that was as graceful as a baby hippo's ballet, but he survived. The Nats threatened to abandon him there when Bloodworth popped up and Leonard struck out, but George Case produced a timely double to left and the Nats had a 1-0 lead.

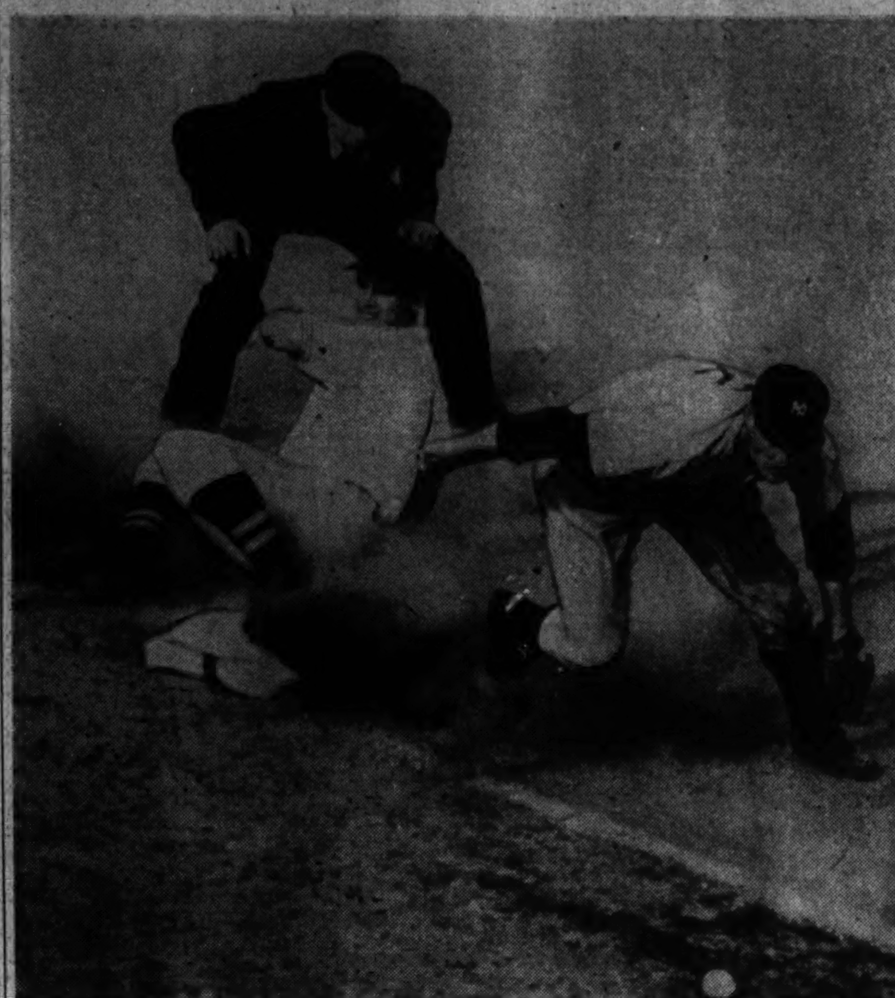
The A's tied the score, briefly, at 1-1 in the fourth inning after Moses led off with a double down the right field line. McCoy popped out on an attempted sacrifice and Moses took third on Johnson's long fly to center. Siebert got the run home with the second of his three straight hits, a ball that was deflected off Leonard's glove.

The Nats untied the score almost immediately and reclaimed the lead at 3-1 in their own half of the inning, and again it was a three-bagger that touched off matters. Lewis hit that one, a tremendous belt to centerfield that Sam Chapman dropped after a long rearward dash into the corner of the stadium. It didn't take Cecil Travis long. He beat out a vicious grounder that Siebert barely came up with and Lewis was home. A bit later, George Archie, who must be on a new kind of diet, clouted a long three-bagger into the leftfield corner and Travis was home. Archie was abandoned on third base with only one out. After Early was hit by a pitched ball, Bloodworth and Leonard obliged Beckman with easy outs.

Came the fifth and two more Washington runs. Case used his speed to beat out a hit to Brancato and Cramer promptly moved him to third with a single to right. Lewis fetched Case home with a long fly, and with two out, Mickey Vernon made a bid for the Nats' fourth triple of the night. He whaled the ball high off the fence near the scoreboard and scored Case but Vernon was out on a close play at third base when he tried to stretch the blow. Anyway, the Nats had their 5-1 lead.

Thereafter, the Nats went on the defense. Leonard, who had pitched four-hit ball for six innings, began to have his troubles. Johnson and Siebert opened the seventh with singles and the A's scented a big inning, but Chapman flied out, and Hayes hit into a double play started by Travis.

Jimmy Bloodworth started making it tough for the A's in the eighth when he moved far toward second base and came up with a back-hand snatch of Suder's grounder, completing the play with a superlative peg to Vernon for the first out of the inning. And it was just as well, because Dean got a double when Case missed an attempt for a shoestring catch in short left. Trouble was in the air for the Nats in company with Brancato's line drive toward left field that followed, but Travis went into the air, too, and came down with the ball in the webbing of his glove for a sensational catch. Dean was an easy double-play victim before he could retrace his steps to second.



Red Rolfe Has His Man but Not the Ball

Salvo's 5-Hit Pitching Beats Phillies, 6 to 0

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, Aug. 6.—The Boston Braves shut out the Phillies, 6 to 0, tonight behind the five-hit hurling of Emanuel Salvo. Si Johnson pitched two-hit ball for the Phils for six innings but weakened and the Braves pounded him for four runs in the eighth.

Going into the seventh, the contest was a pitching duel with the Phils nicking Salvo for four hits but unable to push across a marker. The Braves took a 1-0 lead in the fourth when John Hassett doubled, moved to third on Frank Demaree's single and scored on a clever sacrifice by Sebastian Sisti.

They added another in the seventh and in the eighth scored four runs on Bobby Bragan's error of Ray Berres' roller, singles by Hassett, Demaree, Sisti and Max West. Paul Waner's triple then scored West and Johnny Podgajny relieved Johnson.

'Rochester' Buys Yearlings At Saratoga

By the Associated Press

Saratoga Springs, N. Y., Aug. 6.—There was a recession at the Saratoga sales paddock tonight with 55 yearling thoroughbreds going under the hammer for a total of $70,200. The average for the third sale of the annual yearling auctions was only $1,277, slightly under the opening night's figure and only about half that of last night.

Tonight's sale brought the total for three nights to $266,500 for 160 head. The average is $1,665.

Only one colt figured in the big money class. Mrs. E. Graham Lewis, of New York, bid $7,500 to get a bay son of Jack High out of Brown Princess from the consignment of Leslie Combs 2d, of Lexington, Ky.

Eddie Anderson, known on the screen and radio as "Rochester" was one of the busiest bidders although he didn't buy any very expensive yearlings. He purchased four yearlings for a total of $2,600, paying $400 for a bay colt by Mr. Bones—North Wind, $700 for a bay filly by Whichone—Sleek $900 for a dark brown colt by Case Ace—Fleet Parade and $600 for a bay filly by Case Ace—Gossamer.

No Replacement Of Managers Now, Says Tigers' Owner

By the Associated Press

Detroit, Aug. 6.—Owner Walter O. Briggs, of the Detroit Tigers, ended official silence over rumors of the replacement of Manager Del Baker by announcing today that no decision on the matter would be made immediately.

"There will be no change in managers at this time," Briggs declared, "and no decision will be made regarding the future until the season is over."

Prominently mentioned as successors to Baker have been Jimmy Dykes, Chicago White Sox manager, and Steve O'Neill, Tiger coach.

Harold Steffes Wild, Grill Loses

Pushing over four runs in the sixth inning when Harold Steffes suddenly developed a wild streak and walked five, Kavakos Grill last night captured the second-half Capital City League championship by nosing out Fat Boy, 5-4, at the Washington Softball Stadium. The victory was the fifth straight for the Grillmen and eliminated a second-half playoff which a Fat Boy victory would have necessitated.

M. P. M. Market girls defeated Kenilworth girls, 9-5, in the nightcap. Tennessee Allen and Babe Stevens led the attack with two hits apiece.

Tonight, Kavakos Grill, with "Lefty" Horejsi hurling, will take on the fast District Firemen at 9:15. Yellow Cab and Garvin's Grill will meet in a Capital City League game with second place at stake for the Cabbies.

Shot Put Captures Marathon Race

Chicago, Aug. 6 (AP).—Mrs. Marie Evans' Shot Put, the country's distance champion of 1940, captured the $2,500 added Isaac Murphy Handicap at 2 miles at Washington Park today.

Shot Put ran the distance in 3:24 4-5 and paid $3.40 straight, $2.60 and $2.20, with Al Au Feu returning $3.40 and $2.40. The show price on Gen. L was $2.40.

Chisox Divide Double-header With Browns

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, Aug. 6.—Thornton Lee held the St. Louis Browns to six singles as the Chicago White Sox won the second game of a double-header today, 5 to 2, to split even, the Browns having won the first, 9 to 6.

While Lee was stingy with hits he was liberal with passes, granting seven, but the Browns turned only one of them into a run.

The Sox started scoring early, Mike Kreevich and Taft Wright driving in a run in both the first and third innings. Joe Kuhel and Kreevich each stole a base in the first frame to get into scoring position. Don Kolloway batted in the fifth run in the ninth.

Elder Auker, the Browns' leading pitcher in 1940, won his ninth victory in the opener although he allowed 15 hits and was relieved by George Caster in a 3-run White Sox surge in the eighth. Auker has been charged with 12 defeats.

In the Browns' big fourth inning Auker batted twice. He led off with a single, scored the first of the five runs on Johnny Lucadello's double, then fanned for the third out.

Kuhel hit the only home run for the Sox in the fifth. It was his tenth of the season. He also got a double and two singles in his five times at bat.

Bosox Split With Yanks, 6-3 and 1-3

By the Associated Press

Boston, Aug. 6.—The New York Yankees, apparently coasting along on their previously acquired momentum, divided a double-header today with the third-place Boston Red Sox before a capacity crowd of 34,427.

The Red Sockers slugged Spud Chandler out of action with a four-run fourth inning rally in the first game and went on to win, 6 to 3, but the Yanks captured the nightcap, 3 to 1, on Marvin Breuer's five-hit hurling.

The Yankees were held to six hits in the first game by Tex Hughson and Mike Ryba and two of their runs came on homers by Joe Gordon in the second and Joe DiMaggio in the eighth. The other New York tally came on a single by Red Rolfe and a double by Tom Henrich in the fifth.

Chandler had pitched two consecutive shutouts before today but Bobby Doerr ended this spell with a home run in the third inning of the opener and Manager Joe Cronin led off the fourth with a round tripper. His mates followed with five other hits, including a double by Pitcher Ryba, to sew up the game.

Ryba Gets Victory

Ryba had been called to the mound on short notice in the third when Hughson hurt his arm and the "one man team" received credit for the victory.

The second game was a pitching duel between Breuer and Mickey Harris, who allowed New York eight hits. The Yanks opened the scoring in the third frame when Phil Rizzuto and Johnny Sturm led off with singles. Rizzuto was picked off second base by Catcher Frank Pytlak, but succeeded in stealing third and scored on a double play.

Then in the sixth Frenchie Bordagaray and Henrich singled and Joe DiMaggio drove them both home with a double.

Mrs. Davy Plans Busy Tournament Campaign Before the Nationals

Mrs. Pray, Neblett Will Also Compete At Brookline, Mass.

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

The District will have three, and possibly more, representatives in the National Women's Championship next month as Mrs. Myron Davy, Columbia; Mrs. L. G. Pray and Mrs. T. F. Neblett, Manor, have had their handicaps cleared by the local association.

Mrs. Davy, who spent from four to six hours a day all last week taking lessons from Frank Walsh in Rumson, N. J., plans to take in two tournaments before the National, which will be her fourth invasion of the big time.

The Maryland State finalist and the prominent New Jersey linkswomen, Mrs. H. J. Hockenjos, plan to compete in the Manchester, Vt., 54-hole medal tournament August 21, 22, 23, and then the Narragansett, R. I., match play invitation starting August 25. Both will draw topnotch fields.

Mrs. Davy will then go to The Country Club, Brookline, Mass., where the nationals will be played September 8-13. Mrs. Pray, Mrs. Neblett and possibly Mrs. W. R. Stokes, the District champion, will go direct from here to the national.

More extensive practice here at Congressional and Columbia will occupy Mrs. Davy's golfing time until the seventeenth, when she plans to leave for Manchester. Mrs. Davy has competed in three national women's tournaments to date, qualifying for the match play rounds twice and winning a first-round match last year on the West Coast.

Bogart, Malone Leave; Other Golf Notes

MRS. DAVY MRS. WEIBLE

BOGART SHOREY

Spring shotmaker, have a 1:12 p. m. starting time this afternoon at Mamaroneck, N. Y., in the John G. Anderson Memorial Tournament over the famed Winged Foot course, scene of last year's national amateur.

Bogart's original partner, Roger Peacock, notified him at the last minute that he would be unable to play. Earle Skinker and George F. Miller, of Columbia, who intended to play, canceled their plans yesterday. Skinker has been working every day and practicing in the evenings for the national amateur trials next Thursday.

The best-ball tournament opens today with an 18-hole medal play round and match play follows through the finals on Sunday.

New Women's Chairman

Mrs. W. L. Weible, president of the Women's District Golf Association, announced yesterday that Mrs. P. W. Rutledge, handicap chairman at Army and Navy, had been appointed tournament chairman for the remainder of the tournament season.

Mrs. Rutledge succeeds Mrs. Edward Fox, who resigned last Friday. Mrs. H. J. Cooper, Kenwood, will assist Mrs. Rutledge.

Mrs. Rutledge Named Tournament Head; Joe Curtin Resigns

Next tournament on the women's calendar is the British War Relief event, August 15, at Army and Navy. Entries will close August 13 with Mrs. Ed Widmayer. The entry fee is $1, of which half will go to charity and half for prizes. Class A and B players will be eligible.

Lady-Pro Postponed

Mrs. Weible also announced the lady-pro tournament, scheduled for Monday, August 18, at Congressional, has been postponed, probably until the first week in September.

The Congressional event conflicted with the annual pro-amateur at Arthur Thorn's Lancaster, Pa., course, for which most of the local pros had already engaged partners.

Joe Curtin, Mel Shorey's assistant at Indian Spring, will leave the club Sunday night for a new position with the Bethlehem Steel Co. in Baltimore. Bobby Clark, a former caddy, will succeed Curtin in the shop.

Shorey hit a birdie streak after two bogeys on the first two holes of his home course yesterday, finishing with a five-under par 67 despite his two-over par start. He had seven birdies in 16 holes.

Burtons in Match

The third match in the Allan Burton-Ralph Bogart vs. Danny Burton-Al Zarracina match will be played Sunday at Army and Navy, providing Bogart is back from the New York tournament by that time.

The Quantico pro-amateur team of Burton and Zarracina won the second match and the first was halved, leaving the backers of the service club team in the hole against the Marine duo supporters. Al Burton's team would be almost a sure winner if he duplicates his round of yesterday, a three-under par 69 with five birdies.

Mid-Atlantic greenkeepers will meet Monday, August 11, at the Suburban Club in Baltimore for golf and a dinner-meeting.

Randle's Queen, at $26.70 for $2, Takes Cumberland Purse

Carson Kirk Is Astride 4-Year-Old

Butcher Boy Runs Second; Pandoramint Is Third; 9,000 Fans See Program

By Walter Haight
A Staff Correspondent

Cumberland, Md., Aug. 6.—Randle's Queen, sent to the races by U. S. Randle, of Washington, D. C., but running today in the colors of Mrs. L. E. Crowell, came from behind to be up in the final jumps. Her bold effort, engineered by Jockey Carson Kirk, of Silver Spring, Md., gained her chief money in the Col. William H. Robertson Purse, featuring the Wednesday program here in Allegany County.

Randle's Queen, away from the races since the Charles Town meeting, was an outsider in the wagering and returned at the rate of $26.70 for each $2 investment. She was clocked in the creditable time of 1:23 for the 6½ furlongs over a fast track.

The blanket finish was a thrilling struggle that brought the crowd of 9,000 to its collective feet. B. W. Dulaney's Butcher Boy was second and S. J. Flammia's Pandoramint was third. A field of eight competed.

Claimed at Charles Town

Mrs. L. E. Crowell gained possession of Randle's Queen via the claiming route at Charles Town. There were five claims in the box for the 4-year-old daughter of Espino that day, and Mrs. Crowell "won" the filly in the resultant "shake."

J. K. Fockler's Never Home went to the front at the break and saved much ground while setting a swift pace. Kirk had Randle's Queen in fourth position at this stage. Pandoramint was closest to the pace with Butcher Boy next. In the stretch Never Home faltered and it was anybody's purse from that point to the wire. However, Randle's Queen, on the outside, had the best concluding punch.

Strange Steeplechase

The day's steeplechase was a "strange as it seems" affair. War Chat, the winning horse, had never won a race before. Jockey R. Taylor, who rode War Chat, was aboard the first winner of his career. In addition, War Chat was the first horse saddled by Owner and Trainer P. Pascuzzo to win a race. Maespur was second and Atoll was third in this test of about 2 miles.

War Chat paid $9 and his time of 3:32 2-5 was a new record for the local jumping course, the old mark having been 3:34 held by Pop Goss' Judges Bid.

away to score by three lengths over the Broolyn-owned speedster in 2:05.

Ben White, veteran driver bidding for his third Hambletonian, went to the whip on His Excellency both times in an effort to stave off the Southerner's great stretch drive but the big city colt was not equal to the task. As it was he picked up second money of $7,405.80 and had the honor of forcing the classic into extra heats for the first time since 1934 when Lord Jim had to go 4 miles to win.

Thanks to Lucy Hanover's disqualification, Merwynna took third money of $4,443.48 although she could do no better than sixth in the second mile and seventh in the third. Thirds in the first 2 miles and fourth in the last gave the fourth money to Fast Train, owned by Ebby Gerry, polo playing chairman of the New York State racing commission.

E. Roland Harriman's Florimel, pace setter to the three-quarter post in the second brush and to nearly the half-mile marker in the third, won fifth money with a fifth, fourth and third. Sixth and last money was taken by Hollyrood Anna, owned and driven by Dunbar Bostwick to fourth place in the initial dash and eighth in the last two.

Lou Plummer, Fraley Meet In Mat Feature

Wrestledom's bad boy, Lou Plummer, will play the role of "spoiler" tonight at Turner's Arena. Plummer, regarded as one of the No. 1 villains in the game, will collide with Pat Fraley, the Pacific Coast Irish star, in the feature bout, and will attempt to halt Patrick's two-match winning streak.

Fraley has been to the local mats twice in as many weeks, throwing Milo Steinborn first—then turning the heat on Kansas Joe Cox just last Thursday.

The winner of the Plummer-Fraley bout will be used in one of the matches next Thursday on a big outdoor show at the ball park.

Maurice LaChapelle and Ace Freeman, the clever two-man team champs who have won four in a row, will try to ring the bell again in a battle against two Iowans—Fred Grobmier and Eddie Cook. LaChappelle and Freeman hold a victory over Plummer and Eddie Newman.

An old-time star, Young Monday, who wrestled as far back as three decades ago, will make his bow in a 30-minute match against Joe Devansky, of Philadelphia. Monday, who works on the defense program at the Naval Air Station, once wrestled Joe Turner.

Abie Coleman, the gnome, will meet Tommy Rae and Angleo Leone will open the card in a bout against Mike Heller.

First match is at 8:30.

Arcaro Suspension Lasts Until Aug. 20

Saratoga Springs, N. Y., Aug. 6 (AP).—The suspension of Jockey Eddie Arcaro, imposed by the stewards at Empire City July 22 for rough riding, has been continued through August 20, by the board of stewards of the Jockey Club, it was announced today.

The stewards pointed out that Arcaro had been repeatedly warned about rough riding, practices of a dangerous nature while in the saddle and other flagrant fouls, all of which culminated in the offense of July 22 for which he was punished.

Selections at Cumberland

Dear Al:

Jockey Eddie Churchill arrived and immediately swung into action. The betting record for this track is $148,881 for a single day. Mutuel Manager Donald Hay expects that mark to go into the discard on Saturday. Adler is the champion newspaper hustler around the tracks. He follows the horses from town and town and makes a good living. When Adler's business is bad, the boys buys his papers whether they want to read them or not. Adler's profits hit a new high whenever a storm comes up as the crowd is leaving. He ups the price to a dime and fans buy them to keep from getting wet. Adler never stops trying and often is found outside popular beer joints peddling papers two days old. Brother Farrell sends word that he has built 100 new stalls at Marlboro. Jockey George Watson is aiding R. H. Hutchinson, jr., in training the horses Scoria and Odenathus. Cumberland officials did a neat piece of hustling on the first day's program here getting the final race off at 5:33. Received a note from Andy Gumpiere, who beats the publicity drums for Hollywood Park out in California. That track had a daily betting average of $644,687 for 47 days and on May 30 had 22,287 autos in the parking lot. What's more the track says it can empty the parking lot in 20 minutes. Maryland's tracks should take notice. But I should say that Laurel is building a new parking area as well as a wider entrance from the Baltimore Boulevard. Robert Scharf is one of the best messenger boys I have run into around the various tracks. I'll be sorry when the Western Union makes him superintendent. Julius Schrago, who quit the tracks to work for a living, is spending his vacation here. The B. & O. special train from Washington is doing a good business. Leaves Washington at 9:30. Note to E. D.—Can't remember a mare named Beatrice. There was an announcement over the public address system yesterday "Mr. Woodrow Wilson call Operator No. 31." It was Navy Day at this track and the mud didn't come up. I could make a crack about boat races but I'll just see you on the rail.—BILL.

First race—CLIFTON'S DAWN will like the sharp turns here and is reported fit as hands make horses. I'm going to string along. DEL CHARM was well backed at Bel Air and deserves attention. HAPPY SLAVE is likely to take a place in the money circle.

Second race—CLOCKS gets a modest weight assignment for this and looks like the day's best bet. Needs only the right ride. WALE SIGNAL has speed and is a threat. EXPECTED BELLE downed fair ones at Hagerstown.

Third race—BEACON QUEEN turned in a fine effort last out and needs only to run back to that race to beat these. TAR ANNE raced well at the other town and is a threat. MARDI GRAS is a formidable horse on the reserve list.

Fourth race—CHIDE had plenty of trouble in that last at Bel Air. With clear sailing this one will get home on top. WINDSOR CHIEF is good now and will be a keen factor. REAL BOY and JUNE DATE are good ones among the also eligibles.

Fifth race—HIGH HEDGE failed to race up to expectations last out. Should take the top on these and stay there. ROYAL BUSINESS is good now but that 122 pounds and the short route are likely to work against her. TWO PLY comes off a sizzling effort.

Sixth race—SKY HOSTESS failed to run her race here on opening day. I look for a form reversal in this field. PALKIN gets in light enough to be dangerous. BLIND BROOK for the minor award.

Seventh race—MAETAKE has been freshened up since Hagerstown and this mare will be ready to run her race. LEONARDTOWN and LYDE to account for the place and show money.

Eighth race—TROSTAR ran a promising race at the other town and will be a keen factor if not the winner in this company. ALMAC and BEST POLICY for the place and show positions.

Best bet—CLOCKS.

Breese Near Upset as Darkness Halts Match With Welsh

New Stroke Helps Bill To Surprise

Champion Wins First Set, 7-5, but Drops Second, 6-4; Leavens Routs Kiljus, 6-1, 6-0

By Jack Munhall

Flamboyant "Big Bill" Breese, the forgotten man of local tennis, stirred up a lot of old memories yesterday as he fought Titleholder Barney Welsh to a two-set standstill in quarter-final play of the District championships at Edgemoor.

With a newly developed backhand, the huge nephew of "Ham" Fish, came within one gam of eliminating Welsh in straight sets before darkness postponed the match with each player having won a deuced set. Welsh, overcoming a 4-5 deficit, took the opening set, 7—5, but dropped the second, 6—4, to Breese who was playing his best tennis here since 1936. The match will be finished today at 5:30.

While Welsh was balked, second-seeded Don Leavens became the third player to gain the singles semifinals as he routed Ed Kiljus, of the University of Pennsylvania, 6—1, 6—0. In other matches the flashy team of Dick Bennion and Bob Underwood moved into the doubles semifinals with a 6—1, 6—3 triumph over DeWitt Smith and Doyle Royal, and in the District Veterans tournament Chet Adair beat Dick Spencer, 6—4, 6—3, 6—4, in a "killer" of a match, and Hays Haymaker subdued C. B. Austin, 6—0, 6—3.

As in 1936

But the top spectacle of yesterday was easily the struggle between Breese, the eccentric Hah-vahd man, and Welsh, the supposedly invincible of local tennis. Breese, shelving his backhand drive for a slice and playing more steadily than in years, looked every bit as good a player as in his first season of District tennis, back in 1936, when he beat Dooly Mitchell and Eddie Yeomans.

As a matter of fact, observers believed he should have licked Welsh in straight sets after leading Barney, 5—4, on his own service in the opening set. Welsh, however, broke through Breese in the tenth and went on to close out rather easily for a one-set lead.

With that, many thought Breese would lose interest in the match, as he so often has after his first onslaughts have been checked, but with a determination he seldom exhibits the big fellow buckled down and with a superb streak of tennis squared the match. Welsh got off to a 2-1 lead and had Breese down, 15-40, on Breese's service before Bill really started to play by winning that game.

Rushed Net

And from then on it was all in favor of the 6-foot 4-inch, 240-pound "Dollar a Year" worker for the Red Cross. Breese rushed the net at every chance, a strategy he had failed to employ in the first set, and repeatedly put away easy overheads after first outmaneuvering the champion from the base lines.

With the count deadlocked at 3—3, Breese broke through Welsh at love in the seventh game and in a long, deuced eighth game took a 5—3 advantage. Welsh came back to hold service in the ninth, winning at 30, but Breese closed spectacularly by holding his service at love in the tenth.

Unable to hide his delight, Breese afterward attributed his great improvement to his new backhand, which he developed last week, and to the fact that lately he has been practicing against good men's players instead of confining his tennis to playing with his wife, who is learning the game. Mrs. Breese, the former Nora Magee, is now in Canada.

Today's schedule:

Singles

Quarter-finals—5:30 p. m., Breese vs. Welsh.

Doubles

Semifinals—5:30, Leavens and Murphy vs. Shenkin and Rosenbaum; 6, Channing and Breese vs. Adair and Miller; 6:30, Welsh and Lynch vs. Lyman and Dole.

Veterans' singles—5, Freer vs. C. Johnson. J. Miller vs. B. Hazer, M. Martinez vs. Silva; 5:30, Col. Ristine vs. J. Doyle.

Karpook Hurls 1-Hit Game In Softball

Spectacular Larry Karpook pitched his second consecutvie one-hitter and fanned 17 batters last night in Ballston Stadium as Baltimore's Overnight Transportation ten smashed its way into the finals of the Mid-Atlantic Softball Tournament with a thrilling 1-0 victory over Carr Bros. and Boswell in ten innings.

Tommy Dobyns all but matched Karpook's amazing performance in limiting Overnight to four singles and fanning ten, but his own wild pitch in the tenth inning led to his downfall. Stitz singled off Ralph Frey's shoulders to start the inning. Hoban walked and when the fourth ball was a wild pitch, Stitz moved to third and Hoban went all the way to second. George Stephens then hit the first ball pitched for a single past first, and Stitz scored with the run that broke up the ball game.

Up until the tenth inning not a ball had been hit to the outfield off Karpook. Karpook now has a total of 32 strikeouts in two tourney games, and has allowed no earned runs in 17 innings.

In the nightcap International Business Machines earned the right to meet Overnight in the final round tomorrow night, shutting out Plaza Wine and Liquor, 5-0, in a bitterly fought contest.

Mulloy, Kramer Bow In Eastern Net Play

By the Associated Press

Rye, N. Y., Aug. 6.—Two minor surprises that might be classed as upsets by stretching the usual meaning of the word a trifle were recorded today as most of the favorites paraded into the quarter finals of the Eastern Court Tennis Championships at the Westchester Country Club.

Gardnar Mulloy, of Coral Gables, Fla., ranked seventh nationally and seeded eighth in this tournament, bowed out before William Talbert, of Cincinnati, and Jack Kramer, of Los Angeles, the Nation's sixth-ranking player, was eliminated by Bryan (Bitsy) Grant, of Atlanta, who was right up near the top of the list only a few years ago.

Otherwise the favored stars came through handily against fairly strong opposition, Bobby Riggs, Don McNeill, newlywed Frank Kovacs, who today announced his marriage to Virginia Wolfenden, ranking woman star; Wayne Sabin, Frank Parker and Ted Schroeder completed the round of eight in the men's singles.

Louise Brough Upset

In the women's division, the only surprise came when Patricia Canning, of Hidden Valley, Calif., eliminated another young California star, Louise Brough, who recently upset Mrs. Sarah Palfrey Cooke. Joining her in the quarter-finals were top-seeded Pauline Betz, Mrs. Cooke, Mrs. Kovacs, who made tennis history by changing her name on the drawsheet right in the middle of a tournament; Mary Arnold, Margaret Osborne, Dorothy Bundy and Hope Knowles. All but Mrs. Cooke and Miss Knowles are Californians.

The Talbert-Mulloy match was the biggest surprise to the galleries. The Cincinnati player has been competing against top flight stars and giving them trouble for a couple of seasons. Today his game was just right, while Mulloy was just enough off form to cause his defeat, 6—0, 6—4. Talbert never gave his high-ranking rival a chance to get started, scoring winners consistently with deep drives to Mulloy's backhand and coming to the net to score with beautifully angled volleys which caught the Southerner flat-footed.

Kramer, coholder of the national doubles title with Schroeder, tried to outplay Grant from the baseline and found he couldn't do it. Bitsy was too steady for him and his court generalship was too good, forcing the Los Angeles youngster to err time after time.

The matches that were expected to be the day's features came up to the advance notices. Miss Canning, making the most of her greater experience and hitting well from the baseline, defeated Miss Brough, 3—6, 6—3, 6—0, and Schroeder outlasted young Earl Cochell, of Los Angeles, 5—7, 6—2, 6—4.

'An Excellent Partner'

Kovacs Reveals Marriage To Virginia Wolfenden

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

Frankie Kovacs, the unpredictable amateur net ace, and Virginia Wolfenden, a ranking player among the women, postcarded friends during the Rye tournament of their recent marriage. Friends received the news yesterday

By the United Press

Rye, N. Y., Aug. 6.—Frank Kovacs and Virginia Wolfenden, California tennis stars, were married at Indianapolis July 14, Kovacs revealed today.

Kovacs, the Nation's third ranking player and No. 1 court clown, said, "Virginia was such a good mixed doubles partner that I figured she'd make an excellent side-kick for life."

Miss Wolfenden, ranked seventh nationally, and Kovacs are playing in the current Eastern Grass Court Championships at the Westchester Country Club. The Oakland lad and the San Francisco girl have been seen together constantly this season; hence fellow players expected notification of an engagement soon, but announcement of their marriage came as a surprise.

New England's Fascinating Sport—Landing a Tuna

Cunningham

A man's description of his most recent golf bout—where this shot went, how that putt missed by a cricket's whisker, how he hooked his next drive and finally reached the green, thanks to a phenomenal recovery with his No. X-49 sadiron—is always, to me, so much verbal chloroform. But I can listen until the cows come home and go back out in the morning to any gentleman's blow-by-blow account of his bout with a fish.

Man and boy, I have probably spent more hard-earned money and more never recapturable man-hours trying to catch something passably respectable in the way of a fish than any run-of-the-mine city fisherman you know, and with results that, to coin an expression, you could put in your eye. I turned over and almost drowned in the Bangor pool after salmon. I've been off the rugged shores of Catalina after yellowtail, or whatever would cooperate and nothing did. Every winter for ten years, I've tried to bargain with the sail fish, tarpon, or whatever off Florida. I've been after whatever lives, moves, and has its being in the broad brick-red mouth of the Mississippi, down there 90 miles south of New Orleans. I've dared the tarpon to the east and west of Galveston. I've been after tuna in Ipswich Bay, the stripers in the surf of Cape Cod and Rhode Island.

I own enough books on salt-water fishing to stock a small town library, and enough rods and reels and lines and gadgets to outfit the show window of a big city store. And the cold truth of the matter is that I've never caught a doggoned thing. Oh, an inconsequential eel or a sea robin. But I mean FISH.

Guides invariably beguile me with awesome tales of how they were striking this morning or yesterday or last week or last year, but something's always happened in the meantime. The tide isn't just right, or the wind has turned, or that recent storm roiled the water too much.

Maybe you haven't heard how sport fishing—salt-water this means—has moved in on the New England summertime scene of late years. The miracle of tuna—they used to call them "horse mackerel" off Portland, harpoon 'em and let 'em thrash it out with a barrel—means almost as much to New England harbor life in these times as the international yacht races used to mean to Newport, or the Harvard-Yale boat race used to mean to New London.

Personally, I want no part of a tuna. The work's too hard.

You troll for 'em with a rod as big as a hoe handle, and a reel the size of a kid's Christmas drum. They strap both to you with a harness that looks like a traffic cop's galluses, and park you in a screwed-down chair with a quickly jerk-outable back.

This particular fish is about the size of an elk, and fanging one on a line is practically the same as getting a lasso over the smoke stack of a runaway locomotive. If the varmit runs, he could conceivably take you overboard, harness, hoe-handle and all, in which event it would become a pretty problem as to which was doing the fishing, you or the tuna.

If he sounds, which is nautical language for going downstairs, yours is the back-breaking job of horsing him up. This calls for the performance known as "pumping." It consists, roughly, of leaning 'way forward, then as far backward as you can—that's why they take the back out of the chair. By holding the rod rigid, and bringing it up with you, you either throw out your sacroiliac, or move the ponderous and stubborn critter upward a couple of feet. If it chances to be the latter, you bend forward again, lowering the rod quickly but in the same rigid arc and, in the meantime, you reel in furiously to take in as much line as you made on the previous pull.

This goes on and on, until the tuna grows annoyed and decides to make another run. You have to let him have line in this miserable crisis or risk his breaking it with brute force and going on to Newfoundland. When he stops, after tearing off maybe a couple of hundred yards, you start pumping again—2 feet, or so per pump.

It can readily be seen that this might grow monotonous especially when it's remembered that that ocean is 5 miles deep in places. Men too proud to cut the line have sometimes been hauled by these things for a couple of days.

The times I've been for tuna, I've been afraid we might get one rather than apprehensive lest we might fail. It added up to the same in the long run, however, as all the tuna I've ever tangled with came in tins from the corner grocery.

Erie R. R. Issues Clarified

Local brokers report substantial trading here in "when-issued" securities of the Erie Railroad, which are to be issued under the road's plan of reorganization.

At the opening of trade Monday there was considerable confusion on the floor of the New York Stock Exchange when brokers began buying and selling the common stock in place of the certificates of beneficial interest, and vice versa.

Under the terms of the reorganization, the two issues are not interchangeable, and are not good deliveries against one another, though for several hours yesterday the brokers seemed to think they were. A number of houses will be liable for substantial "error account" losses unless customers are willing to settle on some mutually agreed basis, it was reported in New York.

The certificates of beneficial interest represent stock which will be held in escrow until January 1, 1945, at which time the certificates of beneficial interest may be exchanged for actual common stock unless the warrants given to the present common and preferred stockholders have been exercised.

The warrants permit the purchase of escrow stock at any time until January 1, 1945, at $37.17 a share plus interest at 4½ per cent to the date of purchase, less any dividends that have been paid on the stock.

Both the certificates and the common stock were among the most active issues on the Exchange, but there was no estimate of how much of the activity was based on misunderstanding, nor how many impossible "sales" occurred.

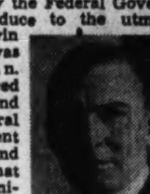
Return to First Principles of Economy Urged to Cope With New World Conditions

George N. Peek, first head of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration, and former trade adviser to President Roosevelt, today acts as guest columnist for Merryle Stanley Rukeyser.

How will war and resultant policies affect the economic position of the American farmer? The answer, of course, depends upon how we meet the challenge. That rests with us. Fortunately we have recent experience to point out some of our past errors and omissions.

In the early days of the World War—1914 to 1918—farmers were encouraged by the Federal Government to produce to the utmost. "Food will win the war," was the slogan. Prices advanced under demand until the Federal Government stepped in and established what is called minimum prices but which in effect became maximum prices. Prices generally were remunerative, however, and satisfactory prices prevailed throughout 1919 and into 1920. Then a staggering blow was dealt agriculture from which it has never receovered. The Federal Reserve System started its deflation policy, singling out agriculture as the victiim. In no year since 1919 have farmers received parity—i. e., prices which would buy as much of industrial goods as they did in the five prewar years, 1909 to 1914.



MR. PEEK

There is nothing in the record of the theory or practice of the Adminisitration's farm policies to suggest even remotely that they are adapted to cope with the present war-time stresses or with the greater stresses that are certain to come in an unpredictable and incalculable post-war world. The war of 1914-1918 underminded the traditional bases of world economy and trade; the present world conflict bids fair to obliterate them completely. To deal with new and radically different world conditions, which will inevitably react upon us, it is necessary to rid ourselves of preconceived theories and to get back to first principles of national economy and of trade.

Agriculture and foreign trade are so closely tied together that it is impossible to consider one without the other. Nevertheless, that is precisely what the present Administration has tried to do for more than eight years. In practice it has treated them as though they were totally separate and unrelated problems.

On one side, in its domestic legislation it has attempted, however, unsuccessfully, to raise domestic price levels independent of world price levels, and on the other side, in its foreign trade activities, it has pursued a policy of low tariffs, free trade, and internationalism, disregarding wage, price and living conditions in this country compared with those of the world at large.

Foreign trade, agricultural and industrial, and its attendant financial policies should be based upon and conform to the requirements of our domestic economic objectives. These objectives are the protection of the American market for American agriculture, industry and labor, and the protection of American employment and standards of living.

We should adopt a realistic policy of trading for both agriculture and industry, in the national interest, under a system of quotas and of selective imports and exports, granting tariff or other trade concessions only on a quid pro quo basis, thus returning to the traditional American policy of offering to all nations reciprocal treatment on the basis of the conditional most-favored-nation principle—this in contrast to the unconditional most-favored-nation principle promoted by the New Deal theorists which in effect operates largely as camouflage for a policy of low tariffs and free trade in return for scattered concessions from foreign nations.

There is much unnecessary confusion of thought about foreign trade. The answer is to be prepared to trade in the products of agriculture and industry alike according to the prevailing customs governiing trade btween nations—using quotas, embargoes, bilateral agreements, exchange controls, and other devices. Other countries established these customs, not the United States. They are not likely to change in our time.

OPM Favors Big New Steel Plant in Md.

By the Associated Press

The Office of Production Management recommended yesterday the construction of a $25,097,000 high-speed steel plate mill at the Sparrows Point, Md., plant of the Bethlehem Steel Co.

William S. Knudsen, director of the OPM, wrote Jesse H. Jones, Federal loan administrator, that the project as proposed by the company was needed urgently for defense purposes and would require Federal financing.

The proposed construction includes, in addition to the 780,000-ton mill, an open-hearth furnace with an annual capacity of 180,000 tons. Steel to operate the mill would be obtained from this furnace, three other company-financed open-hearth furnaces now being completed and additional furnaces now operating at the plant.

OPM officials said that Eugene G. Grace, president of the Bethlehem company, submitted the program as a partial solution of the steel plate shortage growing out of the shipbuilding program, railroad car building and other defense undertakings.

Knudsen told Jones that "present and prospective demands for plates are far in excess of existing capacity, demands are constantly increasing and delivery dates are long extended."

He said the Sparrows Point project would supply additional plates several months earlier than any other proposal submitted to the OPM, but he did not disclose when the mill could be completed.

American Woolen Net Profit Leaps In Six Months

New York, Aug. 3 (AP).—American Woolen Co. reported today for the six months ended June 30 net profit of $4,905,625 after provision of $4,648,635 for Federal income and excess profits taxes, equal to $14.01 a share of 7 per cent preferred stock on which unpaid dividends amounted to $79.25 a share. This compared with $317,851, or 91 cents a share on the preferred in the like 1940 period.

The company has unfilled orders totaling over 75 million dollars. President Moses Pendleton said the cmopany had awards for $81,215,116 in Government contracts up to June 30, of which 28 million dollars was still undelivered.

Sales volume for the first half of 1941 was 66 million dollars, against 28 million dollars in the same period in 1940.

Turpentine Price Bounds Upward

Savannah, Ga., Aug. 6 (AP).—On the strength of good demand and small stocks, gum spirits turpentine has bounded upward from $18.25 for a 50-gallon drum on July 1 to $27.62 at the current quotation. It was quoted today on the Savannah Naval Stores market at 55¼ cents per gallon in bulk.

A year ago today turpentine was quoted in the Savannah market at 21 cents a gallon in bulk. On August 6, 1917, when World War I was at its height, spirits was quoted here at 38½ to 38¾ cents.

Money Circulation Reaches Peak Level

By the Associated Press

Money in circulation reached a new peak of $9,713,633,041 or an average of $73.06 per person on July 31.

The Treasury said that, except for the unusual period of the 1933 bank holiday, this was a record. The figure has been rising nearly every month for the last two years.

The average compared with $72.21 on June 30 and $59.70 on July 31 of last year.

Profit Taking Cuts Gains in Commodities

By the Associated Press

Commodity futures prices moved generally higher in active trading yesterday, but profit-taking sales caused late declines that about halved most of the gains in the major staples.

Cotton touched peak advances of around $1 a bail and closed 40 to 55 cents a bale net higher. The advance, with wheat and corn gains at Chicago, was credited to Congressional developments regarding Government loan stocks and price fixing.

Both world and domestic sugar futures increased in value 1-20 of a cent or more a pound on buying based on continued belief the West Indies would supply the world's sugar and on strength in raw sugar prices.

Coffee and cocoa among imports were higher, Santos coffee futures gaining about 1-5 cent a pound and cocoa up to 1-10 of a cent a pound.

At Chicago, wheat futures closed ⅝ to 1½ cents a bushel higer and corn was up ¾ to 1¼ cents a bushel.

The Associated Press index of 35 cash commidity prices advanced to a new high since mid 1937 in its fifth consecutive day of gain at 90.89 per cent of the 1926 average. The day before it stood at 90.60 per cent.

Modest Rally in Motor and Steel Shares Offsets Weakness in Rails and Aircrafts

New York, Aug. 6.—Motors, steels and a few specialties saved the stock market today from another backward step in reaction from the July rise.

Generally, the performance of the list was a carbon copy of Tuesday's irregular action. Rails extended their retreat and were joined by aircrafts and some coppers. Bidding covered fair ground at the start, subsided sharply and picked up again just before the close.

The Associated Press composite of 60 stocks was unchanged at 43.9. The rail average dipped 0.3 of a point. It was one of the slower days of the recent period with dealings at 581,170 shares against 641,720 yesterday.

Working against any important broadening of commitments were increased concern over Japan's next move in the Orient, German claims of a heavy slaughter of Russians and Wall Street misgivings on pending tax and price control measures.

Moderate recovery in the steels and motors was in the face of continued worries in both industries as to problems incidant to defense.

Aviation manufacturing stocks yielded with United Aircraft which at one time was down more than 2½ points. A disappointing June quarter report by United, made so by tax provisions, was the selling motive.

The recession in rails was attributed to further selling from holders who feared their bullish move of the last month might have to cool until wage differences between managements and workers were ironed out.

An item evoking some cheer in brokerage circles was the Stock Exchange's report that the July upturn boosted the value of listed shares by more than $2,000,000,000.

New 1941 peaks were established by Consolidated Aircraft, N. Y. Shipbuilding, Paramount, Schenley Distillers and Newport Industries. On the gaining side were U. S. Steel, Youngstown Sheet, General Motors, Chrysler, Woolworth, Johns-Manville and Westinghouse.

The bond market leaned to the offside today with numerous low-priced rails under moderate pressure. Brokers attributed the reactionary tendency to a mild case of profit taking, especially in the recently fast rising carrier group. The low volume of $5,531,800, par value, indicated, however, that the selling movement was puny compared with recent active days when the market was rising. Tuesday's sales amounted to $6,246,800. The Associated Press average of 20 rails dropped 0.4 of a point. Other groups were only slightly changed.

American Telephone 3s of '36, when issued, were among the most actively traded issues but the bonds ended unchanged at 110⅛ after receding to 110 at one time. Sales totaled $324,000.

United States Governments shaded Tuesday's prices a trifle on both the Stock Exchange and over the counter but volume was light.

Million Offered To Settle RCA Damage Suit

By the Associated Press

New York, Aug. 6.—General Electric Co. and Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Co. offered in State Supreme Court today to pay $1,000,000 to stockholders of Radio Corporation of America in settlement of a $238,000,000 damage suit.

Counsel for the companies told Supreme Court Justice Aron J. Levy that there was no merit in the claims and that the companies admitted no liability but that prolonged litigation might impede their production of vital national defense materials.

The suit, originally asking $500,000,000, but later carved to the lesser figure through dismissal of scores of claims, was brought by 12 RCA stockholders against the two companies and certain officials and directors of RCA and others.

The stockholders contended that the defendants caused a loss of $238,000,000 through waste, mismanagement, fraud and conspiracy.

Justice Levy adjourned the trial pending report of a referee named today to ascertain the fairness and adequacy of the offer.

The companies' statement said continued litigation would seriously interrupt regular duties of the executives and other personnel at a time when the companies were taxed with national defense orders.

Justice Levy ordered that the 270,000 RCA stockholders be notified of the offer so that they might voice either approval or objection.

The suit was started three years ago.

William F. Carey Made Chairman Of Int. Utilities

New York, Aug. 6 (AP).—William F. Carey, picturesque city sanitation commissioner, who has a propensity for turning up in all sorts of big jobs—from building Chinese railroads to shoveling snow off Manhattan streets—today was elected chairman of the board of the 61-billion-dollar International Utilities Corporation.

Directors also named to the board were Walter P. Chrysler, jr., son of the late automobile manufacturer, and Frank A. Vanderlip, 34, of the widely known banking family.

Carey, 62, a wealthy engineer who last year was summoned by the Government to supervise construction of cantonments for Army troops throughout the country, will replace P. M. Chandler, of Philadelphia, as board chairman. Chandler, both chairman and president of the corporation, a holding and investment company, with assets of 61 billion dollars, resigned two weeks ago.

William B. Yeager, 31, former official of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, was recently elected president of the corporation.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Aug. 6 (AP).—Buyers were back in the grain pits today bidding prices of cereals up to new four-year highs.

Wheat rose as much as 2⅜ cents in early dealings, May, 1942, contracts soaring to $1.19⅝, at which point they showed an advance of more than a dime since trading was started officially about two weeks ago and were about 44 cents higher than a year ago. Rye advanced 2 cents to within about 2 cents of the three-year top reached Monday, while corn and oats were up more than a cent to new highs since 1937 for deferred deliveries.

Profit-taking attracted by the price advance caused a reaction before the close, particularly in the rye pit, but wheat finished ⅝@1½ cents higher than yesterday; September, 1.12⅝@1.12¼; December, 1.15⅛@1.15⅜; May, 1.18⅝@1.18⅛; Corn, ¾@1⅛ up; September, 77⅝@77½; December, 80⅝@80½; May, 83⅝; oats, 1@1⅛ up; May, 46⅝; rye unchanged to ¼ higher; soybeans, ¾@1½ higher, and lard unchanged to 5 higher.

New York, Aug. 6 (AP).—Both world and domestic sugar futures advanced today to the best prices since the outbreak of the European war. Active trading reflected the strength in spot raw sugar values and the expectation of increased demand.

New York Cotton

New York, Aug. 6 (AP).—Senate-House conference approval of the bill that would freeze cotton loan stocks and further reports of boll weevil damage stimulated $1.25 a bale today before profit-taking cotton futures to gains of as much as pared them to a close 40 to 55 cents a bale net higher.

Activity slackened in the latter half of the session after mill buying dropped off. New Orleans and other Southern interests supplied most of the selling pressure.

Speculative traders were believed awaiting the Government crop report, due Friday, before making commitments.

COMPARISONS ARE ODIOUS NOW—BUT THEY DO SAY THAT RUSSIA'S PREMIER MOLOTOV HAS THE SAME WEAKNESS AS HIS NAZI EX-PAL, VON RIBBENTROP, FOR PLAYING SOBSTUFF ON THE VIOLIN.

TODAY'S HISTORY LESSON

BUBBLE BATHS ARE NOT SO NEW. WAY BACK IN 1600 ENGLAND'S GOOD QUEEN BESS USED TO TAKE HERS IN SPARKLING WINE.

"THERE ARE NO MORE ISLANDS"

THESE WISHFUL WORDS HAVE SO APPEALED TO HERMANN GOERING BOSS OF THE LUFTWAFFE, THAT HE'S HAD THEM ENGRAVED IN THE COCKPIT OF NAZI PLANES FLYING OVER ENGLAND!

Grin and Bear It — By Lichty

"But, honey—I don't think now's the time to tell him he'll be president—it'll rob him of such a pleasant surprise later."

with Glynn

Cecil Brown, who used to be a fellow toiler with your correspondent in the publicity offices of CBS in New York, is getting around these days—much more, it must be admitted, than your correspondent, who has the inclination, but not the luck.

You heard Cecil from Rome for almost two years on WJSV's "The World Today" programs until the Fascists objected a few months ago to his annoying habit of not presenting their propaganda as they wanted him to and expelled him from the Eternal City.

Then Cecil went to Belgrade, arriving there the day the Germans started their invasion of Yugo-Slavia. He held that post as long as he could, which wasn't very long, and then went with the American military attache to Cairo, from where he was heard on "The World Today" news roundups until a few weeks go. He was on the Syrian front with the British troops and one of his memorable eye-witness reports was of a British destroyer a mile out at sea shelling a tank belonging to the Vichy forces and destroying it.

After the Syrian campaign Brown covered the fighting on the Egyptian western front and then he received permission from the British to go to Singapore. He's arrived there now, and you'll be hearing his reports from that British outpost in the Orient from day to day.

As we said, Mr. Brown is getting around.

Contract Bridge

Three Britons and an American played today's hand at a New York club. It has been observed that the English are more conservative in their bidding than American bridge players. But Uncle Sam's ward who sat in on this hand heard bidding that would balk Jacoby and bring a blink from Sims.

Our English friend, who contributes the remarkable deal, ironically concludes: "Did someone say the British are conservative?"

His letter: "The South player, my partner, now lives in the Middle West, but he is on a short visit to New York. Maybe the wild and wooly West has increased his propensity leap. Our opponent in the East, quite a lad at either contract or duplicate, had been having frightful luck all evening and was desperate. Due to something that sprouted on his upper lip a year or two ago he is now known as Molotov, in a jocular way.

"A friend of his dropped in at 11 p. m. and was asked to cut in. I doubt whether he has seen such pyrotechnics before. I, known on occasions as the champion kibitzer, held the North seat.

"Now for the fireworks. With a game in hand and dealer, I picked up my cards and thought to myself,

Today's Hand

NORTH DEALER

	North
	♠10985 ♥AQ532 ♦A ♣AQ2
West ♠None ♥4 ♦KQJ10 98754 ♣874		East ♠KQ ♥7 ♦632 ♣KJ109 653
	South ♠AJ76432 ♥KJ10986 ♦None ♣None

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1♥	2♣	3♠	4♦
6♠	Dble	7♥	Pass
Pass	Dble	Redble	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: K♠.

This looks like game and rubber.' I bid one heart; East, two clubs; South, 'leaping Willie,' three spades. The stranger promptly bid four diamonds. I pondered momentarily and did a little leaping on my own to six spades. 'Molotov' doubled. Great Scott! 'Leaping Willie' is not through yet; he is up to seven hearts. 'Molotov' again doubles. 'Leaping Willie' is not to be restrained; he redoubles.

"At this point I need a little sustenance and meekly call for another whisky and soda. The dummy goes down, and the result is obvious: We are set one trick, doubled and redoubled, for a loss of 400 points; whereas a redouble on the spades would have given us a 700 rubber and, with the additional points, a 2,400 rubber.

"After this debacle our opponents promptly won a game, later the rubber. Yes, my dashing partner and I walked out of the club together and managed a cheery good night at parting. We had one consolation: We had an evening's entertainment, anyway."

Temple Church To Continue Its Center

By Robert Tate Allen
Post Church Editor

The Temple Baptist Church and Temple Recreation Center property at Tenth and N Streets Northwest soon will be sold, but the center will be continued at another downtown church or through establishment of a neighborhood house, The Post learned yesterday.

"A change in the neighborhood" has prompted the congregation's decision to move in the near future and several locations are being considered, according to the Rev. Randolph Gregory, youthful pastor. He expects to be called soon for Army service as a chaplain.

With cooperation of the Washington Federation of Churches, the Council of Social Agencies, Chevy Chase Presbyterian Church, Temple Church and other organizations, Mr. Gregory launched Temple Center in the summer of 1938. Outgrowth of a Friday night "happy hour" he conducted for community children, it provides recreational, social and educational programs in a traffic-free environment.

Discussing the future of the center yesterday, Mr. Gregory expressed the hope that it could be continued in a church building, to maintain its "spiritual centeredness."

Dr. Worth M. Tippy, temporary social welfare director of the Washington Federation of Churches, told The Post yesterday that the central area was being "restudied," with the establishment of a permanent social service program in view. He hinted that a neighborhood house was being considered.

The Temple congregation recently celebrated its ninety-eighth birthday.

Employes Asked to Collect Scrap

Coatesville, Pa., Aug. 6 (AP).—The Lukens Steel Co. asked its employes today to make a house-to-house collection of old iron and steel to offset a scrap metal shortage—a shortage which leaders in the industry say threatens production in steel mills throughout the East.

Hugh A. Kenworthy, purchasing agent for Lukens, which is making armor plate for the Navy, said production may be cut 50 per cent here within two or three weeks unless more scrap is obtained.

A letter from President R. W. Wolcott asked each Lukens worker to collect all unused scrap in his neighborhood and bring it along to the plant.

If the drive is successful, it was said, solicitors may go later to adjacent communities.
